This scourge of the human race is still devastating the fair fields of France, and destroying the people in tens of thousands. The Prussians have completely invested Paris. No less than 450,000 are said to be in the neighbourhood of that doomed city; doomed we say, unless wise counsels prevail, and the pride of the French people become humbled. For many years the military power of France was somewhat of a terror in Europe. In troublous times the nations sought her alliance, and dreaded her influence. Napoleon the third, without properly counting the costs, or making allowance for the chances of war, rushed foolishly and uncalled for, into this contest. The result our readers all know. A series of victories has left France at the mercy of the Germans—ha left their Ruler a prisoner—and now endangers their beautiful city, said to be the finest city in the world. Millions have been spent by the late Emperor in beautifying it. Of the horrors that have been enacted on French soil during the past few weeks few of us can form any adequate conception, and yet the cup is not full. Prussians say that Anarchy reigns in Paris. One party opposes the other, and if so, the end is easily predicted.

The Prussians can hardly be bent on the destruction of the capital, but yet it may take place. Titus thought to save the temple, but he could not control events.

The whole South of Europe is in a ferment. Italy, so long under the control of the papacy, is now completely Italian.—Victor Immanuel, the excommunicated heretic, has laid unholy hands on the possessions of his Holiness, and Rome is no more under the dominion of the Pope. It is said that he will be allowed to retain the Vatican and Castle, but that his power will be completely religious. He must cease to interfere in the affairs of dynasties, and the pulling down or raising up of Kings. Alas! how is the mighty fallen! Catholic papers are of course loud in the lamentations, but they must remember that the apoliation is the work of her own children. The eldest son of the Church withdrew his legions, and the next eldest dissolved the Concordat. Austria would have nothing to do in maintaining an effete system in Italy. Spain looks to republican principles to free her from the slavery of mind and body under which she groaned. And Victor Immanuel, a Catholic, has seized the eternal city, notwithstanding the last will and testament of St. Peter. The Papal Zouaves, which Canadian statesmen spent our money in training, have been put to flight; some of them have been killed, and more wounded but all could not stave off the evil hour. Pio Nono, if he can, will remain in Rome, even though in very reduced circumstances; to leave it would forever destroy his prestige and influence. But, very evidently, he is about the last Pope. The present revolution in France will produce an upheaving of society that will be felt for many years. Infidelity, the offshoot of intolerance broken up, will no doubt play an important part in the social organizations of that country. Italy, too, will run into excess; and coming out of these, there will be no controlling temporal-religious power to force men into a form of religion, and in all probability a better state of things will come out of this Anarchy. All lovers of mankind hope that the mind shall come out of it untrammeled. Turkey is also the scene of troubles. It is said the Czar of Russia, and Austria have agreed on the despoliation of this unhappy country.—Large armies are being amassed on her frontiers. Russian shipping is being increased in the Black Sea. The sick man is doomed, no doubt. France is powerless to aid her, and England may look on the general upheaving of the nations sadly, yet silently. Her position may save her from any of the scenes that are now being enacted in Southern Europe, but nothing but the wisest statesmanship can secure this. The populace there too, is in a very disturbed state, and foolish demagogues are goading the masses. Every where the power of the people is asserting its preeminence over tyranny and oppression, and the only fear is that the ignorance fostered by rulers may now be too strong to be controlled, and in consequence, foolish counsels prevail.

Ireland is quiet just now—a lull perhaps to afford time to chant the funeral dirge of infallibility, but quiet because there is no one to whom the Fenians can look for aid in the present melee. The late action of the United States Government in punishing the raiders, has done more to bring about better counsel, than the murder of an hundred half drunken follows from the back lanes of New York and Buffalo.

All men should sincerely pray that America may be saved from the fiery trials through which Europe is now passing. A Prussian success may have been necessary to secure the peace of Europe, for a season, but her success may make her haughty and dictatorial, and only induce what she hoped to avert. Strasbourg has fallen, and Metz will soon follow. The loss of these strongholds may induce the French to come to terms, and save their country from a terrible humiliation, and loss of life and property. May peace soon come.

TEMPERANCE SOIREE:—The friends of temperance on the 4th line of Smith, had their anniversary soiree on Tuesday evening, in the school house. The weather on that evening was delightful, and in consequence, a large number of the young people of both sexes, and a goodly number of the old ones were assembled. The tea and edibles were abundant, and of the best quality. Although the house was filled till it was nearly impossible to seat all, yet there was an abundant supply, and after the evening pleasures and speeches were over, a considerable quantity was disposed of by auction. The proceeds of the whole were appropriated by the members of the society towards the preaching of the gospel, in the immediate neighborhood. The Episcopal Methodists, we believe, have regular services in the school house. The evening was very pleasantly spent. Mr. James McKewen ably filled the chair, and the Messrs. Wm. Graham, A. Young, the Rev. Mr. Pomroy and others, gave addresses on the great evil they were trying to destroy, and made earnest appeals to all present to shun the tempting bowl, and to induce others to join their ranks. An excellent choir sung several very appropriate pieces during the intervals. We understand that the temperence society on the 4th line, is in a very flourishing condition, almost all the young people in the neighborhood being membess of it. Some of the fathers too are among the active workers.

Another Fire.

On Sunday morning between two and three o'clock the beautiful residence of Col. Haultain just outside of the town limits, was consumed by fire. All the servants were in the house, asleep, when the fire was first discovered they got out, but were unable even to bring their clothing with them, as by that time the South part of the house was completely enveloped, and the flames were rapidly spreading to the other parts of the house. The furniture was partly destroyed, but the best of it we understand was saved, as it wa removed to Montreal, before the fire first caught. By the energetic efforts of those present the sheds, cordwood and buggies and other articles were saved.

The fire was first discovered in the South West part of the building, on the outside, it is said, which leads to the belief that this fire is also the work of an incendiary, although some are unwilling to believe that there is any wretch in Peterboro' vile enough to commit such an act as set fire to a building at such an hour, and while there were human beings asleep in it.

The building was worth about $3,000, on which there was an insurance of $1,840 in the Provincial Assurance Company. The loss on the furniture we have not learned, on it there was also an insurance of $1,000 in the Agricultural Mutual.

It is very remarkable that the fire should take place at such an hour, and also at the time when the whole was advertized for sale on Tuesday, as the family were just on the eve of leaving Peterboro for Montreal, to take up their residence there. But it appears to be the result of carlessness. We are unwilling to believe that any person in Peterboro would set fire to it.

Smith and Monaghan Fall Show.

The Show came off yesterday at Bridgenorth.

The total number of entries was 165, and the Show was as good as in former years, except perhaps in wheat, which was poorly represented

Mr. H. Collins took saveral prizes in thorough-bred durhams, sheep and pigs.—Mr. M. Walton, George Webber and A. Mann, were very successful also in sheep. Mr. Webber took a first prize for carriage horses, for ewes, and for Berkshire hogs.

Mr. James Mann showed a fine young thorough-bred bull, and a brood sow of considerable merit.

Messrs. J. Darling, G. Scott, J. Garbutt, I. Garbutt, and W. Darling competed in mares and foals. All of these also exhibited young horses.

The draught horses were serviceable looking animals; the people of Smith and Monaghan, do not yet pride themselves in horses, for show. In Dairy produce there were but few entries, but what was shown was of the best quality. Grain was almost nothing for such a township as Smith.

J. B. McKewen had some fine early rose and other varieties of potatoes. Beets, carrots, cabbages, tomatoes and cauliflowr were exhibited, but there was no competition.

The entries of fruit were also not numerous but what was on exhibition could hardly be beaten. Jas. Fowler, Jr., J. B. Fowler and A. Mann, showed some excellent apples, both table and winter.

Ladies' work too, was poorly represented, only a few quilts and coverlets, a piece of home-made flanneland two pair of socks, represented the handy work of the ladies' of Smith and Monaghan

For more particulars we refer our readers to the annexed prize list, which we have tried to make as correct as possible.

THE EUROPEAN WAR.

A telegram from Bolongne, states that Admiral Willaumez returns to the North Sea, with the hope of making prizes and of provoking a battle with the German fleet.

The English Minister at Constantinople has despatched a messenger to foreign office in reply to urgent telegrams from Granville.

It is announced from Vienna that Austria has consented to formation of powerful Russian camp in Bersarabia, and another on the Polish frontier. It is believed that such an announcement prefigures open avowal of Austria and Russia for combined action.

It is understood that the Czar congratulated the King of Italy on the peaceful occupation of Rome.

The tone of Bismarck's circular is considered hesitancy and almost deprecatory, and it is believed that new complications of a most serious character menace the existing equilibrium of European powers; English authorities are exhibiting extraordinary activity in forwarding munitions of war to Malta and Gibraltar.

BERLIN 24th.—Toul was captured by Prussians at sunset Friday.

LONDON 24th.—A despatch from Ferrier, near Paris, dated 10 a.m., to-day, states that this morning rifle firing and cannonading was heard going on in the streets of Paris.

On 21st inst., it was distinctly observed from the heights that the conflict was in progress, but nothing could be learned in any way of detail concerning parties engaged.

Correspondents letter just received, which left Paris, on the night of the 20th, brings 8 hours later advices than previously received. It confirms rumor previously expressed of another revolution in Paris, this time in interest of extreme radical party, known as the "Reds." There is great danger of revolutionary outbreak, involving another change of Gov. Reds are furious against present leaders, and express themselves eager for place and power. They have been thoroughly organized and evince dispositions to seige hotel De Villa initial step of their programe. Resistance to their plans would be difficult.

It is impossible to say what would be the effect of their obtaining control of Government; but people dread assassination and pillage. Armistice now would save lives and property of thousands of citizens; people of more peaceful order dread the Prussians far less than desperate ruffians belonging to lower quarters.

John Young, Governor-General of Canada, has been made peer of the realm with the title of Baron Lisgar.

TOULS, 24th.—Ministry to-day makes public the following: Bismarck demands as preliminaries and conditions of peace, that all fortresses in the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine be delivered over to Prussia, as well as Fort De Mont Valleyen. At walls of Paris provisional government considers these conditions absolutely impassible, and will immediately address proclamation to the people, as well as to the ambassadors from foreign countries, exposing situation and indicating new measures to be taken for national defence, in view of harsh terms proposed. One of these measures will be indefinite postponement of election of members of constituent assembly.

The number of Prussian troops now around Paris is 450,000.

TOURS 25th—Advices Paris 23rd per "Ballion" state the city completely surrounded by the enemy, at a distance of 2 to 3 thousand yards from outlaying forts.

BERLIN, 24th—Special leader in Bismarck's organ says—every sacrifice we have made in the war after capitulation of Sedan is useless, and only increases indignation of Germany and her just demands; this ought to be considered by provisional government for the sake of France We are unable to know whether Imperial government made peace after Sedan, but we do know Germany's previous conditions of peace were different from what they are now in sight of Paris, and will be different from those before the gates.

LONDON 26.—The "Standard" says that Bismarck made a great mistake in treating the provisional government with contempt. He ought to have welcomed it as the best auxillary force for a satisfactory termination of the war. No possible government in France or abroad could sign a peace, giving so much. The permanent conquest of France is not out of the question. The occupation of France may be possible if Germany can keep up her armies. Every day that the war continues reduces the ability of France to pay the German bill.

Bismarck and the King will yet regre that they refused to deal more generously with gentlemen of the parement. It is not impossible even now that Paris may make a resistence that will compel the besiegers to retire, and the struggle may last all winter. Fortune with Prussia to-day may be with France to-morrow in forcing her power. She cannot lay claim to magnanimity. Had she insisted only on the raising of the fortresses, she would have been applauded. The refusal of France to accept the armistice is politically suicidal.

LONDON 26th.—"Times" publishes a telegram from Saarbrucken, dated 24th, which says—yesterday at Metz, Bazaine made feint on side of Mercy-la-Haunt, and attempted to escape to Thionville.—there was heavy cannonading for some hours. After a sharp fight the French were driven in again; their losses were serious. Bazaine sent back the Prussian prisoners he had taken in the engagement. Heavy force of Bavarians is penetrating the country towards Lyons. Baron Von Beust assured Theirs of his deepest sympathy with France, but was compelled to say that intervention was now impossible. It is said Theirs will offer Czar important concessions in the East, as price paid for Russia's good offices.

CINCINNATI, 22nd.—The several branches of Fenians and Irish National Brotherhood consolidated this evening into a club of united Irishmen.

NEW YORK, 22. The remains of the late L. M. Sottachald, who died in South America, arrived in this city yesterday. It is the intention of his friends and the musical artists of the city to have a grand requiem mass performed over the body at St. Stephen's Church next week.

WASHINGTON, 22. A letter from Judge Orth says there is no truth in the report that he has been tendered the English mission.

LONDON 22nd.—King William reports to Queen Agusta that the investment of Paris is now complete.

The French advance on the North East side of Paris has been repulsed with a loss of 7 guns and 1,500 prisoners.

The private Secretary of Etienne, Argo, Mayor of Paris, has been arrested as a Prussian spy.

The "Standard" of this morning says that the negotiations at Meux are proceeding hopefully, the general principles have already been arranged by Bismarck and Favre, and the details are now under discussion. Another journal reports that thus far the only question which has been discussed is who can ratify on the French side.

The bank statement to be made is expected to show an increase of specie for the past 6 days which will exceed that on any corresponding period for 2 years. Money is easy. Line of communication between London and Paris has been re-opened.

A despatch from Berlin reports that a new constituency is preparing for the security of Germany.

Herr Dalbrick is arranging formalities for proclaiming Frederick Emperor of Germany.

They will not in any way submit to the interference of neutrals. Another party oppose this wholesale dismemberment of France, but ask that sufficient guarantee shall be given against future aggressions of France.

BRUSSELS 22nd.—British diplomatic arrived en route for head quarters of King of Prussia, on an important mission connected with peace negotiations.

N. Y. 22.—Special to Telegram, from London, says our correspondent in Berlin writes that the republicans of Germany continue their agitation against annexation of Alsace and Lorraine, with an increasing determination, in all their journals, and at all their public gatherings.

The intoxication of the military circle of Germany, caused by success of Prussian arms, has led them to demand without any reflection of consequences that Alsace, Lorraine, Metz, Toul and Verdun shall be given up by French and annexed to Germany. They also demand, with equal disregard to diplomatic consequences, Prussian occupation of Luxemburg, the giving of French Flanders to Belgium, and of Savoy to Switzerland, and of Nice and Corsica to Italy.

N. Y. 22nd.—Special to "Tribune" dated Florence 21st, says that a portion of Rome called Lorine city, on the right bank of Tiber, containing Vaticar and Castle of St. Augeto, has not been occupied by Italian troops. It is doubtful if the Pope is in Rome.

N. Y. 23rd.—A special bearer of despatches for "Tribune" reached London last night, 22, having left Paris on Tuesday afternoon. Before his arrival no news since Sunday had been received from Paris in London, by either telegraph or post.

It is said that Gen. Trochu intends to call into Paris all the troops which are now outside and not embraced in scouting.

The series of struggles which inaugurates the siege of Paris, and which must now be terminated either by great victory, or withdrawal of Prussians, or by defeat, that will convert every house into a fortress. The clan of Garde Mobiles is unquestionable. Resolution of National Guarde not less firm because less boisterous. Provinces and communes are fast coming to the rescue of beleagured capital. Three communes have already subscribed $500,000, and 13 others $200,000 towards national defence.

Aspect of streets changes wonderfully from day to day, fewer people in them, more shops closed, more soldiers and fewer women out at 10 p. m., caffree vigorously closed, and by 11 boulevards are deserted. Ambulances with wounded soldiers are continously passing,—we hear grim rumors of houses and whole streets being ruined. Dread of spies has not yet died out. Yesterday morning most curious signs of the siege was a number of foreign flags flying about Paris. I went to English Embassy; there was a Union Jack flying over gateway in Fauburg, St. Houni. A great black-board was put up to inform public that this was the English Embassy. All the foreign embassies have their flags flying. Every foreign residence in Paris gets out the flag of his nation, supposed all houses covered with such flags will be respected, by both belligerents.

LONDON 23rd.—The "Times" publishes telegram from Berlin, of yesterday's date, saying that Bismarck and Farve were closeted all day Thursday, the former insisting on the meeting of the constituent assembly to ratify a treaty. Jules Favre received an indemnity for cost of war, surrender of part of fleet, dismantling of Metz and Strasburg, and possibly, their fortifications.

The Prussians are apparently preparing to move on Orleans, which has been evacuated by French.

Private coariers just from vicinity of Paris, report very severe battle that occurred yesterday at a point immediately to the south of the city. French force in heavy columns attacked Prussians posted in the woods, and former were hurled back and repulsed with great loss.—No particulars.

A battle was fought yesterday, and was of much more importance than at first led us to believe, and resulted in the complete defeat of the Germans. A column of 10,000 Prussians a lvancing from Spinoy, attacked a French force, numerically inferior but occupying a formidable position. The attack began at 6 in the morning. French forces, mainly mobiles, with a battalion of the line, had 16 mitrailleurs in position. French behaved with singular steadiness, awaiting the German attack in silence, retreating under cover of the woods, and drew the Germans on until they were brought obliquely into range of the masked battery, which then opened on them suddenly, and with tremendous effect.—Prussian column was cut in two, and the French charged their flank, drove their fragments in hurried retreat down a steep and rapid descent towards Barbetts The retreat was converted into a route,—the Germans flying in all directions. The French captured all their artillery, a battery of steel cannon, 2 regimental colors, and between 6 and 700 men, who surrendered in a body.

LONDON 26—Advices from all parts of France show people rising in arms, and concentrating upon great cities, in which government is rapidly accumulating arms. Imperfect returns from six departments show total of 250,000 volunteers enrolled since surrender of Sedan, and municipal votes of nearly hundred million francs.

OSTENDE 26th.—Advise from Strasburg Thursday, says; It is believed Ulrich has 6 weeks provisions for the whole population. No signs of surrender. It is believed that the spire of the Cathedral to be so severly shaken as to be on the eve of falling. An immense Military Hospital near the Arsenal, was set on fire by bombardment on Tuesday, and was burned to the ground.

LONDON 29th—Latest advices flatly contradict the offer of Bazaine to capitulate.

British war office yesterday issued orders for immediate calling out of the reserves of the army.

NEW YORK 27th.—World's Washington despatch says—A new and vigorous policy regarding the Alabama claims is to be inagurated by Minister Morton.

TOURS 27th.—The perfect department of the north, under date of Sept. 26, writes to minister of interior here as follows: The following news received here by carrier pigeon from Paris Sept. 23rd. The division of Gen. Mauds of yesterday, attacked the heights at Villejuit on south side of Paris, which were occupied by Prussians. After sustaining a sharp Prussian fire for some hours, our troops captured redoubts, Mouling Sague, Villejuit, and Hautes.

The same day a considerable force of French made a recognizance, and drove the enemy from the village of Drouey.

Gen. Ballamers, commander at St. Dennis, attacked the village of Perere Fitte, about a mile north of St. Dennis, which the Prussians had occupied in considerable force. The enemy was driven out of the village.

BERLIN 27.—A breach broad enough to warrant an assault has been made at Strasburg. The North German "Gazette", the official journal, says whatever may be the German plans about France, the restoration of the Bonapartes is not among them.

A special Berlin despatch says—report is current in well informed circles that the Emperor has revoked the decree which he issued on surrender of Sedan, for revocation of decree creating Regency as Emperor. He has therefore sent an envoy to Metz to consult Bazaine in regard to terms of peace. This confirms statement made by Bazaine, that he should only treat with the Emperor in reference to peace negotiations. The news of this attitude of Napoleon has been suppressed in Berlin, but enough is known to cause great anxieties in political circles, in as much as there is a strong influential party here who are opposed to the continuance of the war.

DARMSTADT 27th.—A telegram from Landwigshafen announces that Strasburg surrendered Monday, at five o'clock.

Special correspondent at Berlin says that the following circular has been addressed to North German diplomatic agents. "The French rulers having declined an armistice, and made Paris the theatre of war, and there being no recognized Government existing in Tours, I have the honor to inform you that the safety of intercourse to, and from Paris has now become wholly subordinated to military events".

(Signed) VON THILE.

WASHINGTON 28th.—It is ascertained at state department that facts in relation to alleged French blockade of New York harbor have been received, both from Government officials and from Prussian representatives. It is semi officially stated that neutrality laws would be vigorously enforced, and it was thought that no violation on part of French vessels had yet taken place.

Despatch from Epaul, 27th says—Prussians attacked Raon yesterday, but were repulsed.

MUNDEL 28th—Surrender of Strasbourg was signed at 2 o'clock this morning, by Col. Lecyuiski. By this surrender 451 officers and 17,000 men laid down their arms. At 8 o'clock the place will be occupied by besiegers.

LONDON 28th—Reports thicken that Russia is preparing for war. The army at the South has been mobilized, and late movements towards the Turkish borders are ominous.

IMPORTANT NEWSPAPER CHANGE.—The HEARTH AND HOME, a finely illustrated family journal of a high character, hitherto issued by Messrs. PETTENGILL, BATES & Co., has been purchased by Messrs. ORANGE JUDD & Co., of 245 Broadway, New York, the well-known publishers of the American Agriculturist. Messrs. S. M. PETTENGILL & Co., whose great Advertising Agency, established in 1849, is one of the largest and most reputable in the world, find that their extensive business requires their exclusive attention and they therefore transfer HEARTH AND HOME to the new Publishers, whose long experience and abundant facilities will enable them not only to maintain the past high character of the paper, but to add materially to its value. The new Publishers also announce a reduction of the terms to $3 per year. The change will not at all affect the American Agriculturist, which will continue on independently as heretofore.—The Illustrations and reading matter of the two journals will be entirely different. Either of the journals will be furnished from now to the end of 1871 (15 months), at the yearly subscription rate, viz: the Weekly HEARTH AND HOME, at $3; the Monthly AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, $1.50; or the two for $4.

The Brockville Recorder has completed its fiftieth year of successful and popular journalism, and the friends of Mr. Wylie, the able conductor and proprietor, held a jubilee on account thereof, at Farmersville. There was a grand ovation on the occasion. Although the Recorder has been, and still is, a staunch reform journal, the jubilee was non-political; members of all the parties in the Dominion meeting to do Mr. Wylie honor. Mr. Geo. Brown, however, refused, on political grounds, to meet some who were likely to be present. It would have been as well if he could have overcome his scruples and attended. But Mr. Brown must be allowed to judge for him self what is right and comely for him to do.

AUCTION SALES.—W. A. Dexter, of Cavan, being about to leave for Kansas, will sell his stock, furniture, &c., on the 15th of October.

Mr. Silas Pearson, 16th con. Smith, will have a sale on the 3rd of October.

Mr. Wm. Grant, 3rd concession of Smith, will have a sale of farm stock, implements, &c., on the 18th of October.

On the 19th of October the Morrison farm, 4th line Smith, will be sold by public auction.

PERRY DAVIS PAIN KILLER.—This favorite home remedy is too well known to require any special commendation. It has long been before the public, and probably has a wider and better reputation than any other family medicine of the present day. Messrs. Ormond and Walsh, Dr. Taylor, Ontario Drug Store, and A. W. Kenpt, are Peterboro agents for its sale. They have the Pain Killer Receipt Book for gratuitous distribution.

IN MEMORY OF P. GELLESPIE, ESQ., of Otonabee, who died August 2, 1870.

Aye first and foremost on the road,
Each sabbath day was he Found riding to the house of God,
A worshipper to be.

And seldom vacant was his place,
A sabbath through the year;
For very serious was the case,
If he did not appear.

But now upon the road we miss,
Our old church going friend;
And in she church there is one less,
'Mong those who do attend.

The allotted days for man, and more
He enjoyed on earth below,
And lived till he was eighty-four,
Ere death did strike the blow.

'Mong weeping friends he yielded up,
The soul God to him gave;
That he now lives, it is our hope,
With Christ beyond the grave.

IT IS NO WONDER that invalids lost faith in all specifics, when so many worthless medicines are advertised for the cure of [illegible] but which, when tried, are "found wanting." We have not to learn, however, of the failure of Dr Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, to cure coughs, colds, and pulmonary disease.

The Blood owes its red color to minute globules which float in that fluid, and contain, in a healthy person, a large amount of Iron, which gives vitality to the blood. The Peruvian Syrup supplies the blood with this vital element and gives strength and vigor to the whole system.

Hamilton, Ontario,

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

Poetry.

The Song of War.

Men have chanted and sung, and glibly the tongue,
Hath told of my fearful power,
And crowded my praise in poems and lays,
To hasten my battle hour;
'Tis all very well to clog and to toil,
By the light of their logic fires,
But a different tale is the anguish and wail,
Where the wretch in my red arms expires.

'Tis true I may seem a glorious theme
In their homestead far away,
With my legions so bold in scarlet and gold
All drawn up in battle array;
But little they know of the horror and woe,
Were my famous blot out the sun,
Of the pelting blade and the havoc made,
Of the widow and fatherless sun.

Oh! the earth I shake, and the nations quake
When my banner I raise on high,
When I seize the brand with blood-red hand,
Pale mercy flies shrieking by;
With sulphurous breath I send forth death,
And nature shrinketh aghast,
Fear, rapine, and rack I bring in my track,
Hell triumphs to hear my blast.

Oh! I love to see, with fiend-like glee,
My ruthorless victims bound
With fierce despair from their blood-stained hair,
And hurl destruction round!
From my crimson ear I shout Ha! Ha!
This, is the sport for me!
And laugh at the yell of their last farewell,
As they sink in their agony.

With empty fame and glory's name;
I lure them to their fate,
I dazzle their eyes with the glittering prize,
And they grasp at the gilded bait;
With trumpet and fife they meet the strife,
So I urge their wild career.
But the shriek and the groan, and the dying moan,
Is the music I love to hear.

Then pause and think ere ye break the link
That keeps me fettered down,
Ere ye spread with dearth the smiling earth
Before my terrible frown;
When I rise in my might I wither and blight.
All horrors in me combine,
And never, I ween, was heard or seen,
So fearful a curse as mine.

A Cheap Hot Bed.

Take three ordinary soap or candle boxes, about 18 inches long by 10 to 12 wide. Knock out the bottoms of the boxes, removing the nails so that they will fit closely one on top of another. Dig a hole deep enough to bring the upper edge of the top box on a level with the surface of the earth, place the boxes therein and tramp the earth gently around them. A sunny situation in the yard or garden should be selected. When the boxes are ready fill the first with fresh stable manure and in the second place 3 or 4 inches earth, allowing space enough between the earth and the top of the box, to set in a pot or basin, and leave several inches above it; pour in a bucket or two of water and set on a piece of glass, which should be just the size of the top of the box. Let the mixture ferment two or three days, then fill flower pots with well washed yellow or silver sand (latter bet best) and put in the slips. Whitewash or smear with whitening, and water the under side of the glass; set in pots and cover tight. The sand must be kept damp or the slips will be apt to die. It is well to set out several slips of a kind in order to in insure success with some of them.

Gathering Fruit.—A great deal of damage is done to fruit trees every year, at the time of gathering fruit. Large branches are barked, small ones are broken and in the violent shaking of the trees, fruit spurs are broken off. Selling fruit on the trees generally results in great injury to the orchard; for the buyer, in most cases, does not care how much damage is done to the trees, and his object is to gather the fruit in the most expeditious way. There is generally more damage done in gathering unripe fruit than in taking off that which is fully matured, for the adherence so firmly to the spurs that some force is required to remove it. When orchards have been properly cultivated and manured and the trees judiciously pruned; a good quality of fruit is generally the result, of the best varieties are grown. The greatest care should be taken not to damage the trees when harvesting the fruit.—The eye of the owner will be useful while this operation is performed.

Harden the Necks of your Teams.—Some horses have very tender skin, and the harness will sometimes gall them cruelly, in defiance of all means to prevent it. But many times, the true cause is attributable to a bad collar, bad harness, improperly fied to the animal. A yoke of bows that do not fit the necks of oxen will often gall them, and unfit them for labor, when, if these things were as they ought to be, would work with far more ease, and their skins would not be galled. When a harness or yoke of bows do not fit properly and their skins is liable to be galled, bathe those those parts before they are galled with cold water, until the outside skin appears quiet soft, and then bathe those parts with a strong decoction of white oak bark. Let this be done every day and the skin will soon become much harder and and tougher than it unusually is. A little care in preventing an ill, is far better than much labor and skill in curing it, or endeavoring to obviate its injurious effects.

The son of a rich old miser in the Ninth ward was drafted the other day, and applied to his father for the $300 necessary to pay his way to staying at home. But the old man, having a deal of patriotism, and a second wife, young and pretty, and not over friendly to the first wife's children, denied the application in a note which stated, among other things, that—

"This is a great epoch, not only in the history of the country but of the world, and every true man should be ready to play his part in the grand drama. For my part," continued the affectionate patriot, "I am so desirous of having my family name honorably connected with the great event which are transpiring in this crisis, that I could not for a moment think of furnishing you the means to evade the honorable destiny to which fortune has called you. My mind is made up—unalterably made up; and sooner than fail in duty to my country in this her hour of need, I would be willing to have the blood of all my relatives, however near and dear they may be to me, shed in her defence."

The elder brother of the King of Denmark, and chief of the ducal family from which his Majesty derives his descent, has joined the Prussian army.

A Massachusetts farmer says he can winter his cows on steamed food for one-third less expense than on dry feed, and get one-fourth more milk. This results from five years experience.

A Chicago man sued another for $5,000 damage for trespass. The trespass consists in "pulling divers large quantities of hair from the plaintiff's head."

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is more certain and far more effectual than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; to see who have not, know that it cures their neighbors, all they see, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and

Select Poetry.

The Two Armies.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

As life's unending column pours,
Two marshaled hosts are seen
Two armies on the trampled shore
That death flows black between.

One marches to the drum beat's roll,
And wide-mouthed clarions play,
And bears upon a crimson scroll;
Our glory is to slay.

One moves in glory by the stream,
With sad yet watchful eyes;
Calm as the patient planet's gleam,
That walks the clouded skies.

Along the front on sabres shine,
No blood-red pennons wave;
Its banner bears the single line;
"Our duty is to save."

For these, no death-bed's lingering shade;
At honor's trumpet call,
With knitted brow and lifted blade,
In glory's arms they fall.

For these no clashing falchions bright,
No stirring battle-cry;
The bloodless stabber calls by night,—
Each answers, "Here am I."

For these the sculptured laureled bust,
The builder's marble piles;
The anthems pealing o'er their dust,
Through long cathedral aisles.

For these the blossom-sprinkled turf;
That floods the lonely graves
When spring rolls in her sea-green surf,
In flowery, foaming waves.

Two paths lead upward from below;
And angels wait above,
Who count each burning life-drop's flow,
Each falling tear of love.

Through from the hero's bleeding breast
Her pulses freedom drew,
Though the white lillies in her crest
Sprang from the scarlet drew,

While valor's haughty champions wait
Till all their scars are shown.
Love walks unchallenged through the gate,
To sit beside the throne.

The Mock Marriage.

BY HARRY HAZELTON

"That girl is an impudent thing," exclaimed Miss Flora Myers, as she left the poor residence of Mrs. Knight, her dressmaker.

The speaker was in company with a young man named Arthur Moreland, to whom she was engaged to be married, and two young lady friends. They had been to the dressmaker's to see about the wedding-garments of Flora.

"To whom do you refer?" asked Moreland.

"To the daughter of Mrs. Knight. Did you not observe her?"

"Not particularly so. Was there anything so very strange about her?"

"Why, did nothing but stare at you all the time, Arthur. You could not help observing it."

"I did not give her sufficient attention to discover the fact."

"Well she tried hard enough to attract your attention. I should not be surprised if the impudent thing really fancied that she could make some impression on you, with her great blue eyes and pale face."

"I think you must be mistaken Flora. I have always heard that Mrs. Knight was a very worthy woman, and that her daughter Mary was respected, and even beloved, by every body who knows her."

"I tell you she is a presuming hussy who don't know her place. Why, she even rejected an offer of marriage from Tom Blaisdell, a man so far above her in social position."

"I do not blame for that; I should be very sorry to believe that Tom Blaisdell would ever marry one of my sisters."

"Oh, that would be a different thing of course, you are so far above Tom; but she should have felt herself highly flattered by the compliment paid her."

"She might have felt flattered by the preference, and still declined the alliance."

"And they say she also refused Moses Tyler. Now, certainly, no one could find any objection to Moses, so far as his character is concerned. True, he is a little old; but Mary Knight should have been rejoiced at such an opportunity of bettering her condition."

"Perhaps she could not love the man."

"I don't think that love has anything to do with the matter. The fact is, Mary knows that she is pretty. She looks higher; and from what I saw when I was in her hovel, I should not be one bit surprised if she was not playing for the heart and estates of the rich Arthur Moreland."

"Nonsense! You are not serious, Flora!"

"I never was more serious in my life."

"Why, Flora, she knows very well that you and I are to be married. She knows that the very dress her mother is now engaged upon is your bridal robe."

"But she knows very well that you and I are to be married yet; and she will act upon the old adage that 'There is many a slip between the cup and the lip.' Indeed, but I should like to humble the conceited thing; and I will, too, before I am many day's older."

"I do not think you have any reason to do so."

"I know I have. And I have just thought of a capital way of doing it. You will join me in a little plot, won't you?"

"I confess I don't like plotting much."

"Oh, well, you must join me!"

"Let me know what your plans are then, if I must join you."

"I won't to-night, for they are only half-matured in my own mind. To-morrow will be time enough."

The subject was now dropped, but it was not dismissed from the mind of Flora: and during the evening she made confidantes of her two lady friends, who appeared delighted with the originality of her plans to humble the proud pauper who had dared to look upon Arthur Moreland with longing eyes.

The next day, Miss Flora, in company with her two lady friends, called at the residence of Mrs. Knight. They found both mother and daughter busily engaged upon the dress.

A pang of jealously shot through the heart of Flora as she gazed upon the young girl, for Mary Knight was a lovely creature; but she overcame this feeling with pride and hatred, and assuming a serious manner said:

"Mrs. Knight, I have something to say which nearly concerns yourself and your daughter the pretty Mary. I beg that you will listen with patience, and that you will appreciate the motive which prompts me to speak."

"I beg, Miss Myers, that you will speak freely."

"You are aware that for a long time I have been engaged in marriage to Arthur Moreland?"

"I have heard that such was the case."

"You also know that this was to be my wedding dress?"

"I only supposed so, Miss Myers."

"Such is the fact. You may be surprised, however, when I tell you, that I never loved Mr. Moreland, and that I shall now be very glad to break of my engagement with him."

"But what has this to do with us?"

"Much. I have learned of late, that Mr. Moreland's heart was not mine. Indeed, he is so madly in love for another, that his health has been rapidly failing of late, and his friends have fears for his reason. It would be dreadful if the man should become insane."

"It would, indeed."

"Still, he would not break with me, and even kept his love a secret. But I learned it from his sisters; and I felt, at once, that I had a duty to perform."

"And that duty?"

"Was to go myself to the woman with whom Mr. Moreland is in love, make a plain statement of the case, and beg her, if she can only love him, to make him happy at once, by becoming his wife."

"And who is this lady, Miss Myers?"

"It is your daughter, Mary!"

Both mother and child sprang to their feet in an instant, with a look of utter astonishment overspread their faces. Soon that of Mrs. Knight became flushed, while Mary's became paler than ever.

After a moment of silence the mother asked,—

"Are you speaking seriously, Miss Myers?"

"I am. Surely your daughter can love Mr. Moreland. If so, I beg that you will permit me to manage the affair, and then everybody will know that I gave him up willingly."

"In so important an arrangement Mr. Moreland himself, it appears to me, should have the first voice in the matter."

"Mr. Moreland will never speak upon the subject to you, for fear of wounding my feelings. If I should go to him and tell him that I wished to break our engagement, he would think I did so out of pity for him, and that I was sacrificing myself to secure his happiness; and he would not credit my words, no matter how strong might be my assurance that such was not the case. He would refuse to accept what he would deem my generosity. So I have but one alternative."

"If I should bring him here, place the hand of Mary in his own, and stand by with a smile upon my face while the minister pronounced them one, then he would be convinced that the sacrifice on my part was not great, and he would never reproach himself with having slighted my love."

"And would not this act really bring you unhappiness?"

"On the contrary, it would make me really happy?"

"Well, I will be frank with you, Miss Myers my child has long loved Mr. Moreland. She has long struggled with her feelings; for never a moment did she dream of such a thing as you have suggested. But if I may venture to speak for her—and,—as her mother, I feel that I can do so—I should say that a union with Mr. Moreland would bring her the greatest earthly happiness."

"Will you not speak upon this subject, Mary?" asked Miss Myers.

"I confess that I am surprised at what you have said; but I suppose I must think you speak seriously, and with a certain knowledge with regard to the sentiments Mr. Moreland entertains towards myself," replied Mary.

"I certainly do."

"Then it would not be in keeping with good judgement, or with the dictates of my own heart, to refuse to bestow happiness upon one I love, especially, when by doing so, it will secure my own."

"Then you will consent to become his wife?"

"Yes, I will."

"Oh! you make me so happy," cried Miss Myers, while at the same time a kind of malicious smile passed over her face. But she stepped forward. Threw her arms around poor Mary, and kissed her in a sisterly manner. Then she continued,—

"You are making a dress which was intended as my bridal costume. I must beg that you will gratify me by accepting it as a present; and that you will wear it on the occasion of your marriage, which must take place at once."

"Oh, you are so kind, dear lady," replied Mary, tears starting to her eyes.

"Oh, not so much as you deserve. But we must bid you good-by, now. You will see us again this evening and Mr. Moreland will accompany us."

Miss Flora Myers, the rich belle, left the residence of poor Mrs. Knight and her innocent daughter. As she reached the street, she burst into a mocking laugh and said to her companions,—

"I think I acted my part well. O! but I will punish that presuming pauper. Arthur shall go with us to-night. One of the most dissolute young men in the place shall be disguised, and shall perform the ceremony. Then she shall learn that the marriage was only a mock one; and taking her supposed husband by the arm, I will walk him off in triumph, thus leaving the expectant bride to shame and tears.

"Will Mr. Moreland consent to such an agreement?"

"He must— he shall—or loose me forever!" exclaimed the proud beauty, her eyes glistening in her anger.

The Warder says that John Callaghan who was sinking a well in the north of Emily, narrowly escaped suffocation. He went into the well after a blast, those above found he was not filling the bucket and one went down to see what was the matter, and found him nearly dead. Callaghan was restored to consciouaness with difficulty.

The present siege by the Prussians is said to be the eighth siege of that city in the following order: B. C. 52., about 9 centuries, after by the Mormans, in 1411, during a civil war, in 1429 by the English; in the reign of Louis XI, during a second civil war in the 16th century, and by Henry of Navarre in 1858, in 1814 during the reign of Napoleon the 1st, and now, in 1870.

Dr. Schultz, on his return to Winnipeg, found Spence, the conductor of the "New Nation" in bed, and gave him a sound hiding. Certainly this looks like a high handed measure. May it not be that the Dr. has not been the right man in the commencement of the Red River difficulties, and that the people of that country dreaded that all Canadians might be haughty like him.

It is rumored that the Local Legislature of Ontario will meet early in November this year. This is the last session of the first parliament of Ontario. Should not something be done immediately to ensure a proper representation for this County, in the next Parliament. It is admitted by almost all, that at present we have not the right men. Let a move be made at once to secure good men, and to ensure their return.

The Committee of the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the following donations for September. Mrs. Ferguson, basket of tomatoes; Mrs. John Reid, basket of tomatoes; Col. Haultain, bag of potatoes, three loads of boards, and five cords of hardwood; Mrs. Wallis, bag of potatoes; Mrs. Brodie, Auburns Mill, bag of apples; Miss Hilton, house plants; Mr. White, a quarter of Lamb; Fredk. Fisher, 8 lbs. pork.

The Reformers of East Durham held a meeting in the Town Hall, Port Hope, on Wednesday last, for the purpose of forming a Reform Association for the Riding. Mr. L. Ross was chosen President, D. Cleghorn Secretary, R. Bedford Treasurer, and Mr. Jos. Harris Vice-President, and a committee was appointed to draft a constitution and By-laws. The Reformers of West Durham have also an association. Should not the Reformers of Peterboro' be preparing for the next election contest?

The papers are echoing the cry that there being no water in Peterborough, the firemen are forced to stand and look on while property is being consumed. Who is getting up the cry? There is as much water now as has been for years. The fact is the present engine cannot take water but from favorable places. At the fire of Col. Haultain's dwelling, a hook and ladder company was more needed than anything else. The flames had got too much headway to be extinguished by any amount of water. All that could be done was to try and save the out buildings, which was fortunately effected.

THE WAR.

The only important information on the war will be found in our telegraphic reports. The Prussians have closely invested Paris, and seem to be pushing on the war with vigor. Russia has not yet declared her intentions in arming. Italy is quiet. Rome only is disturbed, but not much, the people are quite prepared for dropping Pio Nono. England it is said will offer her services as mediator, as soon as an appointment presents itself.

The Haliburton Railway.

The town Council has passed a by-law through two readings, granting a bonus of $40,000 to the above Railway. And the vote of the ratepayers will be taken on it on the 27th of this month. The ratepayers will no doubt fully endorse the action of the Council, and thus do what they can to ensure the extension of railway communication northward. We are not sure what action the back townships will take in the matter, but if they neglect the present opportunity to ensure railway communication they may rest satisfied that such a chance will not occur for a long time to come. A united effort is sure to be successful. Some of the people may deceive themselves with the idea that they will have a railroad by way of Bobcaygeon, provided this scheme falls through, but deceived they will be. The Midland Railway Company will never bbiild a road to Bobcaygeon, and the chances of any other company doing it are slender indeed.

We wish the town of Bobcaygeon prosperity, as prospering it is, but we feel certain that their hopes of a railroad passing through the place are not soon to be realized, and the people north of that place would do well not to be led astray by false hopes. The township Councils north of the lakes should pass by-laws at once, and be as liberal as possible in the way of bonuses, by this means the Haliburton Railway will be made sure; any apathy on their part may defeat the whole scheme.

Suppose, however, that the road should not be secured to Haliburton, this town should secure a railroad to the back lakes, and to this end vote the $40,000. With a road to the lakes Peterboro could secure a large part of the trade now going by other routes.

NEW POSTAT ARRANGEMENTS.—Through the exertions of Mr. Chas. Perry, there are now two mails from Peterboro. One by the morning train at 5.20, and one by the evening train. Letters placed in the office up to 7 o'clock p. m., will be dispatched by the morning train.

CRUEL.—The Review of last week mentions this fact, but gives Mr. Perry no honor for his securing these arrangements. Any bungling of the Local Members is sounded from Dan to Beersheba. But Mr. Perry, what can he do? How is this? Does the Review wish to kill (politically) Mr. Perry before the next election? we have no great love for M. Perry as a politician, and would like to get a better man in his place, but still we can afford to give honor where honor is due. But why this cold shoulder to Mr. Perry? We have good authority for stating that Mr P's friends have in circulation a requisition to him, asking him to allow himself to be put in nomination for the Local House at next election! Mr. Perry, to resign his seat in the house of commons, we suppose to make way for another partizan. Can this account for the Review's coldness to the Member for the Commons? perhaps so.—But that requisition, what does it mean? Cast off the Local man for the West? Is there trouble in the camp? Are the Combination dissatisfied with their man for the West Riding, and seeking to lay him out in the cold!

We do trust that these items are not libellous. At any rate we did not manufacture them; they are the current talk of the Town.

At a recent meeting of ministers of the Presbyterian Church of the Dominion, a basis of Union was agreed upon. The church to be called "The Presbyterian Church of British North America." The following is the report of Committee adopted.

1st. That the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments being the infallible word of God are the supreme standard of faith and manners.

2nd. That the Westminster Confession of Faith shall be the subordinate standard of this Church, it being understood 1st, That full liberty of opinion in regard to the power and duty of the civil magistrate in matters of religion, as set forth in said confession, be allowed, and 2nd, That the use of the shorter catechism be enjoined as an authoritative exposition of doctrine for the instruction of the people.

3rd. That the Church shall maintain fraternal relations with Presbyterian Churches holding the same doctrine, and government and discipline; and that ministers and probationers shall be received into the Church, subject to such regulations as the Church may from time to time adopt.

These articles are to be submitted to all the Churches, and synods.

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION.—The attention of the public has been called over and over again this last season, to a wonderful kind of grain, under the name of Norway oats, drawing from the pockets of the purchasers such an enormous price that they would need to have been something superior. A thought struck me that they might be the same kind of black oats I brought from Scotland in the year 1857, from Mr. Glimour, Renforewshire, I have examined the grain and can find no difference in the grain. I have watched it in its growth up to maturity, there is no difference in the straw, in the ear, nor in the grain, and if there is any difference in regard to increase I think it will be on the side of our Otonabee Norway oats I brought from Scotland.

Sept. 27, 1870. DAVID FIFE, Otonabee.

DUMMER.—There will be a grand Agricultural entertainment in Warsaw, on the 25th of October. All the M. P's and M. P. P's of the county, and several other speakers have been invited, and are expected to be present. The Dummeronians have erected a new building for agricultural exhibitions, and this will be the inaugeration thereof.

The West Riding will have a ploughing match this year; the time has not yet been announced.

West Riding Show.

The Fall Show of the West Riding came off on Friday and Saturday. The weather on Friday was very unfavorable, which, no doubt, prevented many from bringing out articles for exhibition.

There were, however, about 500 entries.

The show was far from what we expected to see, either in the Agricultural, or Mechanical department. The latter being almost neglected.

Messrs. Edwards, Gilmour, A. Mann, and Jas. Wallis, made a fine show in apples. Mr. Edward's having no less than 45 varieties. Mr. Gilmour, besides apples, had 9 or 10 varieties of pears.

The Roots shown were excellent, potatoes, carrots turnips, and beets, equalled anything shown in the county, heretofore. Mr. Geo. Fitzgerald, was very successful in this line.

Mr. Edward's showed some very fine yellow corn, and corn meal of this year's grouth; potatoes, pumpkins, and other articles. There were only two entries of corn.

In Home Manufactures there were few entries, some striped flannel and a pair of blankets being the only entries of note; in mits and stockings there were few entries.

Their were several entries of patch-work quilts, and some of considerable merit, but even in this line the competition was not as strong as it should be.

The Fine Art Department was also neglected, the entries were few indeed. Mr. Sproule was the only exhibitor in photographs, but those, both colored and plain, were much praised and admired.

In Dairy Produce there was little competition, only three firkins of butter, and three lots of table butter.

Messrs. Mann, Garbutt, Walton and Manning, showed some excellent cheeses. The Judges must have had some difficulties in awarding the prizes.

Wheat, Barley, Peas and Oats were shown, but only two or three entries of each. The farmers present say the fine weather has prevented them thrashing, and the consequence is there were few entries of grain.

MECHANICAL.

Messrs. White & McCullagh showed a lot of shoemaker's work, made in their shop, that could not easily be surpassed.

Mr. Jas. Whyte showed some handsome ploughs; he was the only exhibitor in this line.

Messrs. Lockhart & Millar had a very fine harrow on exhibition, and a very neat buggy, and a substantial waggon. The buggy was fitted up with a new Patent attaching machine for the shafts.

Messrs. Douglass & Logan were the only exhibitor of covered buggies. They also showed single and double open buggies, and waggons.

Mr. W. H. Mitchel showed a substantial set of farm harness, and a fancy set of buggy harness, of superior workmanship.

Mr. T. Donnelly showed a fine assortment of Sewing Machines, of the best make and quality. Mr. Donnelly is giving great attention to this branch of business, and is prepared to supply the very best machines; and the fact that there is always a lady to give instruction to purchasers, and that the machines can be repaired without the trouble of sending them to the manufacturers, should induce the purchasers to deal at Home. Intending purchasers should visit the Sewing Machine Depot over Mr. T. Donnelly's Saddlery, and judge for themselves.

Mr. Lundy showed some L..ther, very neatly finished; he had it all his own way.

The Show was not what such a wealthy and fruitful county would warrant us to expect.

The Mechanical department should be large enough to fill the Shed, and the Ladies' department might be made so attractive as to ensure a large revenue, from visitors alone.

The horse show was very good, indeed. All the heavy horses were fine looking animals, and the carriage horses were superior. Mr. R. A. Morrow's horses could not easily be beaten, and Mr. G.. Webber's are also fine servicible animals.

We cannot offord space to enumerate all, and will therefore refer our readers to the annexed complete list of prizes awarded.

THE EUROPEAN WAR.

(Special to the Examiner.)

A special received at Brussels, from Berlin, states that Alsace and Lorraine are to be treated as German federal provinces, under immediate administration of federal authorities, and to be represented in German parliament by commission. Also that no military service will be required of the inhabitants, and added that publication of these ideas has excited a storm of indignation from Radicals, which has led to several arrests.

A despatch from Munich states that Chancellor Belbuck has so far failed to conclude treaty for effecting closer union between Bavaria and North Germany.

Reports also from Stuttgart of very serious manifestations there against policy of annexation.

LONDON, 29th.—The government has information from its agents on the Baltic, that the military preparations which Russia has been making so openly, and with such extraordinary energy, are directed not against Turkey, but against Germany. This information is confirmed by private despatches.

The following Russian troops are said to have been concentrating on Prussian frontier during past three weeks:—Two divisions of the infantry of the guard, three divisions of the grenadiers of the guard, thirteen divisions of the cavalry of the line, two parks of engineers and twelve parks of artillery. It is also announced that a force of 150,000 cossacks, the most terrible light troops of the world, has been called under arms, and that the squadron of the Baltic is ready for active service. These statements are made in government circles, and they are accompanied with still more alarming intimation, that the Russian minister at the court of Berlin has been instructed by Prince Gertshakoff to present a formal demand to Prussia for full and categorical explanations of her purposes and poliey in pursuing the war with Grance.

LONDON 29—It is understood that Alsace and Loraine, upon entering the German confederation, will be represented by commission, and exempted for the present from all federal burdens.

The "Telegraph" has a balloon special from Tours representing the Prussians as retiring on Paris.

Last Tuesday the French made another sortie from Metz. They advanced to Aslequex, where Prussians were encamped. A battle took place, which resulted in defeat of the French, though they carried off their wounded, dead, and all the Prussian prisoners they had captured.

Seige guns which have lately been in position before Strasburg are being hurried forward to Paris. Prussian cavalry has also gone forward. Prussian headquarters around Paris are as follows;—King William at Ferriers, Crown Prince at Versailles, and Saxony at Grand Trembles.

The "Independence Belge", referring to Bismarck's contradiction of Favre's statements, says Favre must be met by statements which are signed by somebody more truthful than Bismarck.

TOURS 29.—Report having reached here of capture of Strasburg, government publishes despatch from French Consul at Basle, contradicting it. The Consul says the Prussians made a tremendous but unsuccessful assaults on Strasbourg on which they suffered heavy losses. A white flag was subsequently displayed as a truce to bury the dead; which gave rise to the rumor that the city had capitulated. Communication however is cut on all directions, and the fall of Strasbourg is by no means impossible.

N. Y. 29.—Special despatch says exciting rumors coming from Amiens have spread over the city, to effect that quarries of Mont Valecan, on the west of Paris, have been mined and blown up, annihilating over 100,000 Prussians. Truth of these reports unverified, as origin of rumors cannot be definitely fixed. However they have created great excitement here.

A despatch has been received from Lord Lyons, beseeching England to interfere and compel a peace before all Europe is set in flames.

LONDON 30.—Wonkds special at Bolongne telegraphs that exciting news has been received from Rouen, of a crowning victory over Germans forces on south and west of Paris, by army of Gen'a. Ducrot and Mandent on the 27th. Early Tuesday morning the battle began at Virofloy and Velisy, the Germans contesting the French advance with desperate energy, until they were assulted by fresh columns. A number of regiments of Baden troops mutined on battle field, and refused to go under fire. Nearly 100 of these troops were shot by order of German Commander, but the rest still held back, and many of them throwing down their arms dispersed thro' forests. Crown Prince was compelled to order retreat upon Bougival, abandoning Versailles to victorious French. Night alone stopped the pursuit. Germans lost 5,000 prisoners, among whom are many officers of the Crown Prince, and 50 cannon and Mitralleurs.

LONDON 30th.—Private letters from Tours 29th, says; discouragement in official circles is as great as among people at news that generals have declined to defeat Orleans. Cremarx is packing up and advises his friends to do the same, he says there is no means for resisting attack on Tours. Prussians are expected at Tours in a few days, and Government must move further west.

STRASBOURG 29th.—On Tuesday at 4 p. m. joyful sight of white flag was beheld flying from Cathedral, this was speedly followed by same welcome token of surrender from Citadal. Firing instantly ceased.

Commanders of the two forces met for the first time yesterday. After terms of capitulation had been arranged, a meeting took place just inside the gate, on the east side. Gen. Ulrich advanced to Gen. Werder, and with a voice most agitated said—"I have yielded to an irresistible force, when further resistance was only a needless sacrifice of lives of brave men. I have the consolation of knowing I have yielded to an honorable eneny."

Gen. Werder, much affected, placed both hands on Gen. Ulrich's shoulders, and said—"you fought bravely, you will have as much honor from the enemy as you can have from your own countrymen."

LONDON 1st.—The French have a report that on Wednesday a bridge spanning the Oise, at Creil, gave way under the weight of Prussian cannons which were crossing, whereby several of them were precipitated into the river. There was some loss of life.

Fourichon has not resigned his place in the French provisional government, as reported; election for members of constituent assembly in France will occur on October 10th.

The reports of fighting before Paris on Wednesday and Thursday are false.

N. Y. 1st.—A special, dated London, to-day, says Gen. Bourbake has escaped from Metz. He left the fortress and city in the garb of a peasant and got safely through German lines. He arrived in England yesterday, and immediately took train for Hastings, on a visit to the Empress. It is believed the General is bearer of despatches from Bazaine, and it is certain that the Gen. will, now that he is outside of the fortress, have those notions dispelled as to the present existence of the empire.

N. Y. 4th.—"Tribune" correspondent telegraphs from Berlin on 3rd: In a circular from Bismarck describing Favre's interview with him, peace and territorial cessions were only mentioned incidentally.

At the formation of a new Moselle department designated as an organization answering the intention of a German government, an Armistice was the main point considered, a final programme submitted as follows, which the national government rejected:

That in and about Metz there was to be a continuation of hostilities, but they were to be limited to a circle around Metz, to be more definitely determined.

Surrender of Strasbourg garrison as prisoners, the Toul and Bitsche garrison to be set free, and the duration of the Armstice to be 2 or 3 weeks.

"Tribune" special before Metz telegraphs on 3rd—Prussian battery at Longuiel, in front of St. Germans, destroyed with shells the French bridge across the Moselle, and shells were fired into the village of Moult-les-Metz. Last night the Prussians made a dash into the village of Nouilly, in front of French position, and wholly consumed it; it contained secret stores for the garrison, the locality of which the villagers refused to disclose, so the Prussians burned the village and stores together.

LONDON 4th.—At the Cabinet Council held yesterday, it was decided that as the Chinese government had refused to make reparation for massacres of Lientesin as demanded of it by French representatives, and as Chinese government is obviously making preparations for general war upon foreigners, England must join with France in insisting reparation for these outrages. It is believed Russia will act with Western powers in this matter.

COPENHAGEN 4th.—King Christian opened Parliament yesterday, in his own speech he said the mighty events now shaking Europe had reached the Danish coast.—Denmark maintained her neutrality, but it was impossible to predict the results of the future. He hoped the Schelswig Holsten question would be decided in such a manner, so that Denmark's independence and good relations with the mighty Southern nation may be secured.

LONDON 4th.—Some London papers publish letters purporting to have come by Balloon from their aris correspondent.—These are all bogus. The letters received are all open and of a private character.—They studiously avert allusion to the condition of Paris and affairs there. This is necessary, in consequence of strict prohibition upon transmission of news of any character. Concise information received by word of mouth confirms rumors of internal disturbances. On several nights the mob broke into deserted houses, which they pillaged and destroyed. On two occasions collisions occurred, and there were several instances of insubordination among national guards. Severe measures were adopted by Trochu. There is a feeling of apprehension of the renewal of mob outrages.

N. Y. 4th.—Steamship "Ville de Paris" for Brest, took on board yesterday, 25,000 arms, over 4,000,000 cartridges, about 5,000,000 percussion caps, and 500 cases of bayonets.

A special at Ostend telegraphs that there is great irritation in Berlin on account of what the Prussians regard as violation of neutrality by the United States, in permitting shipment of munitions of war from New York to French ports. It is stated that Prussia has demanded an explanation from the American Minister.

ROCHESTER 4th.—$8,000 in a satchel belonging to American Merchants Union Express Company, was stolen at 9 o'clock last night, from New York Central Depot.

LONDON 5th.—The Telegraph this morning has a number of despatches relating to rumored death of Gen. Von Moltke. Its comment expresses the opinion that the lead coffin which passed through Chalons and Toul, contained the remains of the great Prussian General.

OSTEND 5th.—Frankfort "Gazette" publishes a series of articles by Herroarl Vogt, great German Naturalist, against annexation of Alsace and Lorraine. Herr Vogt protests even against annexation of such places as Metz and Strasbourg.

Belgian papers are filled with accounts of an attack made on scattered German outposts by peasantry. In St. Dinines, a detatchment of German troops were fired on, and many killed and wounded. Strong forces were sent to levy a fine of 800,000 francs for the offence, but the Mayor invited the officer commanding to burn the town, saying that he neither dared nor would execute any such order.

PARIS 4th.—It is believed in this city, that the army of Paris alone will at no distant date be more than able to assume offensive with success against the invading force now occupying lines before Paris. It consists of 7th army corps numbering 25,000 men, besides cavalry which will probably bring total up to 330,000 or 340,000. German works at Billencourt have been shelled by French gunboats on the Seine, which were only driven off after considerable slaughter of German troops. There is a great deal of sickness in German encampments.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

A horse dealer residing in the vicinity of Keyport, N. J., and who buys up horses for the New York market, purchases "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy" by the dozen and feeds it to his horses; he says it is superior to anything that he has ever used as a condition medicine, that the horses are so much improved by its use as to sell more readily and command higher prices. Two horse dealers one residing at Huntingdon, the other at Glen Cove, L. I., also purchase it by the dozen and for the same purpose; these men, as well as many others similarly engaged, know to well the value and importance of this medicine ever to be without it. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED
LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 800 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine

And whereas to carry into effect the said recited object, it will be necessary for the said Municipal Council to raise by way of loan the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars in the manner hereinafter mentioned:

And whereas it will require the sum of $600 to be raised annually by special rate, for the payment of said debt or loan and interest, as also hereinafter mentioned:

3. That said Debentures shall be made payable in 20 years, at furthest, from the day hereinafter mentioned for this By-law to take effect at the office of the Treasurer of the said Municipality, and shall have attached to them coupons, for the payment of interest.

4. That the said Debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per centum per annum from the date thereof, which interest shall be payable half-yearly, on the Twenty-First Day of June and the Twenty-first Day of December, in each year, at the Office of the Treasurer of the said Municipality.

5. That for the purpose of forming a Sinking Fund for the payment of the said Debentures, and the interest at the rate aforesaid, to become due thereon, an equal special rate of nine twenty-fifths of a mill in the dollar, shall, in addition to all other rates be raised, levied and collected in each year upon all the ratable property in the said Municipality, during the continuance of the said Debentures, or any of them.

Poetry.

The Unclouded River.

BY WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE.

Soft, yet earnest, mighty River,
Are thy crystal gratulations
Mid those banks of emerald singing,
Ever singing day and night—
O'er the tomb of Winter rolling
Soft, entrancing, liquid measures,
Swelling, lapsing, swelling, lapsing,
Lapsing with excess of gladness,
For the pomp of Spring and Light!

O what joy in thy broad beams,
Now the wreck of tempest vanished,
Now the long, loud, insolent menace
Of the Winter-Demon gone!
O what joy that thou'rt a mirror
For the green tree, rainbow, planet,
All the pomp of Heaven unclouded
Fr'm late her last cat eounce
Of the night and of the dawn!

For thy own sake, mighty River,
All the deeper-eyed men worth thee,
Love thee for that boundless beauty
Of thy jubilant sheen and tune—
But there is a grander reason
For our great love, O thou River—
'Tis that thou art given a symbol
For Humanity's departed Winter,
For its own unclouded noon!

The Monkey.

BY JOSH BILLINGS.

The monkey is a human bein, a little undersized, kivered with hair, hitched to a tail, filled with the devil.

Naturalists wil tell you, if you ask them that i am mistaken, that i mean will enuff, and don't mean tew deceive enybody, but the monkey is not a human being, he is simply a pun on humanity, a kind ov malishus joke of Jupiter's, a libel, with a long tail to it, a misterius mixtur of ludikrus mischief and stale humor, a kind ov pacin hobbyhoss, or counekting gang-plank, between man in his dignity and the beast in his darkness.

I hav a biopinyun ov the naturalists and all kinds of the dictionary fraternity, and tuch mi hat tew em when we meet, and i respect em for what they know, but don't worship them for what they don't know, as the hethens to their wooden Gods.

I don't kare what the philosophers say they kan prove in this matter, i tell you konfidenshally, mi christian friend, that you and the monkey are relashuns.

I don't pretend tu say that yu are brothers and sisters, but i do pretend to state, that monkey, or enny other kind ov critter, who exercises reason, even if the lite ov it is az dim az a number six dip candle in the rays ov the noondays sun, are relashuns, for a certain amount.)

The only fence between the animal and brute folks it instinkt and reason, and if the naturalist kant prove that the monkey don't show a glimmering ov reason, i say he must step oph from the monkey's tail, and let him eat at the first table.

The monkey is imitative tew the highest degree, and imitashun is a direc thrangresshun ov the law ov instinkt, and is sollow ground within the domain ov reason.

Instinkt don't step one step aside tew smell ov a flower or pull a cat's tail.

But argument ain't my fighting weight, i git along the best bi asserting things az they strike me, and i say upwards of four thousand things every year that i kant prove enny more than i kan prove what melody is.

Pure devilry is the Monkey's right bower; he ix only valuable [az personal property] tew look at, and wonder what he is going tew do next.

He is a jack of all trades, put him in a barber shop he will lather, and try tew shave himself, and color his mustach; put him in a good store, and he will handle more goods than the best retale clerk in A. T. Stewart's employ.

The monkey has not got a logikal head, it is tew much like a pin bed, all in a heep to count, but his face is a concentrated dewdrop of malishous mischief.

He resembles a rat terrier in countenance and skratches his head as natural as a district skool boy, and undo ubtedly for the same reason.

Monkeys never grow enny older in expreshun, a yung monkey looks just like his grandpa, melted up and born again.

They are sometimes kept as pets, but i should rather watch two adopted erlan boys fresh from the home of the friendless, than two monkeys.

They will eat everything that a man will, except bolony sassage, here they show more instinkt than reason.

But after all, tho the monkey shows evident signs ov reason, they are, as a means ov praktikal grace, the most useless kritters i have ever pondered over and skratched mi head about.

They won't work, and they won't play, unless they can raise sum devilry, they are too much like a human being in looks, and ackshuns to kill off, it is impossible to look at one and git mad at him, and it is impossible to laff at their smirking satanity, without getting mad at yourself.

If enny body should make me a present of a monkey, i don't know whether i should konsider it intended for malice, or a joke, but i do know that i would send him back bi the same person who fetched him, tew the doner, marked in loud italiks—C. O. D.

RETICENCE.—Agustus caused a sphynx to be engraved on his seal, to indicate the unsearchable character of his purposes,—the sphynx being the creature worshiped by the Egyptians as the divinity of mystery. The seal of Agustus adorned the lips of the sage. The wisest purposes are conducted under that seal. Astute silence is never mistaked for ignorance; and though it often conceals defects, it enshrines a mystery that invites consideration and commands veneration. The secret springs of wisdom are not discoverable. Happy are we if we may be permitted to drink of the fountain which gush from the pent-up reservoirs of scientia.

A Hungry Jew paying particular attention to a ham was asked what he was saying to it. He replied, "I was saying, thou almost persuadest me to be come a Christian."

A Saratoga belle, who dresses nineteen times a day, has gone into a decline. So has her father. He declines to pay his notes.

Mrs. Partington says that since the invention of the needle-gun, there is no reason why women shouldn't fight as well as men.

A young man who had a light, incipient moustache, one day, while fingering the few hairs, said to Harry: "Hadn't I better dye this moustache?" "Oh! no," replied Harry, "let it alone and it will dye itself!"

When a Kentucky judge, some years since, was asked by an attorney upon some strange ruling, "Is that law, your honor?" he replied: "If the court understand herself, and she think she do, it are!"

"Are you the mate of the ship?" said an emigrant to the cook, who was an Irishman. "No; I'm the man who cooks the mate." "Oh, I'm sorry."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures. many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public wearily meet to be informed of its virtues over more.

Scrofula is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, the unseen and untold taint of the blood undermines the constitution, and leaves the door wide open to lurking or fatal diseases, with nothing a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, internal decay may be suddenly announced in the lungs or heart, or tumors form in the liver, or a sluggish circulation is proclaimed by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is prudent, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints usually find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Sore Eyes, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, St. Vitus' Dance, Neuralgia, and the various Chronic affections of the stomach and internal organs.

Scrofula and Hereditary and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for a complete eradication of such maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. In Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Obstructions, and Female Diseases, are commonly speedily relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield promptly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the disorder of the poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer of the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections usually attributed to Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as its virtues have become more widely known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

The Family Sepulchre.

Close by a grave three mourners prayed,
When day was almost done,
And on a tomb-stone, newly laid,
Beamed the departing sun.

One wore a recent widow's dress;
Her face was pale and fair,
And very sad;—but there was less
Of grief and patience there.

Two youths were kneeling at her side,
In early boyhood's flush;
And through their veins, in life's first pride,
The pure blood seemed to rush.

Her arms were reverently crost
Upon each stripling's breast;
The father they had lately lost,
Was in that place of rest.

Their prayer was ended;—as they rose,
The widow joined their hands:
"My sons!" she said, "let this world's woes
"Draw closer friendship's bands.

"We three have prayed upon the grave
"For us and our's designed;
"It holdeth one so true and brave,
"His like is not behind.

"I feel I have not long to stay
"Before I, too, shall be
"Reposing here;—then come and pray,
"My children! over me."

Years passed away, and in that time,
The brothers were estranged:
And mutual doubt and conscious crime
Each clouded spirit changed,

* * * * * * *

Two old men in a burying place,
Knelt by a moss-clad stone;
One in his hands concealed his face,
And thought himself alone:

But wistfully the other gazed;—
Hoped,—dreaded,—hoped again;
The downcast eyes at length were raised;
They knew each other then.

Those aged men had both returned
From countries far away,
Because their softened souls had yearned,
Upon that grave to pray.

They prayed,—and thought of her that slept
The sepulchre within;
And heart to heart, the brothers wept
O'er years of pride and sin.

Together in that tomb they lie,
And mingle dust with dust:
They lived too long in enmity:
They died in love and trust.

CORA LEE.

BY MARIAN F. WISE.

Like a fair, fragile blossom, growing from among the stern grantine rocks of her own New England home, seemed Cora Lee, in the household of her father.

Old Thomas Lee enjoyed the not very flattering reputation of being one of the most sordid, grasping, and hardest man in all the country, and his treatment of the only child God had vouchsafed him, went far to prove the correctness of the prevailing opinion. And towards her, he had ever stood more in the relation of a pitiless task-master, who would not be satisfied by any reasonable amount of labor than in the position of a kind and loving father. It was drudge, drudge, drudge, from morning until night, with never a word of love, or of praise, but often a harsh reproof, because, toiling as it was far beyond her strength, she had not accomplished more.

Left motherless at an age when needing most a mother's love, and a mother's sympathy, the whole burden of affairs in her father's house had fallen upon her shoulders, taxing her youthful strength to the utmost limit, and making the opening pages in her life's history a dark, and gloomy record indeed.

Truly, when the lines of her existence, seemed cast in such unpleasant places, it is no wonder that her soul yearned for that love and sympathy, which in her own home, had ever been denied. And when Maurice St. Leger came, throwing around her like the halo of an apparently deep and abiding affection, it was a foregone conclusion, that without pausing to think of what his antecedents might be, she should fully reciprocate his love. All she knew of him was, that he came from the city, that great Babel of conflicting interests, and conflicting human passions, called New York, and that so far as the knowledge of the people in the immediate vicinity extended, he bore an irreproachable character.

He did not claim to be wealthy, but his general carelessness in money matters, plainly revealed the fact that he possessed at least a handsome competence. Of this, however she never thought. It was that yearning for love, that craving for appreciative kindness, combined with her love for him, which made her say to him, as did Ruth to Naomi of old; "Whither thou goest, I will go, and where thou diest I will die, and there will be buried; thy people shall be my people, and thy God, my God."

To do Maurice St. Leger justice, he did love, as ardently as such a nature as his was capable of loving. He thanked God for the treasure he had won, when the sacred words of the marriage covenant were spoken that united their destinies for life, and for a month he kept the vow uttered so solemnly at the altar, sacred.

But when the honeymoon was over, when the first glamour of love wore off, he relapsed into his old habits—habits, of the existence of which, she until then, suspected nothing.

And oh! what a sad and cruel awakening from such a bright dream of bliss.

He had been away upon a hunting excursion in the woods, in company with three or four young men from the village, and he returned home intoxicated—yes, in a state of almost beastly stupefaction.

Had he been brought home dead, Cora could scarcely have felt greater pain. But, like a true wife, she buried the agony in her own bosom, and was faithful to him through all, first enduring the shame, the consciousness of his degradation brought her, then the poverty and scorn, which the cold, unfeeling world meets out to the drunkard's wife, then the seemingly studied brutality with which he treated her, and last of all, the blows inflicted in his fits of drunken phrensy.

Oh, it was a terrible picture! that drunkard's home. Reader, have you ever beheld a drunkard's home? Do you know aught of its squalor, its utter wretchedness? Have you any idea of its true meaning, of the degradation, and poverty, and agony, of which it is the synonym? Does your mind's eye take in all those broken hopes, those blighted aspirations, those affections uprooted, which once were so tender and so strong,—the aching heart, crushed and bleeding, beneath the triumphant iron chariot wheels of the relentless monster!

If you can comprehend all this, you may in a measure understand the "abomination of desolation," which renders this home a fitting abode for demons!

If you do not, you cannot understand, or no earthly tongue or pen, can depict one half the horrors of such a place.

Yet through all those deep hours of degradation, abuse and shame, she still toiled on, and accomplished her duty and more than duty, unwaveringly, and uncomplainingly.

She might have left him—she might have sought and obtained, a home elsewhere, with friends who loved her for her sweet and gentle disposition and patient kindness, and everyone would have justified her in it; but no thought of doing this, ever came into her mind.

And she toiled on in the thorny path before her, until the white robed messenger came, and led her spotless soul, purified in the fires of affliction, up the shining way to a life unending, and crown immortal.

And then, and not till then did the fruits of her lifelong sacrifice become apparent. And over her clay cold form, her husband awakened all too late to the value of that treasure now gone from him forever, swore never to touch the damnable poison more. Then through the hallowed influences of her memory, achieving his own freedom, he arose to go forth and do battle for the sake of others.

When he speaks, thousands will eagerly flock to hear, and hearts are melted as wax, before the flame of his eloquence. There are hundreds of reformed men to-day, who will rise up and call him blessed, throughout every State and Territory of our broad domain, little knowing through whom his steps were turned from the pathway of the dread destroyer, yet had she abandoned him he would have been long ago sleeping in the drunkard's grave.

And if glorified spirits can look down from the world of bliss, how must she heart of the patient martyr rejoice, as she beholds his glorious mission, and knows that by her faithfulness even unto death, he has power to save thousands, dying almost, in agony and shame.

Folded the weary hands,
Upon the pulseless breast,
Quiet the weary heart,
In everlasting rest.

Filling her mission still,
Failing of mortal breath,
Never could end her work,
She speaks after death.

A Dying Wife to her Husband.

The following beautiful and touching extracts are taken from a letter written by a dying wife to her husband, which was found by him sometime after her death, between the leaves of a religious volume, which she was very fond of perusing. The letter which was literally dim with tear marks, was written long before the husband was aware that the grasp of a fatal disease had fastened upon the lovely form of his devoted wife, who died, it is stated, at the early age of nineteen. It shows how fathomless is the love

"When the shall reach your eye, dear G., some day when you are turning over the relics of the past, I shall have passed away forever, and the cold, white stone be keeping its lonely watch over the lips you have so often pressed, and the sod will be growing that shall hide forever from your sight the dust of one who has so often nestled close to your warm heart. For many long and sleepless nights, when all my thoughts were at rest, I have wrestled with consciousness of approaching death until at last it has forced itself upon my mind; and although to you and to others it might seem but the nervous imagination of a girl, yet dear G., it is not so. Many weary, weary hours have I passed in the endeavor to reconcile myself to leaving you, whom I love so, and this bright world of sunshine and beauty; and hard indeed it is to struggle on silently alone, with the sure conviction that I am about to leave you forever and go down alone in the dark valley! 'But I know in whom I have trusted,' leaning on His arm I 'fear no evil.' Don't blame me for keeping all this from you. How could I subject you, of all others, to such sorrow as I feel at parting, when time will soon make it apparent to you? I could have wished to live, if only to be at your side when your time shall come, and pillowing your head upon my breast, wipe the death damps from your brow, and usher your departing spirit into the maker's presence, embalmed in woman's holiest prayer. But it is not to be so, and I submit.

Yours is the privilege of watching through long and dreary nights, for the spirit's final flight; and transferring my sinking head from your breast to the Saviour's bosom! And you shall share my last thought, the last faint pressure of this hand, and the last feeble kiss shall be yours; and even when flesh and heart shall have failed me, my eye shall rest on yours until glazed by death—and our spirit shall hold one last communion until gently fading from my view—the last of the earth—you shall mingle with the first bright glimpses of the unfading glories of that better world, where partings are unknown. Well do I know the spot dear G., where you will lay me; often have we stood by the place, and as we watched the mellow sunset as it glances in quivering flashes through the leaves and brightening the grassy mounds around as with stripes of burnished gold, each has thought that one of us would come alone; and which ever it might be, your name would be on the stone. But you loved the spot, I know you'll love me none the less when you see the same quiet sunlight linger and play among the grass that covers your Mary's grave. I know you will go often alone, when I am laid there, and my spirit will be with you then, and whisper among the waving branches: "I am not lost but gone before."

The Power of Forgiveness.

A soldier whose regiment lay in a garrison town in England, was about to be brought before his commanding officer for some offence. He was an old offender, and had been often punished. 'Here is again," said the officer on his name being mentioned; "everything—flogging, di-grace, imprisonment—has been tried upon him." Whereupon the sergeant stepped forward, and apologizing for the liberty he took, said—

"There is one thing which has never been done with him yet sir,"

"What is that?" was the inquiry.

'Well sir," said the sergeant, 'he has never been forgiven."

"Forgiven!" said the colonel, surprised at the suggestion.

He reflected for a few moments, ordered the culprit to be brought in, and asked him what had he to say to the charge?

"Nothing sir," was the reply; "only I am sorry for what I have done."

Turning a kind and pitiful look on the man, who expected nothing else than that his punishment would be increased with the repetition of the offence, the colonel addressed him saying. "Well, we have resolved to forgive you!"

The soldier was struck dumb with astonishment; the tears started in his eyes, and he wept like a child. He was humbled to the dust; he thanked his officer and retired—the old refractory, incorrigible man? No; he was another man from that day forward. He who tells the story had him for years under his eye, and a better man never wore the Queen's colors. In him kindness bent one whom harshness could not break; he was conquered by mercy, and forgiven, and ever afterward feared to offend.

"The Road to Hell."

From the Dubuque Daily Herald. The scene occurred in the Dubuque county jail.

"THIS IS THE ROAD TO HELL."—This terribly suggestive expression was used the other day by one of the prisoners now under sentence of death in our county jail. The occasion of its utterance was as follows:—

A party went to visit the prisoner in jail. One of the condemned recognized one of the visitors as a former resident of the same town in Ohio. His widowed mother lives there still, and some of his sisters. The visitor asked him if his mother knew of his situation. He replied that she did, and that he had received a letter from her but a few days previously. Immediately upon this allusion to his mother, his mind seemed back to the scenes of his youth, and the home of his early affections, and his face gave evidence of an intense and indescribable anguish of heart, so painful and terrible that he was pitiable to look upon. He burst into tears, and addressing the visitor in question, who was a lady, exclaimed:

"Oh! Mrs.———, little did I think when I saw you in Ohio, that I would ever come to such a condition as this. Little thought I would ever come to the dishonorable death I am doomed to die, and break the heart of my poor old mother, and disgrace all my relatives. O my God, my heart will burst! I never killed Wood, but I was drunk, and I was present at his murder. Had I not been drunk, I would never have been there. It is whisky that has ruined me. Whisky led me to bad company, and it is whisky that has brought me to the gallows. The temptations of the whisky shop first led me astray. Yes, Mrs.———, the whisky shop has been to me the road to Hell, and now, if I was able, I would have printed over the door of every whisky shop in Dubuque, and every where else, in big letters that every body could see, these words of truth, 'THIS IS THE ROAD TO HELL!'"

Here the poor fellow's head sank upon his hands, and his agony seemed terrible indeed. He doubtless felt the truth and force of what he said, and all who saw him pitied him. As the words of a doomed and dying man, his forcible and agonized remarks made a deep impression on all who heard him.

The Highest Flight ever made by Man.

The most remarkable balloon ascension on record was made in 1804, by Biot and Gay-Lussac, in Paris. By this enterprise they endowed science with a series of new and important facts, questionable before that time, as they carried with them a complete set of suitable apparatus, and moreover, an unsurpassed knowledge of observation and 13,000 feet, and observed that at 8,000 to 9,000 feet the animals they had taken with them, did not appear to suffer any inconvenience. In the meantime, the pulses of the two experimenters were much accelerated; that of Gay-Lussac, otherwise always slow, 62 beats per minute, was 80; and that of Biot, naturally rapid, 79 beats per minute, was 111. At a height of 11,000 feet, a pigeon was liberated; it dropped down whirling through the air as if it had been a stone. The air was too thin, too much rarefied to enable it to fly.

Three weeks later, Gay-Lussac went up alone, and attained a height of 23,000 feet four and one sixth miles, or 2000 feet higher than the top of Chimborazo mountain. The barometer was only thirteen inches high; the thermometer 18 degrees Fahrenheit below the freezing-point, while on the surface of the ground it was 80 degrees. He left the courtyard of the Conservatoire des Arts et Metiers, in Paris, and, after an aerial voyage of six hours, descended near Rouen, one hundred miles distant. The result of this ascension on Gay-Lussac's health was very injurious, partially by the want of air for respiration, combined with sudden cold, but chiefly by the absence of the accustomed pressure. At the extreme height of 22,000 feet, his face and neck were swollen enormously, his eyes protruded from his head, blood ran from the eyelids, nose and ears, and also came from his lungs by vomiting; in short his system received a shock from which he never fully recovered during the rest of his life.

No Homestead.

If you will go with me to Lebanon, my native town, call at every door, make inquiry as to the proprietorship of each dwelling, you will find here and there one that is not owned by the occupant. Nearly every head of a family has a house—a home which he calls his own, and in those homes are to be found as many of the necessaries and comforts of life, as few privations, as in any part of our goodly land. If you require still further, you will learn that they are among the most moral and temperate of people. Temperance has done much to secure their homes and to make them the abodes of happiness.

Go with me around the city where I live or around this and other cities, make the same inquiry, and you will find a much larger proportion of families who are tenants at will, and have no abiding place worthy of being called a home. Inquire into the cause, and in a great majority of cases you will learn that intemperance in its milder or grosser forms has prevented.

Go through the entire land and ask why it is that so many husbands and fathers have failed to secure the greatest earthly comfort—a permanent home, and the answer will be that intemperance has been the greatest obstacle in their way—yes, greater than all others.

Welsh Boy and His Bible.

As I was travelling not long since on the mountain of Conway, there passed on the road a little boy with a big book under his arm. I asked him what book he had; but he could not understand me He was a little Welsh boy, and the book was a Welsh Bible. He passed on out of sight. Our party proceeded along the mountain side, and shortly after proceeded to sketch. A small voice from a distance above us caught our ear. I said to my friend, a Welsh pastor, "Climb up these rocks a little and see who it is." He did so. It was that little boy on the mountain top, praying to the God who made the mountains. His bible was open before him. He read and prayed; he was asking God to bless the town of Conway, and that on the morrow, (it was Saturday afternoon) many sinners might be converted, and that God would bless his servants everywhere as they preached his word. Oh what a glorious religion I thought, which can make that little boy a High Priest, of the Almighty!—I felt strengthened in my work the next day and often since that, as I have thought that many such precious little ones are praying for us.—S. The Devil's Reply to the Examiner.

We are indebted to Rev. E. Aiken, of New Hampshire, for the following copy of the reply of "Diabolus" to the Reasoner's Proposal, published in a late number of the Tempter:

MY DEAR BRETHREN,—I address you by this endearing appellation, because of the congeniality of our spirits, and on account of the great work we are both engaged in—the work of human destruction. I most cordially accept your proposals. For five thousand years I sought in vain for a man so fully after my own heart, to do my work among men. I even ransacked the lowest depths of Hell for Devils who could and would do for me the whole work of destruction. But little success attended their efforts. My minions always made some mistake, or too soon showed the cloven foot. I sent out the Demon, Murder, and he slew a few thousands, most generally the helpless and innocent. Men turned away with loathing from him, and his mission was comparatively a failure.

I bade my servant Lust go forth. He led innocent youths and beautiful maidens in chains,—destroying virtue, wrecking happiness, blasting character, and causing untimely deaths and dishonored graves. But even then many of his victims escaped through the power of God, my enemy.

I sent out Avarice, and in his golden chains some were bound; but men learned to hate him for his meanness, and comparatively few fell by him.

The twin brothers, Pestilence and War, went forth, and Famine stole behind them; but these three slew the old and young, men women and children indiscriminately, the good as well as the bad, and Heaven received as many accessions as Hell.

In sad mess my Satanic heart mourned over the probable loss of my crown and kingdom, as I contemplated the gigantic strides which the Gospel of Jesus is making in saving men from my clutches,—but when I received your kind letter, I shouted till the welkin of Hell echoed the cry: "Eureka! Eureka! I have found it, I have found it!" Yes, my dear friend, I could have embraced you a thousand times, and I have given orders to reserve for you the place nearest my person, the most honorable seat in my kingdom. In you are combined all the qualifications of just such a friend and partner as I have long wished for, and in your business are all the elements of success. Now shall my throne be forever established.—Only carry out your designs and you shall have money, though it be wrung from the broken hearts of helpless women and from the mouths of innocent, perishing children; though you fill the jails, work-houses, and poor-houses; though you crowd the insane asylums; though you make murder, incest and arson to abound, and erect a scaffold and gallows in every village, town and city —you shall have money!

I will also harden your heart, so that your conscience shall never trouble you.—You shall look upon blood and even shed it without shame or anguish. You shall think yourself a gentleman, though men and women, your victims, shall call you demon.—You shall be devoid of the fear of God, the horrors of the grave and the solemnities of eternity, and when you come to me your works shall secure you a reward forever.—All I claim is the souls of the victims.—Keystone Tempter.

Give Help to the Slaves of Drink.

There are drinking men all over our land who would be glad if intoxicating liquors were placed entirely beyond their reach.—While the liquor traffic is suffered to exist, they are not safe, even though they resolve and promise to abstain from partaking of alcoholic beverages. These men have a right to measures for their protection, and to be presented an opportunity to vote the temptations out of their way. At our last election we knew personally of a number forward and cast their ballots for the Prohibition Party Ticket. They expressed to the act right of common humanity and the gospel to withold our support where it is so greatly needed? Ought we not to regard the welfare of our neighbors and kindred at home of as much importance as that of the heathen abroad? Should those who once devoted their teachings, their prayers, and their votes for the freedom and elevation of the chattel slaves of our nation, now hesitate to use the same weapons, in full, for the benefit of the slaves of appetite? Tell us, friends, why delay and neglect this matter?

It is all-important to final success in this temperance work that we separate the drinker from the drunkard-maker. The latter too often makes a fool of the former to perpetuate his own power and their consciousness of what was absolutely needed for their salvation, and to prevent others from falling into their condition. If our professed temperance men would generally advance to this line of action, it would give heart and courage to this class of persons, and we should find large numbers of them flocking under the banner of prohibition.—They would feel that there was in the act, hope for their emancipation. Is it not, then a solemn and a Christian duty for all who avow themselves as opponents of the curse, to step forward and aid these weak ones? And, beside them, their innocent wives and children? Have we a right, in the self-aggrandizement. Whether they intend it or not, many temperance men virtually aid and abet this work. They do so, because they talk one way, and vote another. They have many professions to make of love for the cause, and in one or two acts of their lives, each year, make their professions to assume the appearance of falsehood and a base mockery. If it were not so, Prohibition would be a ruling element in almost every part of our country to-day, and thousands of our grog-dens would have "Ichabod" written above their doors. It is often claimed that we have not far from one million pledged temperance men and women in our own country. Of these, at least two hundred thousand are voters—a power amply sufficient to compel our politicians to respect our principles and carry out our beliefs. But to do this, we must learn to make our issue paramount to all others, and work only for that party that will boldly advocate, and when placed in power, establish and enforce prohibitory laws.

GREAT MEN.—Homer was a beggar; Plautus turned a mill; Terence was a slave; Corbinas died in jail; Paul Borghese had fourteen trades, yet starved with them all; Tasso was often dispressed for a few shillings; Cervantes died of hunger; Camoens, the writer of "Lusiad," ended his days in an almshouse; and Vaugelas left his body to the surgeons to pay his debts. In England, Bacon lived a lifetime of meanness and distress; Sir Walter Raleigh died on the Scaffold; Spenser died in want; Milton sold his copyright of "Paradise Lost" for £15, and died in obscurity. Dryden lived in poverty and distress; Otway perished of hunger; Lee died in the streets; Steele was in perpetual warfare with the bailiffs; Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield" was sold for a trifle, to save him from the grasp of the law.

A HINDOO STORY.—A poor Hindoo, having been released from the cares of this world, and from a slavery with, promoted himself at the gate of Brahmins paradise. "Have you been through purgatory?" asked the God—"No! but I [illegible] material," he replied, curiously. "Come in then; it's all the same." PETERBOROUGH, OCT. 13, 1870.

Editorial Items.

To day Railway matters will be discussed in the County Council.

The Prestyterians of Norwood and vicinity are building a manse: cost nearly $2000.

The West Riding ploughing match will be on the 21st instant, on Mr. M. Walton's farm, 13 con. of North Monaghan.

The East Riding match will be on Wednesday next, 19th instant, on Mr. Gavin Shearer's farm Otonabee.

THE JAPANESE.—This troope will visit Peterboro, and perform in the Music Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings. They will no doubt draw full houses.

At a late meeting of the County Council of Hastings, $250 were granted to build a bridge between Lake and Methuen, provided the County of Peterborough grant a like sum.

BURGLARY.—We learn from the "Independent", that some one entered the store of S. S. Peck, Esq., on Sunday night, and carried away goods to the amount of nearly $200. They are not all honest people who visit the back countries!

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Wm. McConnell, Druggist, of Cobourg, was killed by a railway train at Toronto, on Wednesday last. He was standing on the track at the time looking at a narrow guage engine, when another backed on him and caused such severe injuries that he died that evening.

The "New Dominion Monthly," for October, has been received, it contains excellent portraits of Von Moltke, and the Crown Prince of Prussia. A Canadian tale by Agnes Vining is continued. And the remaining matter is both interesting and instructive. The "New Dominion" is one of the best of the monthlies; no trashy reading is ever inserted in it, and hence it may be placed in the hands of any child.

LITERARY CLUB:—A meeting of the Directors of the Peterborough Literary Club will be held in Mr. O'Donnell's office, on Monday evening, October 17th, at 8 o'clock, A full attendance is requested, for the transaction of important business, in connection with which will be the arranging of a programme for the winter, the engaging of suitable rooms for debates, lectures, &c.

A vote of the electors of Belleville will be taken on the 24th instant, on a by-law [illegible] Junction Railway Company. This we think, is not a sufficient sum for Belliville Peterboro had to contribute $150,000 to secure a road of 13 miles length, to Millbrook, while Belliville proposes $100,000 towards a road of 50 miles. That town should come forward generously, if the grand junction is to be secured.

ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that on Friday last while Mr Matthew McElwain, of Otonabee, was drawing out manure, his horse ran away in the field while he was unloading, Mr. McElwain got thrown against the fence and severely injured. His face is badly cut, there is a severe bruise on the side of the temple, and others on the head, several of his ribs are said to be broken, and Dr. Sullivan, who was called in, fears there may be internal injuries of a serious nature. The horse was stirred up by means of strange colts that had entered the field where he was working. We learn since writing the above, that Mr. McElwain is recovering.

THE OLD BURYING GROUND.—We invite the attention of the proper parties to the shameful state of the old burying ground. The fences are broken down every where, there is no gate or railing to secure it from the tramp of unhallowed feet. Hogs, dogs, cattle, and all kinds of animals have free course to it, and there seem to be no one to look after it. If the Town Council should do so it is a shame that it is not done already. If the County Council have the custody of it, they will do so as soon as notified of the shameful state of the fences, stiles and gateways. There should be a fence across between the two portions of it, and all the east part fenced, and a gate put on at the drill shed. Will some one take this matter up? at present it is a disgrace to the town.

INSPECTORS REPORT, ADMISSION TO THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—On Tuesday, 11th inst., the Inspector of Grammar Schools, Rev. J. G. D. McKenzie, M. A., paid his second official visit this year to our Grammar schools. The following pupils were admitted after due examination viz: William Russel, John W. Dixon, Robert Read, Jane McDougall. From Mr. Taylor's division: Thomas Kennedy, Thomas Eastland, Hunter Kennard, J. Haggart, W. Armstrong, W. Mills, J. Kennard, T. Fortye, William Might, F. Rutherford, Thos. Sullivan, Thomas Roberts, Joseph Sawdie, Chas. Metherall, Albert Shaw, Alfred Haynes, William Howson. From Miss Peattie's Division: Annie Iarke, Annie Beguley, Maggie Craig, Ada Tanner, Ellen Munro, and Flora Ludgate. Total 27. These together with the pupils on the roll previously admitted make a total of 188 for the present year.

County Council.

WEDNESDAY, 12th OCT. 1870.

Council met in special session for the purpose of taking into consideration the third reading of the By-law to raise by way of loan the sum of $10,000, for purposes mentioned in the By-law.

The warden, S. S. Peck, Esq., was in the chair, and all the members present.

On motion of Mr. F Peck, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—The By-law was read a third time and passed.

The Council then opened for general business but immediately adjourned to allow committies to get to work.

Our Improvements for 1870.

The material prosperity of towns and cities is generally considered according to the rate of increase of population, and the number of buildings erected, their commodiousness, and consequent outlay. Taking these things as our guide in reference to the growth and progress of Peterboro, we may safely say, that few towns in Canada exhibit such substantial signs of progress and improvement.

From returns of freight shipments to Peterboro' it will be found that we receive more goods in a year than any town of similar size in the old Newcastle district, and our trade has been steadily increasing for years.

The stocks of merchants will compare favorably with those of any town in the Dominion, and even with the cities and in industry and reliability our mechanics and citizens, can not be surpassed. The population of the town has been increasing steadily for some years, so much so, that at present there is not a vacant dwelling house in the town, and, when a vacancy does occur, there are 10 to 12 applicants, so that at present, rents are unusually high.

To meet the growing demand for dwellings, there are in course of erection, or just completed this year—not less than 70 new buildings, without taking into account the repairs done to old buildings, so as to make them tenantable. We have made an attempt to find the number of new buildings and their estimated costs, which we give below; and, although not complete, it sufficient to show that Peterboro is going ahead at a rapid rate. We need not fear its ruin or decay, during this generation, and with proper foresight and due liberality in opening communication towards us, to induce trade toward us,—there is no fear of decay for many generations. Our situation in the midst of one of the most fertile districts in Canada, together with the start we have got, is sufficient to warrant us to look forward to becoming a city, in a few years. The population of the town, sister village, and suburbs is now not less than 8,000; and these are all one to all intents and purposes, and with the same rate of progress as during the past three years, in three years more our population will be 10,000. Wise Councils moderate expenditure, unless when absolutely demanded, and low taxes are all we requir to ensure continued prosperity.

IMPROVEMENTS.

To give a complete list of these would be no ordinary task. Commencing on George Street, Mr. Thompson has erected a very handsome building where Messrs. McKellar & Cameron were burned out.—It is divided into four stores, and is very neat in design. The cost is about $3000.

Mr. G. A. Cox has erected four stores on George Street, further north, at a cost of $4000; and he is also building a double dwelling on London street, which will cost about $2600.

Mr. J. F. Dennistoun is building a very handsome residence at the head of George street, at a cost of about $4000, if not more.

[illegible] handsome residence in the north-west of the town. It is beautifully located on an eminence, and is built of white brick: the style is very neat. It cost not less than $4000.

The Board of Trustees are erecting a neat school house near the Union school building, at a cost of $5000. The contractor is doing his work well, and when completed it will be no disgrace to the locality, although the old burying ground would have been a far more suitable place.

Mr. C. Ormond, druggist, has a very substantial dwelling house in course of erection just above the Union School, which will cost, before completion, $3000.

Sheriff Hall has erected an hotel and a store on Hunter street, the estimated cost of which is $6000.

Mr. Edward Robinson has erected a store and dwelling on the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, at a cost of $3000.

Mr. Wm. Toole has built a new shingle and sash factory and planing mill on Bethune street, which must have cost $3000.

All the above list, it will be seen, are costly buildings, none of them costing under $1000, and several costing twice that amount.

There are numerous dwellings too in course of erection, less costly of course than the above list, but at the same time handsome and commodious, at costs ranging about $1500 to $2500.

Mr. Peter Hamilton, Mr. E. Poole, Mr. Dunn, and Mr. R. White are each erecting neat brick dwellings on George street, south of Charlotte, that will cost $1500 each, and by the time sheds and stables are erected, and the grounds fixed off neatly, not less than $2000 each.

Mr. Leplante, butcher, has built a neat brick dwelling, just outside of the Town limits in the south end, at a cost of $1600.

Mr. E. C. Hill has built a very handsome dwelling house in the west of the town, at a cost of $2,400.

Dr. Burnham has also built a dwelling house on Brock street, costing over $1200.

Mr. Hudson has built a store on Brock street, costing $1400.

Mr. Yelland a house in the north-east of the town, costing $1000.

Mr. John Rogers is building on corner of London and Water streets.

Mr. Payne has built a neat brick dwelling house, just north of the Union school

In the south-west of the town, Mr. F. Rubidge and Mrs. Tate have each erected dwelling houses, costing about $1000 each, and Mr. N. Shaw has one in course of erection, that will cost about $2000.

Mr. Hughes, carpenter, has also erected a brick dwelling house, near his own dwelling on Charlotte street.

Mr. W. Thornton has built a rough-cast dwelling in the north of the town, and Mr. Henry Hardy a brick house on McDonald street, west of the old burying ground. These will cost from $800 to $1000.

Mr. Thos. Eastland and Mr. Taylor are each improving old buildings on George street, south of Charlotte, that will cost from $800 to $1000 each. Mr. R. Hamilton is also building on Sherbrook Street.

A handsome iron fence has been erected around the Presbyterian Church, (Rev. Mr. Roger's.)

Sheriff Hall, Mr. James Stevenson and Mr. W. Patterson are improving to the amount of $800 or $900 each, and there are innumerable number of others repairing, enlarging or beautifying their places, the cost of which will not be less on the whole than $20,000.

Very large sums have been spent in improving dams and mills, and manufactories in the town and vicinity, making the sum total of outlay for building and improvements in the town this year over $100,000.

It will thus be seen that our town was never in a more prosperous condition. In few years since the settling of the place, was so much expended on building, and no one year witnessed the erection of so many comfortable dwellings.

We anticipate, therefore, continued prosperity for Peterboro, notwithstanding that some of our citizens have a gloomy future in their imaginations. If the grand junction should be built, and the road northward secured, we may safely predict for Peterboro an increase of trade and population unexampled in any town similarly situated.

It is true that we lost heavily by forcing Messrs. McDougall & Ludgate and Messrs. Campbell & Huston, to remove their large mills to Harwood. But since that, Mr. D. Brook has commenced, and is successfuly carrying on his large woolen factory, which gives employment to not less than 40 hands, day and night, and when we consider that Mr. Brook employs a class of laborers that would otherwise be scarcely able to obtain employment, we may safely say his factory, is as great a boon to the town and of as much consequence, as one of the saw mills.

An effort ought to be made to establish a cotton factory here. And, we have no doubt but that a suitable party, with a little capital would easily find persons in town willing to aid such an enterprise, to a large amount. All that is wanted is enterprise to ensure success.

Our Grammar School.

The following items we select from the "Journal of Education, for September: There are 101 Grammar Schools in Ontario.

Galt school returned an average of	104
Peterboro	101
Hamilton	101
Port Hope	56
Lindsay	31
Kingston	76
Cobourg	74
Bowmanville	53
Dundas	71

The others varying from 11 up to these numbers.

Galt obtained $834 of government money. Hamilton and Peterboro like sums, $808, for the half year.

It will therefore be seen that our school has attained the second place among the Grammar Schools of Ontario, equalling the Hamilton School, and being only outnumbered by the Galt School. This speaks well for Peterborough, and for the success of Mr. Dixon, the present Principal.

The attendance was about 40 when he took charge of the School, now it is 188. The government money has also increased in a corresponding degree, until it is $1616 a year. Mr. D[illegible] has thus raised the status of the School financially, and we have no doubt but that he will also establish it in a literary point of view To this end, his labours must necessarily be extended to several years. It will also be necessary to increase the number of teachers. 188 pupils in the Grammar School department, and chiefly under two teachers, must necessarily over tax those teacher's energies, and divide their time. And now that our New School House is on the way, and will ere long be completed, perhaps the Board could so manage as to secure aid in the Grammar School department, while making their arrangements in January.

The township of Smith pays about $3000 for teaching about 320 children on an average. This town about $3000 for teaching 500 children. The rate is a little higher in Otonabee, as the schools and sections in Otonbee and other townships are smaller than in Smith, while teachers get about the same salaries. It will therefore be seen that the town is not taxed as high as the townships, for school purposes, and that the employment of even two additional teachers would not entail a heavy tax.

Two additional teachers, therefore, will not entail an addition of more than $200 or $300 a year to the town, a trifling sum indeed. We venture to say that few towns if any, in Canada, are so lightly taxed for purposes of education. The Board too will see the wisdom of strengthening Mr. Dixon's hands in establishing in Peterborough the best school in the Province.

It is the staff of teachers employed that enables the Upper Canada College to compete so favorably at the university examinations. A little effort will ensure to pupils of the Peterboro school as good opportunities as can be realized out of the universities, and the services of another first class classical, or mathematical, teacher will soon raise the Peterboro school to the first place among Provincial Grammar School. With all the disadvantages, our school has been labouring under, at the University examinations, Toronto, Harry Beck obtained first class honors in classics, the second place in second class honors in Mathematics, and also second class honors in English. Andrew Hourigan obtained the first place in second class honors in classics, third place in second class honors in mathematics, second class honors in English, and also second class honors in geography and history. There are five departments in which pupils are examined, namely, Classics, Mathematics, English, History, including ancient and modern Geograph, and French, the latter being optional. Harry Beck obtained honors in 3 out of five subjects, and And. Hourigan in four out of five.

Master Freddy Haultain, who with his parents has removed to Montreal, has entered the 5th Form of the High School in connexon with Magill College.

We learn that he is the youngest boy in the division, and in a private letter from the Col., to a friend in Peterboro, we further learn that Dr. Howe, the Principal of the High School, said that young Haultain was the best prepared boy of his age that had entered the department for some time.

We also find that one of Mr. Rutherford's daughters, who attended our school in the 3rd department, when examined at the Queen Street school, Kingston, was put into the 5th department there, and others who have gone to Toronto have also been put into much higher rooms than here,—testifying to the thorough system of teaching in the Peterboro school. We do not believe that our system is perfect, nor do we believe that any one man is able to do all the work required of the principal, but we have much pleasure in believing that our school is equal to any school in the Province, and by the board increasing the staff of teachers it may soon be the best.

The East Riding Show at Norwood.

The above Show, on Monday and Tuesday, was very successful. There were 719 entries. And during Tuesday, although the day was somewhat unfavourable in the morning, there were 1424 tickets of admission sold, so that in all, not much less than 1500 persons visited the Show, and large crowds were assembled outside, who came to see the Horse and Cattle Show in general, and some fair one in particular.

The Show in the Shed was far ahead of the Show of the West Riding, in the number of entries.

The Show of Grain, Butter, Fruit and Vegetables, was good, and there was strong competition in each class.

In Butter, both firkin and table, there were several entries, and the quality was considered excellent.

The 1st prize Table Butter, was made by Mrs. T. Blezard, of Otonabee, and was a very superior article, not to be surpassed in the Province.

There was also several entries of Home made Bread, an article not shown in the west, and the samples shown were no disgrace to the family bakers of the East Riding. It speaks well for the farmers wives and daughters of Dummer, that all the prizes for bread, and some for butter, were taken by Dummeronians.

In the Ladies' Department the number of entries, and the quality of the work did honor to the exhibitors. This department showed more numerous entries than at the Western show, but we do not pretend to draw comparison as to quality.

The Cattle or Horse Show did not equal the Western Show.

Mr. Blezard, of Otonabee, exhibited a very fine Devon Bull, and Mr. Sylvester Fife, of Otonabee, some very good Devon Cows and young cattle.

Mr. Wm. Armstrong, of Otonabee, had a fine Durham Bull, 2 year old, which was much admired.

Mr. C. Calder, of Dummer, had an Ayrshire Bull, a fine animal; of course these different breeds have their admirers.

In draught horses, Mr. Jas. Millar carried off the 1st prize again; and in carriage horses, Mr. Wm. Millar, both of Otonabee. Mr. Jas. Millar took a prize for a saddle horse. The show of Horses, however, did not equal Peterboro West, if we except Mr. James Millar's team.

Mr. Robert Wilson, of Norwood, showed a very excellent set of heavy draught harness. They were deservedly admired, and certainly it would be difficult to surpass them.

Mr. H. Sedgwick, of Hastings, showed a neat set of Carriage harness.

Mr. T. Mather, of Otonabee, carried off the first prize for a farm waggon It was deserving too. Messrs. Nicoll, of Norwood, taking the second.

The Lockhart & Millar Harrow, manufactured by Mr. Steel, took the first prize. Mr. Lawder and Brownlee showed two very nice ploughs which farmers spoke very highly of.

Mr. A. W. Moore exhibited a neat collection of cabinet work, for which he received several prices.

In Poultry there were very few entries, but they were not neglected.

At the close of the show on Tuesday, the Rev. Mr. Smithett, of Hastings, after returning thanks on behalf of the directors, introduced the subject of a cheese factory at Norwood. In doing so, he referred to the very successful exhibition just closed, and to the progress of the County of Peterboro, and of the country in general. He remarked that 50 years ago the population of Canada was but 77,000; now he believed it to be 2,500,000, and he asked what would it be in 50 years more,—not less than 10 or 12,000,000.

He then proposed the subject of a cheese factory, on the company plan, at a proposed cost of $4000, for buildings and fittings.

He believes the milk of 600 cows could be obtained, this would be not less than 2,000 gallons per day at 8d. $160, which with cost of investment, labour, &c., would amount to $500 per day; 100 hogs at $200 in spring, feeding $300.

The total cost of milk, building, labour, feed, &c., be reckoned at $3,000.

The income, 150 tons of cheese, worth $37,500, and income from Pork $2,200, total $39,700, against an outlay of $30,500, showing net profits of $8,200 on an investment of 4,000, or a profit of over 200 per cent.

He also showed that the milk of 600 cows could be easily obtained, and that the profits to the farmer for milk alone would be $32 per cow per summer. Of course no decisive steps were taken to form a company, but we understand a committee had been previously named towards encouraging the object.

Considering the immense crowd of people, and the wet day over head, inducing some to warm the inside, everything was very quiet up the time we left.

Through the kindness of the secretary, Mr. Roxburgh, we are enabled to give a complete and correct list of the successful competitors.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner,

The Union School.

SIR,—There was a somewhat sharp debate in the Council a short time ago upon the question of giving the Roman Catholics of the town a sum of money as an equivalent for the sum appropriatod in 1856 by the Town Council of the Clergy Reserve, towards the building of the Union School. Some of the Councillors labored hard to show that the appropriation was not only illegal but unjust to the R. C. ratepayers of the Town.

If such statements are true, it will be the duty of the Council, if in its power, to render justice in the premises. But I hold that the assertion is false, and that there is no just cause of complaint on the part of the R. Catholics, as I shall proceed to show.

At the time of the allottment of the money, supporters of separate schools could only claim a share of the Legislative school grant. Since then, in 1863, I believe they are entitled to a share in all public grants for Common School purposes.

Now, it must be born in mind that, while the original Act authorizing the establishment of separate schools as well as the later acts, including Scott's Act of '63, exempts supporters of a separate school from all rates and assessments for common schools purposes—they never exempt them from rates for Grammar schools, a most important distinction to remember in the debate, otherwise we shall go astray.

Again, I find on enquiry that the Union school building cost the corporation in the vicinity of $20,000. Of this sum, besides other items demanded of the Town by the Trustees, there were debentures issued by the town for $14000,—the interest on which is paid by the Protestant ratepayers of the town.

The question arises, what share or proportion of the building is properly chargeable as the Grammar school portion? If the whole cost is $20000, surely one-fourth, or say $5000, is not too much to name as that portion.

Now, what is all the fuss about? In place of building a separate erection for the Grammar school, which would cost more than the $5000, the Trustees build one place for the two schools. Had they, however, chosen to erect two buildings in place of one, no one, I presume, would deny that the R. C. supporters of the separate school would be legally liable to pay their share for the Grammar school building. The Town Council in 1856 appropriated the money to the Union building which came into their hands from the clergy reserve fund, amounting to $3025.65 a sum quite too small to erect a suitable County Grammar school building. Now pray where is the injustice in this case? Where is wrong done to the minority by the majority? I fail to see either, and I can only account for the anxious wish of some of the advocates for "refunding" and for "just work, viz: Knitting, tatting, crochet, lace work, shell work, patch work, hemming, rugs and quilts were much admired. Minden took about 26 prizes, Anson, 20, Snowdon 20, Lutterworth and Stanhope, say 6 each, and even Hindon took a few. Will you not say, well done Minden and neighboring townships!

THE WAR.

There is very little to chronicle in regard to the war in France.

The Prussian army is still around Paris, and there have been numerous sorties, but no advantage gained by the besieged.—Metz still holds out, but it is not to be expected that it can do so much longer. No reinforcements can be sent to it, and no force of sufficient account, seriously to annoy the besiegers, so that they are able to carry on their work without relaxation.

Italy is still somewhat unsettled, but the Pope intends remaining in Rome, as thereby he will retain the prestige of the Supreme Pontiff.

This is what we looked for. It is thought however that embarrassment may compel him to change his mind,

Victor Emmanuel intends asking Roman Catholic countries to support his Holiness. As much as to say Rome will not do more than add her mite.

The King of Portugal is also getting into difficulties. Republicanism is seeking to overturn his government, and the consequence is that he cannot get a working ministry.

Spain is still in an unsettled state no King has yet been found willing to asume the troubles for the honors of Royalty.

Russia has not yet made any active demonstration indicating her intentions.

It is difficult to form any idea yet as to probable results of the war. Bazaine's last effort, although a bloody one, was unsuccessful, he will not again attempt the like in a hurry. There is daily organization of volunteers, but the want of generals, arms, and spirit, must necessarily militate against any decisive measures for the relief of France.

Bismarck says that Prussia is ready to consider terms for a permanent peace, but will not entertain a truce for a moment.

And it is reported that an effort will be made to obtain the resignation of the Empress as Regent, in order to open up a way to the acknowledgement of the present government of France. If this should be done, then perhaps Prussia would treat with them, and peace might be restored.

Provincial Exhibition.

Mr. Joseph Redmond, of Otonabee, took the first prize for spring wheat at the Provincial show.

Mr. John Redmond the second prize.

Mr. Robert Patterson obtained a second prize for a pair of black bantams of this season. The first prize being awarded to birds of a larger breed. Mr. Patterson's birds are the same as exhibited at the Horticultural Show here,—and they are certainly, very fine birds of the class.

Messrs. Lockhart & Millar obtained the first prize for their improved harrow.

Mr. James Whyte obtained a prize for a wooden plough.

The October number of the London Society is also on our table. This is one of the most popular periodicals of the class

Pumpkins, squash, tomatoes, morning glory and beans, as well as some of the wild spring flowers, with apple trees in the gardens of Adam Hall and John Garbutt Esqr's., in full bloom, fully attest to the mildness of the season at this date, Oct. 12.

The "Manufacturer and Builder" for October, is before us. It is got up in the best style, and the present number is a superior one. It is only $1.50 per annum. The information to mechanics in one number is worth the money. It is published at 37 Park Row, N. Y.

Peters' Musical Monthly for October contains the following choice collection of Music, printed from full-size music plates. Truly Yours— Song and Chorus by Hays. Papa, come help Me across the Dark River —Song and Chorus by Persley. The World is full of Beauty, when the Heart is full of Love Song by Von Smit, Eyes of Loving, Laughing Blue—Song and Chorus by Philip Philips. We won't leave the Farm—Song and Chorus by Persley. Cast thy Burden upon the Lord —Quartet. Jesus and the Children—Quartet. Speak the Truth—Quartet. Halte Militaire, or Camp Polka. Falling Leave Polka. This Magazine is invaluable to all lovers of Music, any single piece of the above being worth as much as is asked for the entire lot. It is published monthly by J. L. Peters, 599 Broadway, New-York, at $3 per year.

Memoir of Robert Wood, Esq., native of Roxbourgshire, Scotland, who came to Canada in 1837, settled in Otonabee, on Lot 15, 3rd con., where he died May 24th, 1869.

Four-score and six years travel here,
Mid'st changing scenes he past,
Three partners dear, he laid in dust,
Ere he breathed out his last.

He oft spoke of the time, when left
With two twin babys dear,
Without a mother, them to nurse,
Their tender hearts to cheer.

Of all the family trials on earth,
There's none that tries as this,
Young infant children, left without
A mother, them to bless.

He was a man of feelings strong,
Which made his troubles great,
He lived to see them all up to
Man and woman's 'state.

He saw his great grand children,
Ere from earth he passed away,
And died in hope of Heaven, through Christ
To rise at the Last Day.

His body, in Westwood churchyard lies,
A tombstone marks his head.
Telling the passers by, where he
Lies numbered with the dead.

In peace and quiet his body rests
Beside his last dear wife,
Waiting the trumpets solemn sound
To call the dead to life.

When death is mowing our neighbors down,
We know as He'll not spare;
Death's warning voice to all is saying,
To meet thy God, prepare.

Hypochondriasis is one of the most difficult to treat successfully of all nervous diseases. Reasoning with nervous or hypochondriacal and insane persons rarely proves serviceable. The mind cannot be overcome while the nervous system is irritable. In many instances, the derisive laugh at the unfortunate, or the more temperate appeal to the reason, is absolutely injurious, by exciting further irritation in the mind of the sufferer, who thinks his advisers either unfeeling or incredulous towards his complaint. Under the use of Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, there is no longer necessity of resorting to such treatment.

Price $1 50 a bottle; 6 for $7 50. Sold by apothecaries and by F. Cundill & Co., wholesale agents, Montreal.

Sufferers from coughs, colds, bronchitis croup, influenza or whooping cough, will find relief in Dr Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, which has now been in use for nearly half a century, and still maintains its long established reputation as the great remedy for all diseases of the throat, lungs, and chest.

Is health worth having? If it is protect it—It is a jewel as easily lost as virtue, and in many cases as difficult to recover. In this climate, and more particularly at this season of the year, people are very apt to take cold and suffer from sore throat, cough, spitting of blood and pulmonary complaints generally, which if not checked immediately lead to serious consequences. The question arises, which is the quickest and most effectual remedy? Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have been before the public for twenty years, and have always given perfect satisfaction, and invariably effect permanent cures when taken in season. Sold by medicine dealers and country stores generally throughout the Province, at 25cts per box.

Caution to Purchasers of the Peruvian Syrup (a protected solution of the protoxide of iron). Beware of being deceived by any of the preparations of Peruvian Bark, or Bark and Iron, which may be offered to you. Every bottle of genuine has Peruvian Syrup (not Peruvian Bark) blown in the glass. Examine the bottle before purchasing.

CURE YOUR HORSES.

It is to the intrest of all who own horses to keep them in a healthy and sound condition: experience has proved that Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy is the most effacious, it has been used by thousands who will cheerfully confirm this statement. For Heaves, Coughs, Colds, and all diseases which affect the wind horses it has no equal, nor is it equalled as a condition medicine; it purifies the blood, corrects and improves the appetite, and softens the skin; in fact, so great is the improvement in the condition and appearance of the animal as to have led many to doubt if it could be the same horse. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hand & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

Found Dead in the Street.

The labor is over and done,
The sun has gone down in the west,
The birds are asleep every one,
And the world has gone to its rest:
Sleepers on beds of down,
'Neath covers of silk and gold,
Soft as on roses new blown,
Slept the great monarch of old!
Sleepers on mother's breast,
Sleepers happy and warm;
Cosey as birds in their nest,
With never a thought of harm!
Sleepers in garrets high,
'Neath coverlet ragged and cold;
And one little sleeper all under the sky,
Out in the night and the cold!
Alone in the wide, wide world,
Christless, motherless he;
Begging or stealing to live, and whirled
Like a waif on the angry sea.

The dairy looks up from the grass,
Fresh from the fingers of night,
To welcome the birds as they pass,
And drink in fresh rivers of light;
Sleepers on mother's breast
Waken to summer and mirth:
But one little sleeper has gone to his rest,
Never to wake on earth.
Dead—found dead in the street,
All forsaken and lorn;
Damp from the head to the feet,
With the dews from the sweet May morn.

Dead—for the want of a crust!
Dead—in the cold night air!
Dead—and under the dust,
Without even a word of prayer,
In the heart of the wealthiest city,
In this most Christian land,
Without even a word of pity,
Or the touch of a kindly hand!"

Oiled Floors for Kitchens.

I have for several years followed the plan of oiling unexpected floors, in order to save the trouble of scrubbing them, and I find it works well. You can either oil or paint them, of course, but I consider the oiling preferable, on the following grounds:—It is cheaper. You can apply it yourself. You have not to wait for it to dry. It produces a pleasanter color. It doesn't show tracts of dust, mud, and such like; and, therefore, a floor thus prepared does not require so frequent mopping. An oiled floor is better than a painted one in the following particulars. It looks better. It does not require scrubbing, which saves your hands. Grease spots never hurt it, which saves your temper. To prepare a floor, I take a quantity of the cheapest and least offensive oil I can secure; and apply it with a common paintbrush. I put it on smoothly, so that it will strike in equally all over, and yet not stand in spots on the surface. I do this at night, after the evening work is finished, and find the place ready for use again the next morning. Of course it will not injure the oil surface itself to tread upon it at once, but grease is liable to be tracked from it, at first, to adjacent parts of the house. A new coat of oil applied once in six month, or even once a year sometimes, is sufficient to keep a floor in perfect order. One may thus prepare to great advantage the floors of kitchens, pantries, and summer dining-rooms, back halls, stairways and porticos, closets, bath-rooms and laborers' bedrooms. It is also a good plan in children's departments, particularly when you are training them to do their own room work, to leave bare that end or side of the floor on which the bed stands, and oil it. That portion of the floor under the bed can then be easily kept free from dust, the sweepings can be more readily removed, and children will be afforded free scope for their duck-like style of ablutions, without danger to the carpets.—"Western Rural."

A Touching Incident.

Gen. Ulrich, who commanded Strasbourgh for the French, is the husband of a Taglioni and herself a most distinguished artiste. The sone of the 'danseuse' served in the French army at the battle of Woerth. When the news of the slaughter of that terrible field reached Paris his mother heard that he was killed—that Arthu was among the slaughtered of that field that were killed—that Arthur was slain. She did not believe it. She set out from Paris, journed to Woerth, found a survivor of the Twelfth Chasseurs, his regiment, quartered in a miserable village near by. At night she found her son. Albert was laid in a stable beside his horse. He was fast asleep. Taglinoi (Madame Ulrich) kissed him as he slept and retired, saying to the sentinel as she passed, 'Tell Albert that I came and kissed him.' It was a grand occasion, one of those moments when humanity is elevated above itself—raised from its gloomy surroundings of earth and brought nearer to heaven—"N. Y. Herald."

The Hottest Summer for a Century.

According to the weather records of Yale College, the past has been the hottest for ninety-two years. That is as far back as the Yale record enlightens us, and no oldest man who was running around barefooted during the summer of the eight previous years, remembers anything hotter; we may safely call this the hottes summer for a century. From July 10 to Aug. 16, 1870, the mean daily temperature was, at New Haven, 85 degrees; and no season, at least since 1778, has shown so many successive hot days. Our highest temperature this summer was (July 17) noted at 68 degrees, and this has been exceeded only four times during the period above indicated; at New Haven, the thermometer rising to 100 degrees one day each year in 1786, 1800, and 1854. In 1798 it reached 101."—"Hartford Courant."

Bringing Home the Harvest of War.

We have heard the exultant shouts—we have watched the magnificent squadrons streaming away over the fields of Lorraine—we have seen the stern King William in his spiked helmet; but here, in the little peasant's cart, is another phase of the great storm of war, which it were well to keep in mind, and which, in thousands of French and German homes, is the most engrossing and enthralling of all the war-scenes. The mangled men are getting home.

It is the old harvest war. The reapers go out with shouts and with a great din of drums; but always that dreary harvest of the maimed and bleeding is brought back. Let us keep this in mind, as we reckon up the gains of the magnificent war. Such pictures would make a healthful study for all diplomatists.

Horace Greely tells that he has loaned a great deal of money—generally with the object in view of getting rid of borrowers. He got his money back only in one instance and his honest man, oddly enough, turned out to be insane, and became an inmate of a lunatic asylum.

Two loving hearts have been made one in Illinois, after a separation of sixty-five years during which time each has been twice wedded and widowed. When they parted in anger the swain was 18 and the maiden 16.

MADOC, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and med[illegible]s of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

PARALYSIS CURED.

DERBYVILLE, Harrison Co., Ohio.
May 12th, 1870.

Messrs. RADWAY & Co.

Gentlemen,—The RESOLVENT has effected a cure in a very severe case, that of a Mrs Lemuel Johnson in this neighborhood. She was confined to her bed and had lost the use of her legs:—four bottles of the RESOLVENT has restored her, and last Sunday she was able to attend church. The [illegible] for the RESOLVENT has increased, and we vouch it a[illegible]s, to induce in time.

Yours truly, H. PITTIS & SON.

SARSAPARILLIAN.

So quick is RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT in entering into the circulation, that it may be detected in the urine, sweat, and blood in ten minutes after it has been taken.

A Remedy so quick in entering into the circulation and communicating its curative properties as RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN supplies a want that has ever existed.

RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian or Renovating Resolvent furnishes positive evidence of its Purifying and Remedial efficacy in curing persons considered Impotent and Barren, who have since married and had children.

STOP THE WASTE OF LIFE!
RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent will stop the waste of the life-fluid that in so many persons follows a discharge of water through the urethra. It is a positive cure for Spermatorrhea, Nightly Emissions, &c.

SYPHILOID ULCERS.
Sores of all kinds, Tumors, Cancers, Sore Heads, Sores on the Tongue, in the Mouth, in the Glands of the Throat, cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian.

IMPOTENCY.
The best evidence we have of the powerful Purifying, Tonic, and Fruitful properties of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent is that it has cured persons who were verging on Imbecility and Insanity through Self-Abuse, with continued drains of the seminal fluid, and were cured by the Resolvent, when prepared under the old process in 1850, who have married and have children now living. A few bottles will restore the vigor of life.

VIGOR OF LIFE RESTORED
Persons who, from self-abuse, disease, or injuries, suffer from paralysis or weakness in the secreting vessels of the genital organs, will be cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

SARSAPARILLIAN,
PAREIRA BRAVA.

Two of the Wonderful Ingredients that enter into the composition of RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT.

There are some thirty or more different species of Sarsaparillian, and it requires great care and intelligence in selecting the proper kinds; so with Pareira Brava. This great remedial agent is to be found in Guayaquil, Peru, Nicaragua, Brazil, and there are some twenty species of the root. Dr. Radway uses only one kind, that which grows in Brazil. He employs, through his agents, some but experienced and intelligent men in gathering, selecting, packing and shipping these roots to the United States. No ignorant savages or Hottentots are employed in gathering vegetables, roots, plants, &c., for the Sarsaparillian Resolvent

RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT is sold at $1 per Bottle, or 6 Bottles for $5, by all Druggists and Medicine Dealers, and at Dr. RADWAY'S Medicine Warehouse, 439 St. Paul Street, Montreal.

Amnesty.

NOTE BY EDITOR OF THE GLOBE.—The following effusion contains more truth than poetry:

'Tis telegraphed the Queen has pardoned Riel,
And all the bloody cut-throats of Fort Garry;
It is not true, I can't believe 'tis true,
That our most noble justice-loving Queen
Would stultify her great prerogative—
And pardon murderers before her Courts
Had passed adjudication on their crimes.
If she has done so, misrepresentation
Of all the facts, must have been laid before her;
How that old rebel Cartier must have lied,
To save the worthless neck of Rebel Riel;
"A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind."
I ask, why do we suffer such a man
To rule the Councils of our fair Dominion,
And treat the people of Ontario
As chattel subjects of a feudal lord;
And bark and snarl, like any terrier cur,
At all our loud and strong demands for justice.
How long shall our confiding dupes be sold
By leaders bribed, to keep the man in power?
He boasts he has us like a flock of sheep,
And feeds upon us like a snarling wolf;
And still, despite of our indignant claims,
Our indignation meetings and complaints,
He laughs, and says—Let an election come,
And I will buy them, as I've done before.
Well, judging of the future from the past,
No doubt he has good reason so to boast.

Education and its Purpose.

Education is the husbandry of the soul; a work inferior to none in moral grandeur, and superior to all in the extent of its influence and the momentousness of its issues. To watch the germination of thought and feeling; to tend with wise and gentle care the opening buds of intelligence; to train the yet pliant dispositions to upward and heavenward growth; and finally to witness the moral blossoms in their fair promise, and the ripe fruit in its golden maturity; this is a work which may well claim the entire consecration of its actual workers, and the reverential sympathy of all. It can derive no accession of dignity from the accidents of rank or position, or from the peculiarities of outward circumstances. It is the same in the village school as in the college hall, and may be carried on in both with equal fidelity and success.

Education, rightly understood and applied, is the foe of moral as well as of intellectual darkness—the assailant of vice and crime as well as of ignorance and superstition. It seeks to fit the undying spirit for the inimitable future which awaits it, and to confer upon it blessings which shall outlast the vicissitudes of the present life—Before the onward march of such education as this, the evils which afflict our land will recede, and eventually disappear. Not according to the number of schools, or the amount of knowledge which is imparted, but according to the moral standard by which our youth are trained, will crime and wickedness be diminished in the land. But higher results can only be reached by improved agency, and time will be required for the attainment of each. The present generation must be content to sow the seed, leaving it to another age to reap the harvest. Let us be willing to lay the foundation, though other hands will rear the superstructure. No well-directed effort can be lost. The toil will not be fruitless; the burden will not be borne in vain. The time will come when extended political freedom shall neither be ignorantly underrained nor perversely abused; when augmented knowledge will not prove the means of a false and delusive progress by changing the type of criminality, or substituting the refinements of vice for the violence of brute force; when each advance in material wealth and intellectual activity shall be sanctified and ennobled by an increase of moral power, the true righteousness on which alone the greatness and stability of a people can securely rest.—W. H. Crosker.

A Touching Story.

The following beautiful story was related by Dr. Schneble, of Maryland, at a meeting held in New York, to hear the experiences of twenty reformed drunkards.

"A drunkard who had run through his properly returned one night to his unfurnished home. He entered his empty hall; anguish was gnawing at his heart-strings, and anguish was inadequate to express his agony as he entered his wife's apartment, and there beheld the victims of his appetite, his loving wife and a darling child. Morose and sullen, he seated himself without saying a word; he could not speak—he could not look upon them. The mother said to the little angel at her side, 'Come my child it is time to go to bed;' and that little babe as she was wont, knelt by her mother's lap, and gazing wishfully into the face of her suffering parent like a peice of chiselled statuary, slowly repeated her nightly orison. When she had finished, the child (but four years of age), said to her mother: 'Dear mother, may I now offer up one prayer?' 'Yes, yes, my sweet pet, pray:' and she lifted up her tiny hands, closed her eyes and prayed: 'O, God! spare, oh! spare my dear papa!' That prayer was wafted with electric rapidity to the throne of God. It was heard on high—it was heard on earth. The responsive 'Amen!' burst from the father's lips, and his heart of stone became a heart of flesh. Wife and child were both clasped to his bosom, and in penitence he said: 'My child! you have saved your father from the grave of a drunkard. I'll sign the pledge!'"

On one occasion Charles Dickens was upholding the theory that whatever trials or difficulties might stand in a man's path, there is always something to be thankful for. "Let me, in proof thereof," said Dickens, "relate a story. Two men were to be hanged at Newgate for murder. The morning arrived; the hour approached; the bell of St. Sepulchre began to toll; the convicts were pinioned; the procession was formed; it advanced to the fatal beam; the ropes were adjusted around the poor men's necks; there were thousands of motley sight-seers of both sexes, of all ages, men, women and children, in front of the scaffold; when, just at that second of time, a bull which was being driven to Smithfield broke its rope, and charged the mob right and left scattering the people everywhere with its horns; whereupon one of the condemned men turned to his equally unfortunate companion and quietly observed, 'I say, Jack, it's a good thing we ain't in that crowd.'

RESPECT DUE TO WIVES.—Do not jest with your wife upon a subject in which there is danger of wounding her feelings. Remember that she treasures every word you utter. Do not speak of great virtues in another man's wife, to remind your own of a fault. Do not reproach your wife with personal defects, for if she has sensibility you inflict a wound difficult to heal. Do not treat your wife with inattention in company; it touches her pride and she will not respect you more or love you better for it. Do not upbraid your wife in the presence of a third party; the sense of your disregard for her feelings will prevent her from acknowledging her fault. Do not attempt to entertain your wife by praising the beauty and accomplishment of other women. If you would have a pleasant home and a cheerful bile pass your evenings under your own roof. Do not be stern and silent in your own house and remarkable for sociality elsewhere.

When a Kentucky judge, some years since, was asked by an attorney upon some strange ruling, "Is that law, your honor?" he replied: "If the court understand herself, and she think she do, it are!"

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Select Poetry.

Avoid the Fiend.
BY E. Z. C. JUDSON.

From the graves of murdered thousands,
From the cities of the dead,
Come a silent, awful warning,
Like a spectre dark and dread,
Bidding us who yet are living,
By the fate of those below,
To avoid the fiend incarnate,
Which too easily laid them low.

Widow's tears and orphan's wailing—
Seen and heard on every hand—
Deeds of dark and cruel carnage,
Stain with crimson this our land;
Wretched victims fill our prisons,
Others beg from door to door,
While the homes we build for paupers,
Scare can hold a beggar more.

This will last, o'er burdened people,
Till you crush the leading cause,
Till you save the tempted drunkard
By the aid of Christian laws;
Till you check the sale of poison,
Under every tempting name,
And redeem the sinking millions
From the rum-fiend's grasp of shame.

The Cave of the Winds.
BY DEXTER HAND.

"I told you so, Lizzie; there's no chance for me. 'Not at home,' they said, and yet I saw her at an open window."

"Bless me," said the person thus suddenly addressed, "you startled me! I did not know you were in the house."

"I came down the steps, and through the kitchen; I am ashamed to look any one in the face."

The speakers were brother and sister—twins—though no one would have supposed it, for they were as opposite in form, feature and disposition as they could be.

Lizzie Bennet had blue eyes and light brown hair, was below the medium height, and though very pretty, was by no means beautiful; she took a pratical view of men and things, and was something of a utilitarian.

Eugene was full six feet in height, well-proportioned, and of a dreamy disposition. He was a handsome man, unequivocally so. He had dark chestnut hair and blue eyes, somewhat deeper than Lizzie's, but blue, nevertheless. His dark beard and heavy mustache gave him a distinguished appearance, and Eugene Bennet had but few compeers in the circle in which he moved.

Though noble in form, and gentleman in manner and reality, Eugene was diffident. He had from that cause shunned the witchery of female society; kind to all, he had been particular in his attention to none. This had been known by his set, and though young in years, he had been set down as a confirmed bachelor. In vain had the belle of the season approached him. In vain had match-making mammas placed their daughters by his side. Nothing came of it, so Eugene Bennet, though eligible, was considered a grape quite sour.

Eugene had worked his way up from comparatively obscurity into notice as an artist, had been criticised, and had succeeded. Poor artists are not considered good game by those having daughters to dispose of: the reverse is the case with those who have passed the Rubicon of criticism in safety: this Eugene had done, and the future of the young man was brighter.

Among the admirers of our hero was one who, like himself, was blessed, or cursed, with diffidence. This feeling had become almost a disease, and Dora Boyce, though the belle of two winters, was as timid and as bashful as a child.

This is perhaps not a good simile, for children of this feet age are not as bashful at ten as their mothers were at twenty. However, Dora admired the works of Eugene, and from sympathy, perhaps, became much interested in the artist himself. This she kept locked up in the casket of her own timidity, but her eyes would wander towards the young man, and eagerly would she listen to the eloquent and impassioned soul of our hero, as he, with an artist friend, would descant on the beauties of, this gem of art or that.

Eugene could speak to men, and had a rare felicity of expression. Dora had noticed Eugene, during his own conversations, and had been surprised at the sudden change of his manner when some gay and zephyr-like being would glide up to him and endeavor to attract his attention. At once the fever-heat of his description would go down to zero, and sink below it.

Like an active terrapin moving across an open space, he made good headway; touched by a word from a woman he would at once cease to move, and drawing his power within himself, would wait until the belle, tired or removed, would pass on to a more congenial spirit. Eugene was not rude, he was simply diffident.

Dora had been introduced to our artist, who heard her name and forgot it, and had it rested there, this sketch would not have been written. Eugene had painted a view of the American Falls, as seen from the Canada side; had infused some of his own spirit into it, and the dreamy beauty of the scene had a charm not often found in paintings of Niagara's queen. The picture was on exhibition.

Separated from the [illegible] screen; sat our hero. He had "dreamed on by," and [illegible] of his studies, which, like the [illegible], was decidedly brown. Visitors came and passed out. At length came Dora Boyce, with a female friend, and at once entered into a spirited criticism of the painting.

This aroused our hero, who, without a desire to listen, could not avoid hearing all that was said. Dora's criticism was just, and as Eugene listened, he saw points hitherto hidden from him, and in his heart he resolved to make the acquaintance of the fair critic. Dora had praised his performance; but had pointed out certain defects. These remarks Eugene knew to be just, and on the departure of the young ladies he left his retirement, and prevailed on the picture-dealer to close the room for the day. All day long he worked at the painting which had been hung up a finished work. The effect produced by his efforts was commensurate with his labors, and at nightfall he left his picture with a sigh, half of regret and half of pleasure.

Dora came once more to see the painting, which was attracting general attention, and found that the only blemi hes which she had noted had been remedied; this surprised her; she sought a solution of the mystery, and found it in noticing the other side of the screen, where Eugene had left his palette and resting-stick. There were the colors as the artist had left them.

A thought struck Dora, and she enquired of the clerk in the store as to the whereabouts of the artist.

"He is not here, miss, to-day, but was here all day yesterday."

"Was he here yesterday morning at ten o'clock?" asked Dora.

"Yes, miss."

Dora turned pale, and held on to the counter for support.

"Let us go," said she to he friend. "I feel faint."

The friends entered the carriage which was in waiting, and Dora, sinking back, gave way to her reflections.

Eugene, through diffidence, was impulsive, and having made up his mind to form the acquaintence of Dora, went to the residence of the young lady's father, and was by him well received. An invitation to return was given and accepted.

"I desire to make the acquaintence of your daughter," said Eugene, in his frank manner.

"She has a correct idea of light and shade. Her remarks on arts show a cultivated taste."

"As to that," said Mr. Boyce, "I know nothing; it is seldom she expresses an opinion on any subject, even here at home, and abroad, I never heard her hazard an opinion."

Eugene saw at once that he had made a mistake in mentioning so much. He departed, and on the following day dressed himself in an elaborate manner, and presented himself at the residence before-mentioned.

"Miss Dora is not at home, sir," said the servant-girl. "Mr. Boyce will be in in a few minutes."

Eugene was astonished. In coming up the street he had looked up at the house, and had caught sight of Dora as she left the drawing-room window.

"Not at home! Well!" and he drew a very long breath.

Taking his hat and cane, without a word to the servant, he made good his retreat. Mr. Boyce learned of the visit and its termination, and was much chagrined thereat.

Dora's excuse was a headache. She was a spoiled child, and so the matter ended for a season.

Eugene felt the slight keenly, and with the slight a feeling to which he had been hitherto a stranger. He had no particular acquaintance with Dora, had seen her, had been introduced as before mentioned, had seen her reflection in a large mirror while in the picture store, had noticed her form and features, and, without realizing it, had fallen in love, or had imbibed a taste of love's bitter waters. Had Dora received him, the matter might have culminated in a matter-of-fact courtship and marriage. Her refusal to see him had caused him to meditate upon the matter, and in the meditation he found himself entangled in the meshes of the rosy god. So bursting into his sister's room, as mentioned in the opening of our story, he said,—

"I told you so!"

"You never told me anything; what is it all about? You must be crazy!"

"Never mind, I'll get out of this, anyway," said her brother, bitterly.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"I mean that I am off for some place, I care not where."

"Explain yourself. I never knew you to be so excited before."

"Lizzie, have my valise packed; I shall take a trip out West, out on the lakes—somewhere—anywhere to get out of this!"

"Eugene, what has happened? Your picture is a success."

"I know it Lizzie, but I must go. Don't ask me any questions, but have my valise packed; I need air, and must leave the city."

"Well, as you please. Your trunk shall be packed right away."

"Never mind the trunk; my valise will do. I shall not stay long anywhere. A trip will do me good."

"You are a genius, and, like all such, are eccentric, so have your own way."

"Don't be severe, my sister."

"No, Eugene, I will not; but I do not understand you."

"I do not understand myself, so let this suffice."

Impetuous and impulsive, the young artist went out from home, and for several minutes wandered from point to point without an aim. Thinking that he had subdued the feeling which had followed him as a shadow from the time of his leaving home. Eugene took passage in the City of Toronto, a steamer plying daily between Toronto and Lewiston. Crossing Lake Ontario, he entered the Niagara River, and in a short time took the cars at Lewiston, for Niagara Falls. Located at the "Cataract House," he passed a few days in wandering around the various points of interest, and then, growing tired, determined to return to his home.

Strolling along the many paths leading from the bridge over Goat's Island, he meditated on things of the past, and grew feverish. Approaching the dressing-room near the "Cave of the Winds," he looked up, and determined to go down and enjoy the novel sensation of being under the great fall. Entering the office he signed his name, and entered a room three feet by seven, and after the usual manner, deposited his valuables in a small tin box, and encased himself in the uncouth garments furnished by the attendants. The figure he presented was something like that of Dr. Kane in his artic dress.

A party had just descended the winding-stair, led on by a guide. Down went the young man, round and round, and finally landed at the base of the tower. And party ahead had just passed the gate—three gentlemen and four ladies—quite a large party. All looked alike to Eugene, who had no eyes for anything, and looked upon the party before him as of so many persons, no more.

The last figure in the party seemed to be somewhat timid, and the others had crossed the first barrier before it had half-crossed it. Eugene followed the figure last noted, and with it received the first shower from the centre fall. This was a tremendous sheet of spray, and the force was so great that it took for a moment the breath from them. The figure seemed about to fall, yet held on to the rail. Eugene saw the danger, and at once placed his arm around the figure, which trembled violently at his touch. This caused Eugene to draw the figure towards him; it looked up, and a shriek which was drowned in Niagara's roar, went up from its lips, and then Eugene saw that he held within his arms the shadow which had haunted him for months.

Dora, for it was that young lady, blushed and trembled, and as the water came leaping and dashing over her, she hid her face in the arm of our hero, and clung to him for support. There was no time for ceremony, none for apology, and carefully Eugene carried the young girl across the barrier, and assisted her from rock to rock, and at length reached the lower tier.

There for a season they rested, and without saying a word looked up at the mighty sheet which was hurling its weight of waters above, below, around and about them. In a moment the willing arm of Eugene was around his companion, and her arm was over his shoulder.

Dora was shedding tears, but Eugene could not perceive this, as the water was running down their face and over their garments. Once across the lower barrier, they halted to rest, and a curious picture they presented. Dora had on a pair of overalls, made of oiled cloth. Over her head was drawn a cowl made of black waterproof cloth, the tunic was made of the same material, tied by a cord around the waist; a pair of felt shoes completed the costume, and there she stood, looking like a nun in Bloomer costume, a sort of water nymph dressed in oil-cloth. Eugene's suit was of one color, a something between a drab and a yellow. He looked something like an Artic monk.

"We are friars of orders gray," said he, with a grim smile. "Allow me to assist you."

Dora blushed, and followed the instructions of her companion, and the winding stairs were reached. It was a long way up, and Dora needed assistance, and the officious arm of the bashful young man grew wonderous bold, and, strange to say, Dora grew weaker; and so they rested, neither saying a word.

Dora's party were dressing when she appeared; she disappeared one way, Eugene another. They reappeared at the entrance. Mr. Boyce was astonished to see the young artist, and insisted on his going with the family to the "International." This Eugene did, walking by Dora's side, but not speaking a word.

After dinner, Dora and Eugene were left alone in the front room of the suite.—Mr. and Mrs. Boyce were wearied with the unwonted exertions of the forenoon, and had retired to enjoy an afternoon nap. The others had gone over the Suspension bridge to view the American Falls from the Canada side. This was out of compliment to Eugene.

For some time the young people sat in silence; they certainly appeared awkward, and looked sheepish. At length Eugene laughed, and made a flourish with his handkerchief, then cleared his throat, ran his hand through his hair, and subsided. Dora made the next advance; she arose from her chair and moved it back, and sat down.

"A beautiful day, miss," said Eugene at last.

"Oh yes!" said Dora, "beautiful!"

The rain was falling in gentle showers.

"The falls are beautiful."

"Yes, sir."

Some views on the centre table presented an idea. They were stereoscopic views, and the stereoscope lay beside them. Eugene saw a way of escape.

"These are fine views; allow me to hold the stereoscope for you."

He did so, and put the pictures in upside down.

"That is wonderful," said Dora.

"It is," said Eugene.

Then they stood like two children. Insensibly the hand of the artist rested on one of Dora's, and as she trembled it became necessary for Eugene to support her; this he did, and at length assisted her to a sofa. They had said but few words, yet seemed to be well acquainted. These bashful people, when they do make a start, seem anxious to make up for lost time.

Eugene was casually outspoken, but now he whispered, and received answers in the same manner. Dora was not deaf, yet Eugene placed his lips close to her ear, and after several preliminaries found the way to her lips.

"Why did you refuse to see me when I called?"

Dora hid her face, but would not for a season answer.

"Tell me, dearest," said Eugene.

Dora blushed yet deeper, and at length in a husky whisper said,—

"I was afraid I had offended you, and could not bear to hear a harsh word from your lips."

"Why?"

"Oh, how can you ask me?"

Something in the young girl's eyes caused him to cease questioning; and the bliss of that moment repaid him for his wandering and his cares.

A month later and Mr. and Mrs. Bennet returned to "The Falls," that they might once more gaze upon the spot made precious to them as being the bridge which had connected the gulf which might have divided them forever. And to them the "Cave of the Winds" has a charm even above the wonder of Niagara's roar.

A Profitable Railway Ride.

How very difficult most Christains find it fulfil these commands. I have often thought, instead of praying, "Open the door to preach Thy word!" we should say, "Lord give us grace to enter when thou dost open the door." Take the case of a railway-journey: a sincere Christian shut up for two or three hours with other people who must stay a certain length of time, who have nothing particular to do, and who, in the majority of cases, are disposed to talk and be polite, who does that child of God speak only of the weather, the crops, the prospects, and never turn the conversation from creation to the Creator? We can discuss the measures of the government, and ignore, One that is "higher than they." We feel a sudden burst of pleasure in discovering that one of our fellow-travelers knows and esteems any of our friends; but how seldom do we take any pains to find out who are acquainted with our dearest Friend! We do not deny the difficulty, even to earnest and loving souls of embarking on this particular course of usefulness. A few years ago seven Methodist were comparing experience on this point. They agreed almost unanimously that they had often felt constrained to address their companions, and had secretly prayed that if it were the Lord's will they should speak to them, they might not get out at the next station, and then waited for the result. Sometimes, alas! if the unconscious cause of their trepidation, remained for an other stage, they still lacked courage to begin, and had prayed for a repetition of the sign.

Still it is possible to overcome all the obstacles, and take up this cross it occasion requires. Travellers may be classed under three heads: those who do not think of God at all; those who think of Him, and enjoy secret communion during the leasure of a journey; and those who not only think of Him themselves, but make others do the same. Said a gentleman one day, "Ah! I always have a glorious time in the tunnels!" If he goes no further, he belongs to our second division; but a step forward into the third would not diminish his private blessing in the dark. We have met with a short sketch of the work as pursued by a lady in France, which is interesting, though we should hesitate to recommend to all our sisters quite so bold a line of conduct. We translate from the "Evangeliste," which furnishes no name; but if the lady is not Miss Bonnycastle, she is some one extremely like her. (Miss B. has now changed her name; but she is better known by the one she bore when so successful a Missionary to the French soldiers.)

"A foreign lady had returned to France, accompanied to work again for the last souls in that great country. She fearlessly accosted everybody, to tell of the Saviour and salvation with such love and power that people were heard [illegible] and reflect. Her husband had [illegible]: 'However painful your absence is to me, I will endure it for a few weeks willingly: the souls of the French and the glory of God are as dear to me as you.'

She took her seat one day in a third-class carriage on her way to Lyons.

"'Here at least,' she said, 'instead of five or six persons, I shall have twenty or thirty, to whom I may be some good, by the grace of God.'

The carriage was very full. There were men in blouses, soldiers who smoked, and passengers of all descriptions. The smokers asked her permission to continue. It was readily granted: soon after she offered a tract to each.

"'Ah! I don't want that,' cried one of them, 'I am a freethinker; I believe there is one Supreme Being, but nothing more. As to the rest, I am a republican; and, if I had the power, I would send into the other world, supposing there is one, all priests and kings.'

"'Do not say so, I beg,' replied the lady. 'The words you have just spoken are very wrong; they show how wicked your heart is. Ah! how greatly you need the Saviour! The book I wish to give you will speak of Him.'

"'I am pretty sure you have not one that will do me,' replied the infidel.

"The lady drew one from the bottom of her bag, which God had doubtless caused her to reserve for this occasion. She handed it to him. He read the title, 'To Freethinkers.'

"'I see it is for me. But I should think you will not find one for this jew here. He has sold me something for seventy-five centimes that is not worth fifty. He is a true son of Israel, he acts like his father Jacob. We will make you umpire, Ma'am.'

"'I bought such another lately,' she answered; 'it cost me fifty centimes more than you have given, so I do not think you have been cheated.'

"The freethinker shook hands with the Jew trader, and having made it up, he took out a bottle of wine and a glass which he offered to his neighbors. At last, turning to the tract-distributor, he said, 'Madam, would you accept a glass of wine?'

"'No, thank you, I do not drink wine so early in the morning; besides, I am not thirsty now.

"'The freethinker next attacked a Zouave, who was smoking his pipe.

"'Poor slaves of soldiers,' he exclaimed, who let yourselves be driven to slaughter like sheep, according to the caprice of the great.'

"'You must not speak against soldiers,' replied the lady. 'I esteem them, and I always stand up for them.'

"The Zouave gave her a look of thanks. The discussion on religion continued, and the brave missionary strove to speak all about their eternal interests.

"'You have each an immortal soul,' she said; 'a terrible future awaits you, if you do not repent of your sins, and look to Jesus crucified for you.' Here the freethinker interrupted her, to return to his republic. 'Look at America and Switzerland. Is not their government worth more than ours?'

"'Yes; but in America and Switzerland they read the Bible, and that is why they can have a republic and live in peace; but you French, who are all unbelievers, could not do as much.'

"The discussion grew warm. Some one produced a second bottle for circulation; but the courageous servant of excitement, seized this one, and, hiding it behind her, addressed herself in a kind, but firm voice, to all the occupants of the carriage. 'Now I claim a moment's silence; I am going to speak to you; listen to me.

"She spoke to this singular audience for some time, exhorting, pressing them to flee from the wrath to come. She told the love, the suffering, and the perfect sacrifice of Calvary she described with emotion the fearful fate of those who despise so great salvation, and the eternal punishment which awaits them.

"'They listened, then made some objections, to which she replied with calmness and force. An old gentleman, who continued reading his paper, smiled approvingly at anything which he thought well. When the train arrived at the terminus, when the wearied voice of the speaker has broken down encouraging results were not wanting.

"'The freethinker offered his hand, and, in a serious and kindly tone, said, 'Ma'am I do not say that you have convinced, but you have given expression to good thoughts, which I shall remember. I thank you for it.' The soldier smiled gratefully, still happy that she had undertaken his defence; the Jew and the other wished her 'a-dieu' most respectfully, and she from the depths of her heart, returned thanks to Him who had enabled her once more to announce the good news of salvation to poor perishing souls."

"'Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days.' In our own land, tracts are as readily received, and we do not find so large a proportion of infidels among the working-class. Kind conversation often reaches those who turn in disgust from "preaching;" especially outside the chapel, where they are not expecting to meet with it. E. WARDT.

Success in Life.

Take earnestly hold of life, as capacitated for and destined to a high and noble purpose. Study closely the mind's bent for labor or a profession. Adopt it early and pursue it steadily, never looking back to the turning furrow, but forward to the ground that ever remains to be broken. Means and ways are abundant to every man's success, if will and action are rightly adapted to to them. Our rich men and our great men have carved their paths to fortune, and by this internal principle—a principal that cannot fail to reward him who resolutely pursues it. To sigh or repine over the lack of inheritence is unmanly. Every man should strive to be creator instead of inheritor. He should bequeath instead of borrow. He should be conscious of the power in him, and fight his own battles with his own lance. He should feel that it is better to earn a crust than to inherit coffers of gold. When once this spirit of self-reliance is learned, every man will discover within himself the elements and capacities of wealth. He will be rich, inestimably rich in self-resources, and can lift his head proudly to meet the noblest among men.

ETERNITY.

Eternity has no gray hairs. The flowers fade, the heart withers, man grows old and dies; the world lies down in the sepulchre of ages; but time wrinkles on eternity!—Stupendous thought! The ever-present unborn, undecaying and undying—theendless chain, compassing the life of God—the golden thread, entwining the destinies of the universe. Earth has its beauties, but old Time shrouds them for the grave; its honors are but the sunshine of an hour, its palaces—they are but gilded sepulchres; its pleasures, they are but as bursting bubbles. Not so in the untried bourne. In the dwelling of the Almighty can come no footsteps of decay. Its way will know no darkening—eternal splendor forbids the approach of night.

Hours! what an endearing word, what pleasing thoughts does it bring to them whose hearses are blessed by virtue, sobriety and happiness. But how sad and wretched are those hearses carried by Intemperance, where a noble husband or a dearly loved son have been reduced by the wine-cup. How miserable the wife or mother. How wretched the unhappy one who is pursuing a course of [illegible]. If you would have happy homes, banish forever the intoxicating wine-cup.

Temperance is not a failure. Thousands who were stolen in infancy have been rescued, gave their whole heart to the principal seemed to have departed here, through the influence of temperance, become men once more.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lassack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $100. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, OCT. 20, 1870.

The Haliburton Railway.

There is every prospect that this road will become a reality. The Town Council has done what it could in the matter, and in a day or two the people will ratify what the Council has done, so that so far as the town is concerned, the beginning this time is auspicious looking.

The County Council too has introduced a By-law which appears in this issue, offering to raise for a bonus to the Grand Junction $75,000, and also $25,000 as a bonus to the Haliburton road, and there is every prospect of this being carried by the people.

Belleville offers a bonus to the Grand Junction of $100,000, and other Municipalities will aid it is believed to the extent of $150,000, or more, perhaps. It is said that there is a contractor ready to take the Grand Junction Road and $400,000 and build it, and bind himself to run so many trains a day over it; and if so, there is no fear for the Grand Junction. These two roads built to this town must necessarily greatly extend our trade relations, and give a st[illegible] ranches of industry not [illegible]ey will open up com[illegible]nd on advantageous [illegible] for Peter[illegible], both Town and County.

A false step of the President of the Haliburton road, Mr. Carnegie, almost lost to the road the bonus from the back country. By reading the act wrong, he sought to compel the County Council to issue $45,000 of Debentures as bonus to the road, because 150 persons living in a certain portion of the Northern Townships asked for a By-law to that effect. The members of the County Council wisely rejected such a scheme, considering that the petition should have been sent to the Township Councils concerned, and let them issue their Debentures accordingly.

If the Council had passed the By-law and the people confirmed it, and the Council then completed the work as the President sought to induce them, then the anomaly of 150 settlers compelling the whole County to issue $45,000 Debentures would have been forced upon the people without law or reason. The Council rejected the petition, and the By-law formed thereon, leaving the company to apply to the Townships. This would have proved fatal to the Haliburton bonus at this time, but that the subject of a Grand Junction bonus was introduced, and then the bonus to the Haliburton road was attached. So much for a Legislator's rendering of Law. It was also urged that to facilitate the railway enterprize, the County Council could pass the By-law, take the vote, and if ratified by the voters, issue the Debentures, and apply to Parliament to relieve the part of the County not interested, from liability therefor—this however was rejected also, lest it might turn out that the President of the road could not or would not be able to control Legislation at will, not a few of the members laughed at the vanity of the proposer, looking on himself as the entire Legislature of Ontario, and forgetting that John Saudfield nods now and then.

The County By-law will be submitted on the 16th of November, in the various Municipalities, and until that we must await results.

The advantages of both roads must be apparent to all. Asphodel and Otonabee will reap the largest benefits. At present, the people of these townships cannot possibly get to the front at certain seasons of the year, and when they can they labour under great disadvantages. As soon as the Grand Junction is in running order there will only be from two to three cents difference in the price of grain at Allandale or Keene and Belleville. This will enable the farmers of Otonabee and Asphodel to realize three to five cents a bushel more than at present, and with half the labour, as their market will be at home instead of being thirty or forty miles distant as now, unless when they come to Peterborough.

The portion of the $100,000 proposed, that will fall to Otonabee will be about $20,000 and there is every reason to believe that increased prices of grain in Otonabee will enable the farmers to pay the whole thing off in four years or so, and so with the other Townships.

There is a difficulty in Asphodel; Hastings, and Norwood, like Cobourg and Port Hope, have each its own interests. Should the road be located through Hastings, jealously will be aroused in Norwood, and vice versa. The Norwood people say they will be satisfied if the location should be between [illegible] does appear fair and [illegible]le is a matter of in[illegible]influences always [illegible] [illegible]l state of the doubt of location [illegible] fears for a successful vote in Asphodel.

Dummer, Douro, and Smith, may argue that they have no interest in the road, but they might as well say they have no interest in any improvements in the County. Can land be 50 to 60 and even 80 dollars in Otonabee or Monaghan, without affecting the price of land in Douro and Smith? not at all; and if the town should become a city in a few years, who would reap the advantages, if not the people of Smith and Douro, and other townships? The Port Hope road has enhanced the value of land in the vicinity of Peterboro, $20 to $30 an acre, and the progress of the town is felt in every township around it. The people should feel this and vote accordingly.

Howorth's Tableaux of the Holy Land is on exhibition in the Music Hall to-night. All who have visited the Hall during the past two nights express themselves highly pleased. Handsome presents are also given away every evening, so that any one attending may not only see the beautiful paintings, but may receive a valuable gift.

We regret to learn by telegraph that Mr. Jas Johnston, Jr., formerly of Ashburnham, died yesterday at Erie, Pennsylvania, of Typhoid fever. Mr. Johnston was quite a young man, and leaves a wife and several children to mourn their sudden bereavement.

At the regular monthly meeting of Protection Fire Company No. 1, Peterboro, Capt. O'Donnel handed in the sum of $19 received from Mr. Sheriff Hall, when it was unanimously resolved that the thanks of this company be tendered to Mr. Hall, for his very liberal donation; being for services rendered at the fire on his premises on the morning of Saturday, Sept. 10th, 1870.

A new School House has been erected this season, by the trustees of section No. 3 North Monaghan. A "Reunion" was held in it on Friday last. Mr. Isaac Campbell ably presided on the occasion. Recitations and music by the pupils, and speeches and music by others was the order of the day. The whole was a decided success. Mr. John Whitfield, one of the trustees, in an appropriate little speech remarked that the building would cost about $1,000 to $1,100. We refer our readers to a full report of the proceedings as given by a correspondent.

Col Grey, who prosecuted the Hon. George Brown for an alleged libel published in the Globe some time ago, lost his suit at the Toronto assizes on Saturday.—Eleven of the twelve Jurors were in favor of a verdict for the Globe, one held out.—Hence the Jury were dismissed. Mr Brown addressed the Jury, and made a most withering speech against the Colonel. Action for libel is the way too many public men seek to save themselves from just criticism. In exposing corruption the greatest latitude is permitted, as was explained by Justice Richards. Mr. John H. Cameron attempted to reply to Mr. Brown, but signally failed.

County Council.

Thursday, 13th Oct., 1870.

The Council met, S. S. Peck, Esq., warden, in the chair. The minutes of the special session was read and confirmed.

The Warden then read the following address.

To the Municipal Council of the County of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The business for which by adjournment you are this time assembled, having been disposed of, and as we are now together, I think it advisable to dispose of the following communications, herewith submitted, which have been received since our last meeting, instead of leaving them over for the incoming Council.

From A. Crawford, in regard to the site of the Lakefield Bridge. From Rev. M. Burnham, and E. Chamberlain, in regard to land illegally sold for taxes, in Otonabee. From G. W. Rainey, requiring a swing to be put in the Locks Bridge. From Wm. Chambers, claiming damages for injury to a horse in consequence of the bad state of the County Road. From E. C. Hill, offering to sell an elegant chandelier for use of Court Room. From the Warden of the County of Carlton, asking a donation for the relief of the sufferers by the late disastrous fires in the Ottawa Country. And I trust that so worthy a call will be met with a grant, in keeping with the great requirements of the case.

In order to comply with the request of the finance committe of last session, the necessary alternations have been made, in order to provide an office for the clerk of the Peace, and when I tendered the key to Mr. Weller, he wished me to say to you, that he was willing to accept of a rent of twenty dollars a year in lieu of the office.

The Jailer has several times complained to me that the Justices of the Peace of the Town were in a habit of sending to Jail, under the vagrant Act, parties who, the believes, cannot be legally committed under the authority of the said Act—and wishes to be instructed by you in the matter.

A correspondence has been had with the different brokers in regard to the sale of the debentures to issue, under the By-law just passed, and I am glad to inform you that we can realize 2½ per cent premium, and it will be necessary for you to determine the dates you require your debentures to fall due.

The bridge at Lakefield is progressing favorable, and will soon be completed. Mr. Stewart, at the request of the committee, has inspected the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek bridges, and his report will be laid before you to day.

In conclusion, I am informed that two very important Railroad schemes are to be brought before you, and I trust you will give each your due and favourable consideration, and take such action as will be for the best interest of the County.

S. S. PECK,
Warden.

October 13, 1870.

On motion of F. Peck, seconded by Mr. Garbutt. The following, viz: Messrs. Gilmour, Miller, Garbutt, McDonald and Coughlin, were named as committee on the Warden's address.

On motion of Mr. McDonald, seconded by Mr. F. Peck. Messrs Carnegie, Scott, and Read were heard in the matter of the Haliburton Railway scheme. As a deputation from the provisional directors, Mr. Carnegie presented a petition from portions of townships praying for a proposed scheme to raise a bonus from those petitioning for the by-law. The petition has 159 names on it, out of a possible 310 or 312.

Mayor Scott then addressed the Council referring to the act incorporating the Haliburton Railway Company. He also explained the By-law about to be present. by the Company on behalf of the petitioners.

On motion of Mr. McDonald, seconded by Mr. Wood, The By-law granting aid by way of bonus from certain portions of the County of Peterboro, in favor of the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway, was read a first time.

On motion of Mr. McDonald the Council went into Committee of the whole on the By-law, Mr. McDonald in the chair.

Mr. Walton submitted the following, that it was unsafe for the council to pass the By-law as the act required, and it was to be regretted that such a law existed. He felt that the part of those townships petitioning were not able to meet those debentures, then the County would have to meet them, and other townships would have to foot the bill.

Mr. Miller agreed with Mr. Walton that the whole County would be held accountable for the money. He was in favor of each township issuing its own debentures.

Mr. Hunter thought that the Provisional Directors had not gone about the matter in the right way. They feared that if submitted in any other way the By-law would be defeated. He felt that the road was not going through the proper section of country, as the road was running through an unsettled tract of those townships.

Mr. Carnegie remarked that the country through which the road is to run is able to pay the amounts required, as Glanmorgan consisted of excellent land, which would soon be settled.

Mr. Hunter doubted Mr. Carnegie's assertion, as the men who have been making roads say to the contrary, hence the matter is unsettled.

Mr. Scott thought the County was not liable for the amount; only the portions included in By-law.

The Warden believed the County would be held for the whole amount, but he held that the act of parliament referred to, left no alternative for the County Council but to satisfy themselves that the act has been so far complied with, and then pass the By-law.

Messrs. Coughlin, McCarthy and F. Peck addressed the Council on the subject.

Mr. Coughlin moved, seconded by Mr. Brown, That a commissioner be appointed to visit the back country and report on the quality of the land, as all reports and information comes through interested speculators.

Dr. Clegg was in favor of the road, but he would not vote to assess his township, or any portion of it, until he had the consent of the ratepayers. There were no settlers in the portion of Anstruther referred to—not one—hence no settlers from that part could be on the petition.

Mr. Hunter moved that the committee rise and sit to-morrow.

Then followed some general discussion of a very mixed nature, and cross-firing.

When it was moved that certain blanks be filled in.

Mr. Hunter's motion was carried.

The committee arose and asked leave to sit to-morrow.

Mr. Coughlin moved, seconded by Mr. Hunter,—That the Council do this day visit the Mud Lake Bridge, and report to-morrow on the condition of the Bridge, and as to whether it be according to contract and instructions given.

Mr. Gilmour thought the motion cast reflections on the committee, which should not be done until there were reasons for it, and until the committee reported.

Mr. Rogers moved that all after the word "Mud Lake Bridge" be omitted. The motion in the amended form was carried.

Moved by Mr. Hunter, seconded by Mr. Wood, That a legal opinion be taken as to the liability of timber limits licensed in this municipality to assessment, which was carried.

Mr. Coughlin moved, seconded by Mr. Brown,—That this Council appoint three Commissioners to view the portions of this County which several explorers condemn, for some purpose, and of which the majority of the ratepayers is entirely ignorant as to the value thereof.

After an animated discussion on this subject, in which all the Council took part, the motion was put and lost.

The Council adjourned to 3 o'clock p.m.

EVENING SESSION.

The Council met. The Warden in the Chair.

The Warden read a communication from T. Ledyard, in reference to a lot bought by him for taxes, Mr. Ledyard wanting the money and interest back. The letter was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Peck, Mr. Choate moved for a grant of $50, towards aiding in erecting an Agricultural Hall in Warsaw. This was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. McCarthy, the Warden was authorized to provide conveyances to take members of the Council to visit the Mud Lake Bridge.

On motion of Mr. Coughlin, Mr. Gilmour read the report of committee on the Warden's address.

The Committee on the Wardens' address beg leave to report:

In regard to the state of the Lakefield Bridge, they recommend the committe on said bridge to ascertain if said claims be illegal, and if so, make such arrangements as they see fit in order to make a speedy and final settlement.

In petition of Mr. Burnham, and E. Chamberlen alleging the illegal sale of lands for taxes be correct, the taxes should be remitted and expenses charged to the Township to which it relates.

As the season of the year is too far advanced for repairing the Locks Bridge, the committee would recommend that the notice of Mr. Rainey be referred to the next Council.

They recommend that the complaint of Wm. Chambers, be referred to the Finance committee, in order to be satisfied with the justice of the claim. And that the offer of E. C. Hill be referred to the committee, on County property.

The communication from the Warden of the County of Carlton, is deserving of the consideration of the Council, and this committee would recommend that a sum be granted to assist the unfortunate sufferers in the Ottawa district.

They recommend that if the Clerk of the Peace declines occupying the office provided for him, no sum be allowed him for rent, as formerly.

The complaint of the jailor requires some consideration, and your committee would recommend that the Warden be instructed to take such advice as he thinks fit, and that the jailor act according to his instructions.

Your committee are glad to find the financial standing of this County so good as to command 2½ per cent premium, for its debentures.

The railway schemes will doubtless, receive that consideration which their importance demands. All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. W. GILMOUR, Chairman.

The report was received and adopted.

Mr. Pearce gave a statement of money paid toward the bridges, the amount paid is $110.76,35. $1,800 of which is for a loom not in contract.

The Council adjourned till to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

FRIDAY.

The Council met, all the members present. S. S. Peck, Esq., in the chair.

The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

Moved by Mr. McCarthy, seconded by Mr. McDonald,—That the thanks of this Council are due to the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek bridge committee for their efficient superintendence of the building of the Bridges.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Brown, seconded by Mr. Coughlin,—That the Council grant the sum of one hundred dollars to the Township of Asphodel for re-building roads therein. This was refered to the Finance Committee.

Moved by Mr. McDonald, seconded by Mr. Choate,—That the deputation from provisional directors of the Grand Junction and the Peterboro and Haliburton Railways be allowed to address the Council on behalf of said Companies.

Messrs. Kelso, Scott, Robertson, Grover and Carnegie addressed the Council.

Moved by Mr. Millar, seconded by Mr. F. Peck,—That a By-law in accordance with the following preamble be submitted to the ratepayers of this County.

A By-law to provide for the aiding and assisting in the constructing of the Grand Junction Railway, and the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway, by raising by way of loan the sum of $75,000 in aid of the construction of the Grand Junction Railway and the sum of $25,000, in aid of the construction of the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway, to be given to the said companys respectively, by way of bonuses.—Carried.

On the yeas and nays being called for, they were taken down as follows:

In favour of the motion, Messrs. McDonald, Peck E., Coughlin, Brown, Buck, Hunter, Clegg, Wood, Millar, Garbutt, Gilmour and Blezard.—12.

The Committee on Finance beg leave to report: That they have considered the claims of Mr. Chambers, for $50 damages to a horse said to have been injured on the boundary line road between Asphodel and Dummer, the payment of which amount they cannot recommend, as the road referred to was not, at the time the accident took place, out of repair.

That in reference to a communication of J. D. Ledyard, Esq., claiming $37.43 with interest and expenses, amounting in the total to $69.55; they cannot recommend the payment of this amount, but they do recommend that the Warden take such steps in the matter as he may deem most advisable.

The Debentures shortly to be issued under authority of the By-law No. 355, your committee recommend the whole issue be made payable at twenty years from date.

That they further recommend that in future the Clerk be instructed to keep an Order Book in which shall be centered the proper officers, the application for all books, articles, &c., necessary for the Court House, Jail and Registry Office.

The sum of four hundred dollars be granted by this Council to assist the sufferers by the Ottawa fires.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Mr. Wood moved, seconded by Mr. Hunter, That Mr. McCarthy be put on the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridge Committee instead of Mr. P. Pearce, as Mr. McCarthy would confer in attending the duty. Mr. Millar thought as the work was almost done it would not be wise.

The Warden read a report from Mr. Stewart, Engineer.

ENGINEERS REPORT.

To the Committee on Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

GENTLEMEN, I have to report for your information the state of the works on the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges, and such remarks and suggestions thereon as I consider the state of the works requires.

Mud Lake Bridge:—The works on this bridge were so far completed last year as to allow it to be used for public traffic. But the anchorage not being sufficient some damage was sustained during the winter and spring. Several additional anchors were put on since and have tended to keep the bridge in its place during the summer, and allowed an uninterrupted highway for public travel, and proved of the greatest public benefit to the County. The whole success of the work, therefore, is involved in the subject of anchorage, and it will be necessary for the Committee to devote their attention fully to that subject in order that success may be attained, in the most economical and substantial manner. I would therefore recommend that additional stone anchors be provided and placed at such intervals, between the present anchors, as the state of the case may require. I would recommend that twelve additional stones be procured for this bridge, and care should be taken that they be of the full size required by the specifications (25 cubic feet.)

The aprons at each end are not in a satisfactory state. The specifications require that these aprons be placed at a slope of one foot in twenty, but as now constructed the slope is much heavier at low water, and thereby making the entrance to the bridge at least highly inconvenient. It was also recommended that the aprons should form a strong connecting link between the bridge and the shore abutments. It appears, however, that the weight of the aprons simply rest on those of the bridge thereby adding nothing to the stiffness of the structure when bending in the centre causes a draw from each end. With the exception I think the contractor has fulfilled his contract [illegible] it was possible under the [illegible] severe trials he has been subjected [illegible]

Pigeon Creek Bridge:—This bridge is not yet completed, and owing to its unfinished state, and the want of additional anchors, some damage was sustained in consequence of the severe storms last year and the early part of the present. The bridge, however, has been passable, and constantly used by the public who appear to fully appreciate its value. Like the Mud Lake bridge, additional anchors are required, and I have no doubt that when the contract is fulfilled, and the necessary anchors attached the work will give satisfaction. It is to be regretted that the land abutments had not been completed, and the bridge firmly attached to them before the storms of last year jarred the structure so severely.

The piering of the planks was not then completed either, and in fact it is only being finished at the present time.

The shore abutments are required by the specifications to extend 50 feet in length into the water. I find, however, that they are being built only 25 feet. The west piers are nearly completed of those dimensions, and one of the east piers is in a forward state. I am not aware of the committee sanctioning this change, or, if the contractor has done it on his own responsibility. I am disposed to the opinion that much more depends upon these shore connections than many are aware of, and it will be perceived that if these piers are short, and the fastenings of the bridge with them, not secure, a considerable bending of the bridge at the centre might draw the ends of the bridge out from between these piers and allow them to drift. I deem it my duty therefore to call attention particularly to this matter.

The aprons of this bridge are also defective as regards the slope and connections although the easter one is not yet completed.

The anchors do not appear to hold so well as those of the Mud Lake bridge, this may be owing to the matter of the bottom, which being covered with vegetable matter, allows the stones to slide more easily. I would recommend the strengthening of this bridge, and the addition of eight more anchors.

When the design of this bridge was first proposed, I thought of placing light timbers along the inside of the hand railing, and firmly securing them down on the planking, this was for the two-fold purpose of lessening the flow of water on the bridge during high winds, but principally by securing the planking when loosened for the action of ice or waves and preserving them from being removed from their places. I am strongly of the opinion still that these timbers would be of service, if not at present perhaps some future time, if the committee does not feel disposed to incur the cost at present.

Respectfully submitted
By your obedient servant,
GEO. A. STEWART,
C. E.

The Warden then remarked, as chairman, that the committee had to labor under many disadvantages, the committee are desirous of finishing the bridge, but more desirous of resigning if so required.

Moved by Mr. Blezard, seconded by Mr. F. Peck,—That this Council after visiting and inspecting the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek bridges express their entire satisfaction of the conduct of the committee in charge of said works, and they are hereby authorised to take such steps as they see fit in putting the necessary extra anchorage as recommended by the engineer

The Warden mentioned a case of a destitute family in Ennismore, when Mr. Garbutt moved, seconded by Mr. F. Peck,—That the said Mrs. Hogan be paid the sum of $30, and that the rule requiring that this be referred to the finance committee be suspended. Left in the hands of Mr. McCarthy.

The Council adjourned.

Reunion.

A reunion in connection with the opening of the new school house in S. S. No. 3 North Monaghan, was held on Friday, the 14th inst. The day being fine, a very respectable turn out of the parents and children of the section as well as a number of teachers and other guests, who had been invited by the good people of the section to enjoy the amusement of the evening and to partake of their hospitality, filled their appearance at the school-room at one o'clock.

Considered as the first of the kind ever held in the place, and the shortness of the time the teacher had to prepare the pupils, it was a decided success, and must be very encouraging to him, as well as to the parents and Trustees of the section. The first part of the programme consisted of music and recitations by the pupils. Miss McGill, who trained the pupils in singing for the occasion, presided at the organ; and considering the limited time they had for practice, they certainly acquitted themselves very creditably, as their singing was remarked and appreciated by all present who had a soul for music. Where all did so well, it is scarcely right to particularize, or draw any invidious distinctions, but we think the singing by Miss Berry, and the Misses Bella Birney, deserves special mention, as their pieces were remarkably well rendered, Miss Berry singing alone, and the Misses Birney together.

In the recitations, the pieces, with few exceptions, were well selected, well committed to memory, and clearly and articulately recited. Recitations were given by Masters C. Leary, W. Leary, R. H. Leary, W. Berry, F. Birney and C. Birney; and also by the Misses Berry and Spillaberry. All present were struck with the masterly way in which many of the pieces were recited, and on the whole, the recitations were such as to reflect great credit on the pupils and teacher. And here, as in the music, we cannot refrain from making special mention of the manner in which Masters W. Leary, R. H. Leary, W. Berry and F. Birney acquitted themselves. Master W. Leary recited the "Defence of the Bridge" in a manner that would have been a credit to greater experience, and more mature years.

After the recitations and music by the pupils, all repaired to the Town Hall, adjoining, where they partook of an excellent tea prepared by the ladies of the section, whose culinary reputation has long since been established.

Ample justice having been done to the good things, and the groaning tables considerably relieved, all returned to the school room to hear the second part of the programme, which comprised speeches and music. We need scarcely say, that the music of this part was very fine, as the names of the young ladies who kindly came from a distance to assist, viz: the misses Lumsden, Kennedy and McCarter, should be a sufficient guarantee of the fact. Very appropriate addresses were delivered by the following gentlemen: Messrs. Stratton, Local Supt., W. Wood, Lumsden, Laing and Jas. Campbell, the teacher in the section. Were we to go into the details of each speech, it would make our communication too long; suffice it to say that they were all well to the point and of a practical nature, and each speaker very justly eulogized the Trustees of the section for their zeal and energy in erecting such a very commodious and comfortable school room. It would be an injustice not to particularize in some way the most excellent, practical and amusing address of our worthy Supt. We scarcely ever heard the subject of education more plainly and practically dealt with; but if he he had not ploughed with my heifer he would no' have known my riddle, which may serve as an instance of the advantage of having the right man in the right place. We will not attempt to give anything like a synopsis of the address, as we consider any remarks we might make on it here, would only detract from, instead of doing any thing like justice to it. We might instance one of the many examples in it of showing the superior advantages derived from having a good teacher. "A boy attending school up until he is fourteen years of age, will in that time gain, at least, two years' education by being under a good teacher; now, a boy at that age, would be worth $160 a year, so that in a school of twenty-five boys, there would be five thousand dollars gained to the section in sixteen years, by keeping a good teacher, a sum sufficient to more than pay the teacher's whole salary for the time."

After the various votes of thanks, customary on such occasions, had been given, the pleasures of the evening were brought to a conclusion by singing the National Anthem, when all dispersed highly pleased with the entertainment of the evening, and not a few speaking of it as one of the best entertainments ever given in the place.—Com.

Never doubting, never fearing,
Never counting time as long;
Happy visions round thee fleeting,
Life's to thee a solemn song.

Onwards! Templar! lo! the starry
Goal, above thee glimmers bright,
Banishing life's clouds of sorrow,
Rendering fair, the pall of night,
With its glory and the splendour,

Onwards! Templar! toil and labour,
Though life's hill be steep and high,
Though dark trials, sad, surround thee,
Though the night of Hell may try,
To oppose thine onward progress,
Thou shalt conquer, presently.

Thou shalt conquer, doubt it, never!
Thou shalt reach the goal, o'er long;
Stand thou but erect, and ever
Rest on Faith—be hopeful, strong—
And Angelic hosts shall greet thee
With a grand triumphal song!

Onwards! Templar! speed thou onwards!
Hope points out the happy way,
Where in glory, softly gleaming,

Guiding, aye—the Templar onwards
From the night, unto the day.

Popular Demonstration Against The Pope.

"After the Papal troops had left the Leonine City, the Swiss and Palatine Guards remaining in accordance with the capitulation, a picket of bersaglieri was posted on this side of the bridge in order to prevent the soldiers from crossing the river. But this did not mean that the people should not cross. In a few minutes the space in front of the Vatican was full of people waving tri-colour cockades, who, picking up towards the Papal residence, began hissing and bowling in a frightful manner. The pope became alarmed and sent immediately for Count Arnim. On the entrance of the Prussian Minister, the Pope came forward and begged that he would go at once to Gen. Cadorna and ask him to send some troops to re-establish order. The soldiers had fired on the populace, and things were looking very serious. Count Arnim left the Pope, and on his way met Gen. Angioletti, and asked to consult at once with the Pope's request. Of course the answer was that he had no authority in the matter, and Gen. Cadorna himself must be consulted. They both proceeded to Piazza Colonna. Gen. Cadorna stated that before signing the capitulation he had asked Gen. Kanzler whether he believed that Swiss and Palatine guards would suffice to keep order and protect the Pontiff. Gen. Canzler's answer had been so clear that it left no doubt whatever that if he (Gen Cadorna) should, after the capitulation was signed, send a body of men, however insignificant, across the Tiber, it might be interpreted as a breach of faith. Count Arnim returned to the Vatican, and the Pope seeing no way to escape wrote an autograph letter to Gen. Cadorna, asking him to send the Italian soldiers to protect him from the populace. Gen. Cadorna telegraphed to Florence for instructions, and the Pope's demands were complied with. A contrast

Can a state of things last long, in which liberty and civilization are divided from ignorance and despotism only by a river, so that while men enjoy on this side all the blessings coming from an enlightened government, on the other side men as patriotic as they, must serve and suffer under Papal rule; so that the soldiers of King Victor Emanuel in the morning defend Italian independence and in the evening Papal tyranny?—Correspondent N. The Latest Fashion in Clergymen.

He believes that "religion is not the gloomy and formal thing" that it is made out to be in seminaries. In seminaries, pale knock-kneed young men, with long hair, hollow chears, and bad digestions, eat Graham crackers, and read Jonathan Edward,s and practice the writing of elaborate sermons, and never take a walk, and are afraid of a horse, and wear black coats and blush painfully when young women look at them.

No; religion is a cheerful thing. So he wears a moustach. He says nothing forbids the devoutest follower of Christ to keep his liver in good order; and that, if a fast trotter conduces to that effect, why he shall get one. He holds that the weaker breathern are very weak, if they think this glass of wine is worse for him than their strong coffee is for them. Why should not a minister set forth to his fellow sinners the infinite merits of the Saviour, without tying up his neck in wite muslin? So he valiantly turns down his shut collar and his conservatives deacons are lucky if he does not wear a necktie of some light shade, and smoke cigars in the outskirts of the village.

The live man in the ministry never preaches; he talks. Christ is not to him an abstraction, he says, but his own flesh and blood brother, who loves to be addressed familiarly. So, when preaching and praying, he is not averse to a little slang—provided it is not of the kind called sermoness. What harm is there in a joke from the pulpit? In short, the new Timothy is only a young gentleman with more blood than brains; with more ability to talk fluently than capacity for thinking; about as spiritual-minded as a stock broker, and not so well mannered; as witty as a sophomore; as noisy as a stump speaker; as displeasing a person to anybody who likes spiritual and moral teachers to be men of clear heads and clean hearts as any person that can well be conceived of.—"Nation."

Management of Brooms.—If brooms are wet in boiling suds once a week, they will become very tough, will not rot the carpet, last much longer, and always sweep like a new broom. A very dusty carpet may be cleaned by setting a pail of cold water out by the door, wet the broom in it, knock it to get off all the drops, sweep a yard or so, then wash the broom as before and sweep again, being careful to shake all the drops off the broom and not sweep far at a time. If done with care, it will clean a carpet very nicely, and you will be surprised at the quantity of dirt in the water. The water may need changing once or twice, if the carpet is very dusty. Snow sprinkled over a carpet, and swept off before it has time to melt and dissolve, is also nice for renovating a soiled carpet. Moistened Indian-meal is used with good effect by some house-keepers.—"Michigan Courier."

This is to certify that during the winter of 1868 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her sore suffering, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong, Pure and Rich Blood — Increase of Flesh and Weight — Clear Skin and Beautiful Complexion, Secured to ALL.

RADWAY'S
SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT

has as is the most astonishing cures. Prompt, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes under the influence of this truly WONDERFUL MEDICINE, that

Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, uncured and badly treated Venereal, in its many forms, Glandular diseases, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Blotches in the Glands, and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, Erysipelas Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Ring Worms, Salt Rheum, Pimples, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tetters, Cancer in the Womb, and all Weakening and Painful Discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the sanative range of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and a few days use will prove to any person using it, either of these forms of disease, its potent power to cure them.

Sarsaparillian Resolvent is the great remedy for the cure of Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ring Worms, Tetters, Ringworm, Scurfiness, Blotches, Pimples, Blackheads, Grubs, Worms, Scurvy, Barber's Itch, Scaly Eruptions, Boils, Carbuncles, Ulcers, Sores, Scrofulous Sores, Cancer in the Womb, Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Dropsy, Dropsical Swellings, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Suppression of Urine, Bright's disease, Albuminous Urine, all cases where there are Brick dust deposits or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid dark, bilious appearance, and white bone dust deposits, and where there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the Back, and along the Loins. In all these conditions Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, aided by the application of Radway's Ready Relief to the Spine and small of the Back, and the Bowels regulated with one or two of Radway's Regulating Pills per day, will soon make a complete cure. In a few days, the patient will be enabled to look and discharge his water nearly without pain, and the Urine will be restored to its natural clear, and amber or sherry color.

THE WASTES OF THE BODY are supplied with new, healthy and vigorous blood. Any person can rapidly see that Sarsaparillian Resolvent is making New Bone, Muscle, Sinew, Nerve, Brain and Nervous Tissue, for it is composed of these elements. All of its constituents are wonderful in healing, and strengthening. It Purifies, Cleanses, Revives and restores only the best blood to the proper channels. Diseases and Corruption. CONSUMPTION, ABSCESS, SWELLING, DROPSY, SYPHILIS, CANCER, TUMOR, &c., are all of a scrofulous character, and as such are within the curative range of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent!

1. That scrofula, in whatever name designated, is the result of deposits from the blood, induced or caused by Chronic inflammation. That those deposits take place when the blood is poor, weak, watery, and impurities building in solution its power on nutrients, from the presence of some virus or poison in the blood, as Mercury, Calomel, Corrosive Sublimate which is the Corrosive Chloride of Mercury, or other excessive use in medicines and which enter largely in the common sarsaparillas, NOT ASSIMILATED OR CHANGED FROM THEIR UNNATURAL CONDITION.

2. That unless the repairs or nutriments are greater than the waste, their decomposition and decay will supervene, and the powers of life become exhausted.

3. That the dying body cannot be sustained on any treatment of medication that destroys the system, or fails to nourish the blood the only medium through which the vital forces are preserved, and on which the growth of the body depends.

4. That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a want never before possessed or known to exist in medicine; that the now acknowledged principle in Chemical science, which has been brought to such a perfect system of cure, is exhibited as follows:

1. Its great power in assimilating the food in its fast stage of distillation, in the process of digestion, as rhyme and chyle with the nourishing elements of blood, repairing from three pints to one and a half pounds before they are taken up by the tissues, and are formed into blood. Here we see how its wonderful power in changes the system with the vast essence or principle that forms blood. It goes on the body, and its chemical action on the blood is as primitive and complete result on corporeal system, using it refine material to element, out of which the virus of disease is formed.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF is the best, cheapest and most of strong's that can be used for Fever and Ague, Bilious and other Fevers.

NOT ONE
person out of a million, in the ever to much exposed to Fever and Ague, Chills will ride in Radway's Ready Relief and keep their bowels open with Radway's Pills. Residents in the West who have had to endure long attacks of Fever and Ague, and Chills, for a few months' treatment, are keeping themselves and families free from Fever and Ague, Chills and Fevers. Remember, a few drops in water or two dollars per year spent for Radway's Ready Relief and Radway's Pills is enough.

Every Traveller should afford instant ease to all. Prepare a few drops in water, and sip. Bathe the face, hands, and stomach with the Ready Relief.

N.B.—Be sure that every bottle has an Indian Rubber Cupper, and all Drugs, &c., and all Dr. Radway's Offices, No. 87 Maiden Lane, New York, and 1,231 Paul Street, Montreal, Canada.

CAUTION.

CORNWALL BLANKETS.

THE Cornwall Manufacturing Company beg to caution the public against a spurious shoddy imitation of their celebrated BLANKETS, now being imported into this country from England, and got up so as to cheat the public into the belief that they are of Canadian manufacture. The style and general appearance of the Cornwall Blankets have been closely copied, and so have the shape and printing of the tickets, except that the words "Cornwall Manufacturing Company" are omitted, and the words "Canadian Manufacture" substituted. Persons desiring a really good and genuine article will have to see that the words "Cornwall Manufacturing Company" are on the ticket of each pair of Blankets.

Select Poetry.

Hope for the Best.

BY PROF. WHITWORTH

Hope for the best, there is energy in it:
Courage will stand rough Adversity a test;
Strive, strive for the palm, and you'r certain to win it—
You may be tried now, but it's all for the best.

Rough rain-clouds are gathering, greater and greater,
Obscuring the heavens so recently fair;
There is a rainbow behind, to come sooner or later,
And the watchword of wisdom is—Never Despair.

Try again, try again, there is always a turning
The cause may be long, but the end you must find;
Look firmly before you, all obstacles spurning,
For a fixed resolution will not look behind.

Fail at first, never mind, others did so before you—
Courage and prudence were never in vain;
The reward of your toil must be hovering o'er you—
Have patience and faith, try again, try again.

Hope for the best, it cannot be for ever;
The hardest of trials must all have an end;
Energy knows not the meaning of never;
Things may come to the worst, but they're likely to mend.

Hope for the best there is fortitude in it;
Patience will triumph o'er poverty's tests;
Strive, strive for the palm, and you're certain to win it,
And if you are tried now, why, it's all for the best.

Louis Napoleon's Escape from Ham.

Among the remarkable events in the career of Napoleon there is none of more thrilling interest than his escape from the Castle of Ham. To the success of this attempt the Emperor owned his throne. Had it failed, he would have again become the laughing-stock of Europe as a Quixotic adventurer, and been spared the splendid failture of later life.

On the 6th of October, 1840, at midnight, Louis Napoleon, then thirty-two years of age, was taken from his cell in the Conciergerie and placed in a carriage to be conveyed to a feudal stronghold about ninety miles northeast of Paris. This was the fortress of Ham, to which he was sentenced to perpetual prisonment by the the Chamber of Peers for his second attempt to dethrone Louis Phillippe. Within its massive walls, garrisoned by four hundred men, sixty being on duty all the time, the prince had a few steadfast friends to share his captivity. Among those was his valet, Thelin, who in early life had been a page of the Empress Josephine. He afterwards faithfully served her daughter, Hortense, and accompanied the prince, her son, on all his ill-starred adventures. Though acquitted by the court, he requested and obtained permission to share his young master's imprisonment. Another faithful adherent was Count Montholon, who, having followed the first Napoleon from victory to exile, and witnessed his death at St. Helena, manifested similar devotion to his reputed nephew. At her earnest solicitation, the Countess was permitted to share her husband's captivity. Dr. Conneau, the devoted physician of Hortense, who in her will requested that he should always remain near her son, accompanied him on the Bolonge expedition, and was sentenced to five years imprisonment.

The apartments occupied by Louis Napoleon were those formerly tenanted by Prince Polignac, the Minister of Charles X, after his overthrow in 1835. He was allowed as much freedom as was consistent with safety; but the precautions used for preventing his escape for a long time baffled his hopes. Nearly six years passed away before a favorable opportunity occurred. About a year before, Dr. Conneau's term of imprisonment having nearly expired, the government remitted the remainder. At his earnest request, however, he was allowed to stay in the fortress as physician to the prince. Both he and Thelin were now free to enter and leave the castle, subject only to the usually regulations. For eight days workmen had been employed in repairing the staircase and corridors of the building occupied by the prince and his friends. Their ways and the precautions used by the guard in letting them in and out of the fortress were carefully studied. It was observed that when they entered the outer gate of the castle they were obliged to pass, one by one, under the inspection of a sergeant and keeper. On leaving in the evening, they were restricted to the same rigid scrutiny, the commandant being then always present.

It was also noticed that, while the movements of the workmen within the citadel were carefully watched, when they went out to get tools or other working materials the usual vigilance was relaxed. As at such times they passed across the grand courtyard under the windows of the commandant and in view of the garrison, no suspicions were excited, and they were freely allowed to pass through the gate and over the drawbridge. Having obtained this information, Louis Napoleon determined to escape in the disguise of a workman.

Arrangements were accordingly made for the attempt on Saturday, the 23 of May, 1846, at seven o'clock in the morning. This time was fixed upon because at that hour only one keeper would be at the bottom of the stairs, the other having gone for the public journal, while the commandant seldom rose before eight. It was very important also to reach Valenciennes in season to take the four o'clock train for Belguim. At last the day came to carry out the project for which everything was in readiness. It was, however, frustrated by what seemed an unfortunate accident. The arrival of some of the prince's friends compelled a postponment of the attempt till the following Monday. The delay was alarming, for there would then be two keepers instead of one at the foot of the stairs, and it was doubtful whether there would be workmen enough about the fortress to cover the escape. Wishing to turn his friends' inopportune visit to advantage, the prince borrowed the courier's passport for his valet, Thelin, who he said was about to take journey. He had previously procured one for himself from a friend in Paris.

Sunday passed amid great anxiety. As the repairs were nearly finished, it seemed doubtful whether many workmen would return to the fortress on the next day. Thelin, to make this more probable, asked a them to put up shelves in a recess which was used for a cellar. Besides the danger of being detected by the guards and doorkeepers, there would be a great risk in meeting the workmen, who were moving in all directions, under the superintendence of a contractor and an officer of engineers.

At an early hour on Monday, the 25th of May, 1864, the prince, Dr. Conneau, and Thelin, with their shoes off, to avoid making any noise, watched behind their window-curtains for the arrival of the workmen in the courtyard. No sound broke the deep stillness but the measured tramp of the sentinels. Singularly enough, the very soldier whom Louis Napoleon was particularly anxious to avoid was that morning on guard before his door. This man had long been a confidant of the commandant, and had attracted the attention of the prince by his rigid surveillance over the workmen, scrutinizing their appearance and questioning them about their movements. It seemed a torturn hope to attempt to deceive this Argus. There was danger that he would not be relieved before seven o'clock, and it was unsafe to wait after that hour because three guards would then be at the wicket.

Luckily the hour of mounting guard had been changed, in consequence of a review on Sunday, and at six o'clock the dreaded sentinel was removed. It had been arranged that Thelin should indoce the workmen and supervisors to accompany him to the dining-room to take a morning dram. Then he was to go down stairs in front of the prince, and thus attract to himself the attention of the keepers. In crossing the courtyard, Thelin was to follow Louis Napoleon, and divert the attention of any who might happen to address him.

The prince was not long in preparing his toilet. He first put on a dress like that of a traveling clerk. Over this he drew a carpenter's soiled blouse and a pair of dirty trowsers. The rest of his costume consisted of a blue apron, tied in front, a wig of long black hair, an old cap, and heavy sabots. With his face and hands smirched, and his cherished moustache sharved off, the metamorphosis was complete. He had concealed in his breast two letters, which would inevitably reveal his indentity if he were searched on the frontier; but he decided to take that risk. One was from the Emperor Napoleon to his mother, full of proud hopes for her boy, and the other was from Hortense herself. They were memorials of brighter days.

Leaving the workingmen drinking in the dining-room, Thelin went down stairs, followed by a grimy-looking man in soiled clothes, with an old clay pipe in his mouth and a board on his shoulder. It was Louis Napoleon. While the valet engaged the attention of one of the keepers, who wished him a pleasant journey, the other drew back to avoid being hit by the board which concealed the familiar face of the supposed workman. As the prince passed into the courtyard, a journeyman locksmith, who had followed him down stairs, seemed about to speak to him; but was prevented by Thelin,, who contrived a pretext to send the fellow up-stairs again. On passing before the first sentinel, the prince's pipe happened to drop from his mouth. As he stooped to pick it up, the soldier looked at him mechanically and passed on.

As he walked along, the prince met many persons perfectly familiar with his face and figure and deeply interested in detecting him. Near the sutler's shop he passed close to the officer of the guard. Not far off of an officer of engineers and a contractor of the works were looking over some papers. His road led him through a score of soldiers sunning themselves in front of the guard-house. The drummer looked up supercilliously at the man with the plank; but the sentinel did not appear to notice him.

The gate-keeper, standing at the door of his lodge, gazed at Thelin, who to attract his attention, was playing with Ham, the prince's dog, a pet of the garrison, which was held by a leash. The sergeant, who was standing by the side of the wicket, looked steadily at the prince; but a sudden movement of the plank, which nearly grazed the face of the soldier, caused him to turn aside. He then drew the bolt and opened the door, with his head averted. The prince passed out, followed by Thelin, who wished the gate-keeper "good day."

Between the two drawbridges the prince was startled at the approach of two workmen whom he could hear expressing surprise at not knowing him. To conceal his face, he shifted the plank from one shoulder to the other. The movement seemed to increase the curiosity of the workmen, and as they stepped near, as if about to speak to him, he thought discovery inevitable, when he heard one them exclaim: "Oh, it is Berthoud!" This surprising mistake revived his drooping spirits. But the danger was not yet over.

While Thelin went for a carriage, the prince walked round the town of Ham to St. Sulpice. There he waited for the arrival of the cabriolet. When it came up he threw away his plank and wooden shoes, jumped into his seat, seized the reins and drove rapidly towards St. Quentin. The two travelers were soon startled to see two mounted gendarmes from Ham following them at full speed. Their apprehensions were speedily relieved, for the horsemen turned off toward Peronne. At each change of horses Thelin tried to conceal his face with his handkerchief; but was nevertheless recognised by several persons. One of them was the commissary of police, who was on his way to Ham. A women who had often seen him, expressed surprise that the prince, whose health he inquired about; and Thelin did not feel at ease till the train started for Belgium. They soon passed the frontier, and reached Ghent in safety. The prince went to Ostend, and for greater security embarked for England.

Meanwhile, the devoted Dr. Conneau remained in the fortress to conceal the escape as long as possible. He cheerfully sacrificed himself for his friend. Placing a stuffed figure in the bed of his pretended patient, he let the commandant know that in consequence of illness the prince would be unable to attend mass that day. At nine o'clock the wary commandant called to inquire after the prince's health. Being requested by the doctor not to disturb him, he satisfied himself by peeping in at the door, and, mistaking the lay figure for his noble prisoner, withdrew without suspicion. On calling again at one, and being told by the physician that Louis Napoleon was asleep, he again refrained from disturbing him. To satisfy his mind he sent for Laplace, the man of all work, who took care of the rooms of the prince, and asked him how he was getting on. The servant, whom the doctor also deceived, replied in such a way as to lead the commandant to suppose that he had both seen and talked with the prisoner. At seven in the evening the commandant again asked Laplace how the patient was. On being informed that he did not know, the commandant inquired when he last saw the prince. "I have not seen him since six o'clock this morning," was the reply. The commandant whose suspicions were now excited, went to the saloon, and receiving an evasive answer from Dr. Conneau, said: "I must see the Prince." Even then the astute physician contrived to keep him from going into the bedroom for some time. When at last he went in, and discovered the deception, it was too late. The sick man had crossed the frontier.

Louis Napoleon owed his escape from captivity to the unwearied ingenuity and devotion of his friends. He might well derive some consolation in his final downfall if among the adherents of the Emperor he could find the warm hearts that cheered the gloomy hours of the Prisoner of Ham. —Alex. Young, in the New York Independent.

CHARITY.—Night kissed the young rose, and it bent softly to sleep. Stars shone, and pure dew drops hung on his blushing bosom, and watched its sweet slumbers. Morning came breezes, and they whispered to the young rose, and it awoke joyous and smiling. Lightly it danced to and fro in all the loveliness of health and youthful innocence. Then came the ardent sun-god, sweeping from the east, and smote the young rose with his scorching rays, and it fainted. Deserted and almost heart broken, it dropped to the dust in loneliness and despair. Now, gentle breezes which had been gamboling over the sea, pushing on the home bound bark, sweeping over hill and dale—by the neat cottage and still brook—turning the old mill, fanning the brow of disease, and frisking the curls of innocent children—tripping along on her errand of mercy and love: and when she saw the young rose she hastened to kiss it, and fondly bathed its forehead in cool, refreshing showers, and the young rose revived, and looked up and smiled in gratitude to young breeze; but she hurried quickly away; her generous task performed, yet not without reward; for she soon perceived that a delicous fragrance had been poured upon her wings by the grateful rose; and the kind breeze was glad in heart, and went away singing through the trees. Thus true Charity, like the breeze, gathers fragrance from the drooping flowers it refreshes, and unconsciously reaps a reward in the performance of its offices of kindness, which steals over the heart like rich perfume, to bless and to cheer.

Newspaper Libel Suits.

From the London Advertiser.

It is now pretty generally admitted that the full liberty of the press is "the palladium of all our civil, religious and political liberties." As editor of the Advertiser, we have been threatened with many a libel suit, and have been actual defendant in some half-dozen instances. In every case we have come off triumphant. The time has not arrived when Canadians will consent to see the press gagged and fettered.

A case of some celebrity was tried at Toronto on Saturday (Col. Gray, M. P. vs. The Globe). The particulars are too well known to render present recapitulation necessary. The Hon. John Hilliard Cameron appeared on behalf of Col. Gray, and Brown was represented by Mr. Blake and Mr. Anderson, though he made the address to the jury himself in a speech of great length and eloquence. The gallant Colonel was cross examined with unfeeling severity by Mr. Blake, and will probably the edge of his relish for newspaper libel suits considerably moderated. The jury failed to agree, and were accordingly discharged; though it afterwards transpired that ten were for acquittal, one doubtful, and one for conviction. The case will probably now be allowed to drop. The result is practically another decisive victory for the Press of Canada, and the thanks of every journalist in the Dominion are due to the Hon. Geo. Brown for "fighting it out on this line" so successfully.

We understand that Mr. Belch, of the St. Mary's Argus, is defendant, at the present assizes in London, in a libel suit brought by Mr. Bacon, Market Clerk of the thriving town named. His prospect of obtaining damages is about as promising as that of the Brantford hotel keeper to mulct the Berlin Telegraph for a casual criticism of an indifferent dinner.

Release of the Fenians.

We learn that President Grant has pardoned the Fenian prisoners Starr, Mannix, and Thompson. What a mockery of justice to pardon these men after a few months' confinement, if confinement it can be called, being barely deprived of their liberty in the most comfortable quarters, with nothing to do and plenty to eat and drink, and concoct schemes for another raid on Canada. But to secure the Irish vote in the coming election something must be done by the President of this great Republican to again pacify the Irish Americans, and to show to them that although the government was obliged to make show of punishment, it was very much against their feelings to do so, and now give them their liberty, trusting the Irish patriots will forgive them this once, and promising not to do so any more.—Nagasaki Standard.

The Chicago "Evening Journal" says: 'The story of England's decadence is a fiction or a fraud. Except in respect to a standing army, England is by long odds the greatest, as she is the most progressive and the most illustrious of the powers of Europe." It is gratifying to find that there is one American newspaper which can speak sensibly when England is concerned.

"Mary Magdalen had seven devils cast out of her. I never heard of a man having seven devils cast out of him," growled a cynical old batchelor, in the course of a discussion on the "woman question." "No, they are not cast out yet, I believe," was the response of his fair antagonists.

NORWOOD STAGE:—Travellers would do well to remember that the Norwood stage now starts from the Stewart House, instead of from the Commercial House, as heretofore.

The Toronto Telegraph understands that the Legislature of Ontario will assemble on the 7th of December, for the transaction of Business. They will then get through the usual preliminaries before Christmas, adjourn over the holidays, and meet early in January; So mote it be.

MASONIC:—On Tuesday evening last, the members of the Peterborough Lodge No. 155 G. R. C. presented their W. M., Bro. W. Cameron, with a complimentary address and supper, previous to his removal to Montreal. The supper was got by Mr. Faucher, and in his best style. The chair was occupied by Bro. O'Donnel, the vice chairs by Bros. Ormond and Dr. Burnham, jr. The toasts from the chair were "The Queen & Craft," the "Grand Master," and "Our Guest," the later was responded to in a becoming manner by Bro. W. Cameron. Besides the toasts from the vice chairs,—volunteer ones were given by Bros. Dunsford, Johnson, Redpath, Stinson, &c. Bro. Dunsford sang "Put your shoulder to the wheel," and others in splendid style. The health of the chairman was proposed by Bro. Cameron and responded to Bro. O'Donnell. The company separated after singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen," having spent one of the most jolly evenings imaginable.

The "Globe" defeated Col. Gray in the celebrated libel suit, and most justly too. There never was a baser attempt to gag the press than that made by the gallant colonel; and it should be a matter of congratulation that a jury was not found willing to lend themselves to such evil designs. Notwithstanding this, a number of tory papers are endeavouring to make political capital out of the trial, and are still endeavouring to heap odium on Mr. Brown. No man in Canada deserves better of its citizens than does Mr. Brown. He has been the foremost in advocating the rights of the people. He has boldly and courageously combated every species of corruption in every government, and that to his own detriment; and now that a jury has to all intents, acquitted him, it is a shame for newspaper men to seek to injure "a confrere," merely that they may gratify a chronic desire to abuse him.

The corruption that Col. Grey was under oath, forced to reveal, has sickened many conservatives, and many of those who have supported John A. Cartier, Col. Grey, and such ilk, will find at next election, that they will be elected to stay at home. Then the hope of their unjust gains shall be gone, and the sooner the better for the country.

By the stand the "Globe" took in this Grey libel suit, the corruption by which Grey has been retained at a cost to the Country of $3,600 a year has been exposed. John A. McDonald's old tactics of buying up support like sheep in the market, and the base manner in which he takes of hiding his treachery, have all been exposed.

The country has been awakened to the deplorable state of affairs at Ottawa, and we may hope for such a change in a year or so, as will remove those hireling politicians from their positions; and also let us hope, enable us to secure better men. The "Globe" deserves the thanks of the press and of the country, not blame, as partisan newspapers are seeking to secure.

THE WAR.

The news from the seat of war has lost its excitement, and hence, to many, its interest. The Parisians are hopeful in their despatches that they will be able to hold out and yet compel the German forces to withdraw, but there are not good grounds for these hopes. Prussian forces are seizing the strongest places one by one and ere long will be possessors to all intents and purposes of the country. They are not, however, receiving quiet possession of the country; every inch is being purchased with the blood of harmless, innocent citizens of both countries.

Britain, it is said, is about to seek an armistice towards a peace. Every lover of his fellow and of peace will pray that her mission may be successful, and that through her intercession war and its direful effects may cease.

At present the only means of ingress to Paris is by balloons, which must be both dangerous and uncertain.

In Italy affairs are as quiet as ever. The change of power has been effected without much loss of blood. The pope still remains in the city but does not move about much, not at all in public.

Russia is quiet, and so is Austria, so that France and Prussia only are suffering severely the rewards of their pride and vanity. It is thought by some that Napoleon will be reinstated, but if so the French people will assassinate him. They should be allowed to chose their own form of Government.

The Agricultural Shows.

During this season we have had the pleasure of attending the Smith show, the one in Peterboro for the West Riding, the Norwood show for the East Riding, the South Monaghan show and the one at Keene.

These have all been very pleasant seasons to us, aan from appearances to all the farmers and mechanics who took an interest in them.

They afforded opportunities to see the progress in stock, manufactures, agricultural products and home industry, which the thoughtful observer will not be slow to turn to account for his own advantage if possible, and although not engaged in the pursuit of agriculture, we may be permitted to give the thorghts springing from our visits to the different exhibitions.

It is not our intention to array man against man, nor section against section, other than in good natured rivalry, and so as to induce all to vie with each other in producing the best animal or article of husbandry or industry.

The townships of Smith, N. Monaghan, and Ennismore are wealthy municipalities, and the inhabitants take an interest in agricultural progress second to those of no other section of the country.

Mr. John Walton long gave his attention to thorough-bred Durhams, but lately has turned his attention more to dairy business. In his day of thorough-breds, he showed some fine animals, and carried off several prizes.

Mr Henry Collins has taken his place and shows some of the finest animals both in Durhams, Sheep Swine and other products of agriculture.

Mr. Collins has been very successful indeed, has taken innumerable prizes and deserves praise for his devotion to the improvement of Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, &c., &c. As the number of prizes he carried off at the late show testifie.

Messrs. Adam Hall, Messrs. Jas. Mann, Messrs. I. Garbutt, Geo. Fitzgerald, George Scott, Joseph Walton, and a host of others whose names we cannot call to mind are all seeking to improve the stock of the country, by buying first class animals, and in a year or two some of these may rival some of those carrying off the prizes now.

The same attention has not been paid to cattle in the East Riding that has been in the west, yet the farmers of the East have not been unmindful of the advantages of good stock. The eastern people, however, take a greater interest in their show, and by doing so, made it the most successful.

The township of Otonabee contributes largely to the success of a show in the east, but no one of the townships neglects the fall show. This and the extent of territory abounding in wealth and progress, enables them to carry off the palm, except in thorough-bred cattle. Mr. Blezard, Mr. Wm. Armstrong, Mr. S. Fife, and Mr. Short and others, however, can show animals not far behind those of any part of the province.

In grain, South Monaghan shows as good a sample as any of the Ridings. It would be difficult to declare in favor of any of the townships, in the matter of roots. This year they were excellent at all the shows. The East Riding list exhibited the greatest variety in dairy produce. We believe, it would be difficult, if at all possible to excel the quality shown, especially in the article of butter, and it is remarkable that Smith, Dummer, Otonabee and Belmont, carried off first prize in this article. But Smith surpasses all the others put together in cheese making; Messrs. Walton, Mann, Garbutt and Manning, showed some cheese of excellent quality, and Mr. Jas. Elliott, Smith; although no exhibitor is manufacturing largely.—So that in the cheese line, the West is ahead of the East.

We dare not enter the domaine of comparing Ladeis' work; but we feel asured that although a back county not many of the front counties could do more than compete with Peterboro. It is also a subject of praise for Peterboro that in everything shown from the County at the Provincial show prizes were awarded. Mr. Redmond carrying off prizes for wheat; Mr. Jas. White for ploughs; Messrs. Lockhart & Miller for a harrow; Mr. Wescott for Pottery; Mr. R. Patterson for poultery; and we feel satisfied that the people of Peterborough have only to pluck up courage and enter the list of national competitors to be successful in every branch of industry carried on in the county.

Our farmers are as good as any in the province; our mechanics are men of superior skill; our merchants rival those of similar towns in the dominion. We have wealth, and all we want is energy and enterprize to take the first place among the counties of the Dominion.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—On the 12th of last month a very large petition of the ratepayers of the town was presented to the Council, asking them to make suitable provision for extinguishing fires and protection of property, viz., the purchasing of a steam fire engine, necessary hose and the building of tanks required to support the same. This petition, like a great many others of importance, was referred to a special committee. I would like to know the reason no report has yet been made. Rumour has it is because the committee, or some of the members of it, are in favor of water works. If such is the case why do they not boldly say so and at once dispose of the petition, without treating it with contempt. I have always understood it to be the duty of representatives of the people to carry out the wishes of their constituents. It is clearly the wish of the inhabitants of the town, with a few exceptions (interested parties) that what is asked for in this petition should be complied with by the Council immediately, and that without any circumlocution or redtapeism. If this committee, or even the Council, treat with contempt the wishes of the people, it would be well to take a note of it, and attend to the ambitious ones in January next. But for the interposition of Providence, the fire in the north ward recently might have been most disastrous. The spectacle of an engine standing in the middle of the street useless ought to be enough to spur at least Councillors who have property stake in at the town. What has been done since to prevent a recurrence? Simply nothing. Five or six weeks of the best season of the year has been allowed to pass without doing anything, and they are disposed to remain in the same state. The season is now fast approaching when it will be impossible to do anything in that way, and will have to stand over for another season. It is stated that the Council are so absorbed in business of a nature, such as bridge-building, sidewalk making, opening streets, &c., that the minor one of providing for the poor as well as the rich man's property, must at all hazards be left in abeyance till it suits their convenience. I hope this committee will consider this unfortunate petition and report favorable or otherwise at the next meeting.

ONE OF THE SIGNERS.

East Riding Ploughing Match.

The East Riding Ploughing Match came off on Wednesday last, on the farm of Gavin Shearer, Esq.

The day was favorable and there was a splendid turn out.

Through the kindness of Thos. Blezard, Esq., one of the directors, and one of Otonabee's most successful farmers, we have received the following report.

There were 26 ploughs entered, Eighteen men; Six boys over 16 years; and Two under 16 years.

The work on the whole was excellent, believed to be the best yet made at those matches, so much so that the judges had great difficulty in giving a decision, the difficulty being increased by having to award 14 prizes out of 18, while there are only 2 hours to do the whole in.

Joseph Smithson carried off the first prize, a handsome steel plough, presented by Mr. P. Hamilton, of this Town.

THE PRIZE LIST.

MEN'S CLASS.—1st J. Smithson, 2nd James McFee, 3rd George Ross, 4th Thos. Miller, 5th Robt Renwick, 6th A. R. Kidd, 7th James Cameron, 8th Thos. Barry, 9th Richard Ehnhirst, 10th David Henderson, 11th Nicholas Foley, 12th T. Cuthberson, 13th Wm. Christie, 14th Paul Scott.

BOY'S CLASS, over 16 years and under 19.—1st John Gillespie, 2nd Jas. Miller, 3rd John Henderson, 4th John Harrison, 5th David McFee, 6th Donald Cameron.

Boys under 16 years.—1st Alex. Evans, 2nd George Walker.

There were to be four prizes on this last list, but there were only two competitors. The other two prizes were therefore divided among the men's class. To prize 10th, a prize was attached making it $2. To prize 11th, a vest, presented by Mr. Eaton, worth $2. To prize 12th, a hat, presented by Mr. John Peters, $2. To prize 14th, a sewing machine chair, presented by Mr. L. B. Barber, $1.75. And a 15th, a neck-yoke, presented by Mr. McIlvaney, $1.75.

Messrs. W. Stewart, J. Kittle, Robert Wood, and Hugh McFee, although not so successful as to carry the first prize, did good work,—work of which they might not be ashamed.

The judges, committee and ploughmen then assembled at the dwelling of Mr. Shearer, and partook of a splendid dinner, voluntarily provided by him. Mr. and Mrs. Shearer entertained the whole party most hospitably,—the entertainment being one of the best yet enjoyed on such occasions, and to whom on this account the thanks of the society were most cordially tendered. After partaking of the good things, and enjoying a little conversation on various subjects, also a speech from P. M. Grover, Esq., on the progress of the East Riding, all dispersed for thier homes, well pleased with the day's proceedings.

W. Riding Ploughing Match.

This match was ploughed on Friday last on the farm of Matthew Walton, Esq., N. Monaghan. There were 8 entries, 5 men and 3 boys. The first prize was obtained by Luke Berry; the second by —Newton, a man of Mr. J. Darling's, Smith; the third was awarded to And. Tulley, son of Mr. G. Tully, N. Monaghan; the fourth to John Fryze, Mr. J. H. Dixon's man.

BOYS—Master R. N. Scott, of Smith, first. A young lad not long from Scotland, now working with Mr. A. Edmison, the second. Willie Hickie, who ploughed with Mr. Edwards' team, the third. R. Jack was recommended for a fourth, and on Saturday the directors awarded him a prize.

EXTENSIVE SALE.—Mr. John McKee, Lot 14, in the 5th concession of Smith, advertizes for sale all his Farm Stock, Farming Implements, Household Furniture a lot of excellent young Trees, Shrubs, Grape Vines and ornamental Trees. Mr. McKee has sold his farm and is going to Kansas. This will be a rare chance to buy good stock, a large lot of implements and some splendid furniture. His nursery too will be disposed of, and will thus enable farmers and others to supply themselves with some of the finest young trees, shrubs and vines. The sale will be on the 8th of November 1870.

Otonabee Fall Show.

This show was held at Keene on Friday last. The number of entries was 371. The show was in every respect a decided success.

The Horse shows was equal to anything in the County, and we might safely add to anything in the old Newcastle District.

Mr. Jas. Millar's draught team would be difficult to be beat, and the other teams were also good. The young horses too are excellent.

In cattle they are hardly up to the West Riding, but they are improving in stock also.

T. Blezard, Esq., has a very fine Devon Bull. Mr. Wm. Armstrong has a superior Durham Bull, and Mr. Short has a good Bull, besides some others through the Township that are never taken to exhibitions. The people of Otonabee too are improving their Sheep and Pigs and may are long rival the west.

The show of grain was excellent. The roots were equal to what were shown at Norwood, if not better, and the Butter, both table and firkin, was considered excellent. Cheese, however, was not well represented at either the Norwood or Keene shows.

In Home Manufactures we think Otonabee was ahead of the E. R show, and in Ladies' work and Fine Arts nothing behind it.

About 700 persons visited the inside of the Hall. Showing that there is a strong interest taken in the agricultural exhibitions in Otonabee.

After the exhibition, the Judges and Directors sat down to a superior dinner got up by mine host, Mr. McLachlan, who appears to understand how to get up good dinners on such occasions, and to be well patronized.

Mr. James Drummond the obliging Secretary, kindly furnished us with the prize list, which we give below.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor ever had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own wormanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1858, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lassack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

The Highest Price Paid for RAW FURS.

The Beautiful Land.

[illegible] where [illegible]
Fields where immortal flowers bloom
And fountains that are never dry;
[illegible] dawns where the stars are never dim,
Where the moon forever gleams,
And the music breath of the radiant hills
Sweeps o'er the crystal streams;
For when I've caught in the time of sleep,
A gorgeous glimpse of that hidden deep,
Away in the land of dreams.

When night has down her pall of mist
On closing cycles of air,
And deep o'er shadows of dying day
Are crossing everywhere;
While unseen furies chant a lay
In the lit's crimson coils,
And the solemn voice of the harmless winds
Breaks up the dreamy folds;
I know by the cry of my soul within,
There's a place where they shut the gates of sin,
And the God of glory dwells.

The arch of the western hills,
The beauty spread o'er the living earth,
In slumberous twilight pills
The promises of each human heart,
For a better, better clime—
A higher life than this mortal course,
Bearing the soul divine!
Ah, sure there must be a beautiful land,
Where the white-robed millions randsomed stand.
Chanting there songs sublime.

Selections.

A Young Widow.

A census-taker, going his round, stopped at an elegant brick dwelling house, the exact locality of which is no business of ours.

He was received by a stylish, well-dressed lady, who could well be recognized as young widow of some years standing.

On learning the mission of her visitor, the lady invited him to take a seat in the hall. Having arranged himself into a working position, he inquired for the number of persons in the family of the lady.

"Eight, sir," replied the lady, "including myself."

"Very well—your age madam?"

"My age, sir," replied the lady, with a piercing dignified look. "I conceive it's none of your business what my age might be; you are inquisitive, sir."

"The law compels me, madam, to take the age of every person in the ward; its my duty to make the inquiry."

"Well if the law compels you to ask I presume it compels me to answer. I am between thirty and forty."

"I presume that means thirty-five?"

"No sir, it means so much thing—I am only thirty-three years of age."

"Josephine—pretty name—ten."

"Minerva was twelve last week."

"Minerva—captivating—twelve."

"Cleopatra Elvira has just turned fifteen."

"Cleopatra Elvira charming fifteen."

"Angelina—favorite name—eighteen."

"My eldest and only married daughter is, Anna Sophia, is a little over twenty-five."

"Twenty-five, did you say?"

"Yes sir. Is there anything remarkable in her being of that age?"

"Well, no, I can't say that there is; but is it not remarkable that you should be her mother when you were only eight years of age?"

About this time the census-taker was seen running out of the house—why, we cannot say. It was the last time he pressed a lady to give her exact age.

Magnetism of Watch-Springs.

It has recently been discovered that the springs of chronometers and watches, which are constructed of steel, are frequently magnetic. Steel is at all times liable to become magnetized from causes beyond man's control. Watchmakers are advised to test their springs as to magnetism, by placing them near to a very small and truly-balanced mariner's compass. If the spring exhibits in none of its circumferences any tendency to attract one pole of the compass more than the other, it may be considered free from magnetic influence; on the other hand, if the north pole moves to one part, and the south pole to the other, the spring is decidedly useless; for in whatever position the timekeeper may be placed, with such a spring, it will be affected by the earth's magnetism.

Writing for the Press.

An observance of the following rules by those who writes articles for publication will be a great favor to editors and printers:—

1. Write with blank ink on white paper.

2. Make the pages small, say not larger than commercial note paper.

3. Write on only one side of the paper.

4. Leave ample margin around the writing for alterations if required.

5. Number the pages in proper succession.

6. Write plainly without regard to beauty.

7. Use no abbreviation which are not to appear in print.

8. Punctuate the manuscript as it should be printed as nearly as possible.

9 For italics, underscore one line; for small-capitals, two; for capitals, three.

10. Never interline without the caret (^) to show its place.

11. Take special care with every letter in proper name; also with figures.

To which may be added rule 12, viz.—Write sense.

Table of Measures.

The following table will be found valuable to many of our readers:

A box 24 inches by 16 inches square, and 28 inches deep, will contain a barrel.

A box 26 inches by 15½ inches square, and 8 inches deep, will contain a bushel.

A box 12 inches by 11½ inches square, and 9 inches deep, will contain a half-bushel.

A box 8 inches by 8 inches square, and 8 inches deep, will contain a peck.

A box 8 inches by 8 inches square, and 4½ inches deep, will contain one gallon.

A box 7 inches by 8 inches square, and 4½ inches deep, will contain a half-gallon.

A box 4 inches by 4 inches square, and 4½ inches deep, will contain a pint.

In 1870,52,659,009 bushels of grain were destroyed in the United Kingdom in the manufacture of beer and spirits. This would make upward of three thousand million pounds of flour, and one thousand three hundred million four-pounds loaves of bread.

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Sills, Conway P.O
County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
Madoc, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
Mary Ann Doughty.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

THEORY OF PURGATION
APPLIED TO THE Liver, Kidneys, Skin,
STOMACH & BOWELS.
DR. RADWAY'S
PERFECT
PURGATIVE PILLS,
Perfectly Tasteless,
ELEGANTLY COATED.

Dr. Radway has completed one of the most essential discoveries in medical chemistry in the combination of vegetable substances for the purposes of a PURGATIVE APERIENT, COUNTER-IRRITANT ALTERATIVE PILL, that can be taken at night secured with the absolute certainty of securing THOROUGH EXPULSION OF ALL DECAYED AND DECOMPOSED Elements of the human body, and also safe to take in the most malignant of Eruptive Fevers. In cases where the mucous membranes of the internal viscera are suffering from Ulceration, Inflammation, or from LIVER,
Gastric, Biliary, Pancreatic Complaints,
DR. RADWAY'S PILLS
supply the only Vegetable substitute for
CALOMEL or MERCURY.
In RADWAY'S PILLS you have one medicine that will secure quicker, more thorough and better results than will be given in form these or more different prescriptions of the medical practitioner. As a proof of this—You are seized with a Bilious attack; Doctor prescribes Blue Pills or Calomel; next, some Drastic Aloetic Pill or Powders to work off the effects of the Blue Pill; this preserves you, and a tonic is next given, or a gentle aperient, whereas ONE BOX OF RADWAY'S PILLS will do all the work that the three or more prescriptions are given for, without running any risk from mercurializing or salivating the system.

RADWAY'S PILLS.
In RADWAY'S PILLS, the true principle of purgation is secured, not alone to the cleansing of diseased the feces and excrementa from the bowels, but those humors that are checked or stopped in their passage through the Skin, Adipose, Lymph, and all excreting and secreting functions; for it these excrementitious secretions belonging to the skin, liver, lungs, kidneys, are interrupted in their course, they become products of decay and decomposition, and must be purged from the living body through their proper channels; hence the purgative qualities of RADWAY'S PILLS extend to the correction of the SKIN, KIDNEYS, LIVER, &c.; whereas not one of the advertised Pills claim to act beyond the bowels.
How to Take Radway's Pills.
THEIR DAILY USE.
In doses of one or two pills, by all persons of a full habit of body, subject to costiveness, rush of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, and all those subject to bile, will not only keep the blood from becoming congested or clogged up in the blood vessels, but will equalize its circulation, and prevent sudden attacks of apoplexy, disease of the heart, congestion, &c. [illegible] who will take one of these pills every day, from [illegible] life, [illegible] disease, [illegible] existing Spells, Pains around the [illegible] a hundred other disagreeable symptoms.

DYSPEPSIA.
One of RADWAY'S PILLS, two or three hours before dinner, taken daily, will keep the system free from DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, COSTIVENESS, &c.
Bear in Mind,
RADWAY'S PILLS are the only purgative that will secure an alterative, diuretic, sudorific, aperient and tonic influence.
They are the only vegetable substitutes for Calomel or Mercury.
They are elegantly Coated with Gum, perfectly Tasteless, and free from Smell.

SARSAPARILLIAN
RESOLVENT.
POISONED BLOOD.
When the blood becomes poisoned by the presence of an excess of BILE, UREA, CARBONIC ACID, and the excrementitious excretions of the SKIN, SORES, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, SPOTS, ULCERS, and HUMORS of all kinds break out on the surface.
Dr. Radway's
Sarsaparillian
Resolvent,
When the blood is in this condition, should be taken alternately with RADWAY'S PILLS. The indications of Cure is to free the blood from the presence of these poisons, and restore the functions of the Liver, Skin, Lungs, Kidneys, Bowels, to their proper duties. This effected, which RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, aided with Radway's Pills, will soon secure—a Cure will be the result.

A BAD SKIN—Spots, Morphew, Sores, Pimples, Blotches, Pustules, Tetters, are caused by impurities of the Blood, Checked Perspiration, Sluggish Circulation of the Blood in the excreting vessels of the skin. One or two doses of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT will rid the skin from these irritants, and insure all a beautiful, clear complexion.

UTERINE TROUBLES—Prolapsus Uteri, Falling of the Womb, Ulcers, Tumors, Sores, cured by SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

Ladies suffering from Chronic Leucorrhœa, Weakness or Irritation of the Bladder and Urinary Passage, Difficulty of Passing Urine, &c., will be relieved by a few doses of RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, and cured by a few bottles.

PARALYSIS CURED.
Dowagiac, Harrison Co., Ohio,
May 15th, 1869.
Messrs. RADWAY & Co.
Gentlemen.—The RESOLVENT has effected a cure in a very severe case, that of a Mrs. Samuel Johnston in this neighbourhood. She was confined to her bed and had lost the use of her legs; four bottles of the RESOLVENT has restored her, and last Sunday she was able to attend church. The demand for the RESOLVENT has increased, and we deem it advisable to order in time.
Yours truly,
R. PITTS & SON.

SARSAPARILLIAN.
So quick is RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT in entering into the circulation, that it may be detected in the urine, sweat, and blood in ten minutes after it has been taken.
A Remedy so quick in entering into the circulation and communicating its curative properties as RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN supplies a want that has ever existed.
RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian or Renovating Resolvent cures forms [illegible] positive evidence of its Purifying and Fruitful efficacy in curing persons considered Impotent and Barren, who have since married and had children.

STOP THE WASTE OF LIFE!
RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent will stop the waste of the life-fluid that in so many persons follows a discharge of water through the urine. It is a positive cure for Spermatorrhœa, Nightly Emissions, &c.
SYPHILOID ULCERS.
Sores of all kinds, Tumors, Cancers, Sore Heads, Sores on the Tongue, in the Mouth, in the Glands of the Throat, cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian.
IMPOTENCY.
The best evidence we have of the powerful Purifying, Tonic, and Fruitful properties of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent is that it has cured persons who were verging on Imbecility and Insanity through self-Abuse, with continued drains of the seminal fluid, and were cured by the Resolvent, when prepared under the old process in 1850, who have married and have children now living. A few bottles will restore the vigor of life. rn
VIGOR OF LIFE RESTORED
Persons who, from self-abuse, disease, or injuries, suffer from paralysis or weakness in the secreting vessels of the genital organs, will be cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

SARSAPARILLIAN,
PAREIRA BRAVA.
Two of the Wonderful Invertebrate that enter into the composition of RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT.
There are some thirty or more different species of Sarsaparilla, and it requires great care and intelligence to select the proper kinds; so with Pareira Brava. This great remedial agent is to be found in Spanish, Peru, Nicaragua, Brazil, Jamaica, and twenty species of this root. Dr. Radway, in using that which grows in Brazil, first [illegible] throughout his agents, none but intelligent men in gathering, selecting, packing, and shipping these roots to the United States. No amount of wages or Hottentots are employed in gathering vegetables, roots, plants, &c., for the Sarsaparillian Resolvent.
RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT is sold at $1 per Bottle, or 6 Bottles for $5, by all Druggists and Medicine Dealers, and at Dr. RADWAY'S Medicine Warehouse, 439 St. Paul Street, Montreal.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a
HAIR DRESSING,
nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use in every country and clime, by all classes, as this safe but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. The sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.
They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.
Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—
For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.
For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the disordered action or remove the obstructions which cause it.
For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.
For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pain in the Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.
For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.
For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.
As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.
An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form. HEARTBURN, CONSTIPATION QUASH. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's Anti-Costive and Toxic Pills, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using Hall's Excise Hair Glass, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain venders of Liniment to decry Jacobs' Rheumatic Liquid. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

Select Poetry.

A Pungent Consideration of the Various Trades and Callings.

Of all the trades that men may call
Unpleasant and offensive,
The Editor's is worst of all,
For he is ever pensive;
His leaders lean to nothing high,
His columns are unstable,
But though the printer makes his pie,
It does not suit his table.

The carpenter—his concern is plane,
His bit is always sure him;
He augers every hour of gain,
He chisles—and none fur him;
He shaves yet is not shave they say,
The public pay his board, sir;
Full of wise saws, he hears away,
And so he swells his board, sir.

St Crispin's son—the man of shoes
Has awl things at control, sir;
He waxes wealthy in his views,
But so'er neglects his sole, sir;
His is indeed a heeling trade,
And when he comes to casting
The toe-tal pe tis he has made,
We find his ends are lasting.

The Tailor, too, gives fits to all,
Yet never gets a beating;
His cabbages, however small,
Are most delicious eating;
His goose is heated—happy prig!
Unstinted in his measure;
He always plays at thimble-rig,
And seams a man of Pleasure.

The Farmer reaps a fortune plump,
Tho' harrowed, far from woe, sir;
His spade forever proves a trump,
His hook is "I've a hoe," sir;
However corned, he does not slip,
Though husky, never horse, sir;
And in a plow share, artnership,
He gets his share of course, sir.

The Sailor on the giddy mast,
Comparatively master,
Has many a bulwark round him cast,
To wave away disaster;
Even shrouds to him are full of life,
His main-stay still is o'er him,
A gallant and top-gallant crew,
Of "beaux esprits" before him.

The sturdy Irish laborer picks
And climbs to fame—'tis funny,
He deals with none but regular bricks
And so he pockets money;
One friend sticks to him, (tis mortar)
In sudden grey, unbaffled,
He leaves behind an honest name
When he ascends the scaffold.

The Printer, though his case be hard,
Yet sticks out at his hap, sir;
'Tis his to canonize the bard,
And trim a Roman cap, sir;
Some go two-forty—what of that?
He goes it by the thousand!
A man of form, and fond of fat,
He loves the song I now send.

The Engine-driver, if we track
His outward semblance deeper,
Has got some tender trains—
And ne'er disturbs the sleeper;
And when you switch him as he goes,
He whistles all the louder;
And when you break him on the wheel,
It only makes him prouder.

I launch this skiff of rhyme upon
The trade winds of the muses;
Thro' pungent seas they've borne it on
The boat no rudder uses;
So masticate its meaning once,
And think not harshly of it—
You'll find a freight of little puns,
But very little profit.

The Crack in the Door.

The prettiest house, the prettiest garden, the best servants, and the largest bank account in X——, belonging to Mrs. Mabitable Armstrong, widow. Some people declared that she was the prettiest woman in X——, but they were not the other women. They said she had red hair and was too fat, and what the gentlemen saw to admire in her they could not guess, etc., but say it as often as they might, every man in the place was Hetty Armstrong's devoted servant, friend and admirer, and a dozen of them her lovers also. A bright, dashing, warm hearted woman she was; as merry as (bho') she had never known a care. Not that she had forgotten the lover of her youth—the gallant black-eyed sea captain whose ship had gone down in mid ocean five years before, whose picture face lay near her heart night and day, sleeping and waking—but she was too full of life and hope to live entirely in the past, and loved neither hours of melancholy musing nor what women call a good cry. To forget all sorrow, if she could, and be as happy as she might, were the two grand rules of her life, and therefore, people who did not know Hetty Armstrong thought her heartless, and made a great mistake.

They called her a flirt, too, and that was not true either. She only flirted with those who began the game first and that a woman has a right to do. At X——, if a gentleman called twice upon a lady, his attentions were reported to be "very particular;" if he saw her home from meeting, rumore declared that they were "engaged;" and if he spent an evening with her, they were "to be married next week" for a certainty; but Hetty Armstrong was somehow not included in the general rule. She had determined to do as she chose. She went everywhere with every unmarried man of her set. She was friendly when she chose to be, and flirted when she liked. After setting gossipdom at half a dozen times she gained her point, and people let her alone. It was Hetty Armstrong's way—that was all, and no indication of matrimonial intentions. For years gentlemen haunted her parlor, escorted her hither and thither, sang with her, danced with her, confided in her, and adored her, and village gossip had married her, until suddenly a stranger had made his debut at X——, and set the tongues agoing beyond even Hetty Armstrong's power of silencing.

He was tall, he was handsome, he was comparatively young. He had just that touch of the exquisit about him which is so charming when "a man's a man for a' that;" faultless in taste, faultless in manner, educated, accomplished, altogether charming—he openly flung himself at Hetty Armstrong's feet and declared himself her admirer. Of course we do not mean to say he ruined the knees of his faultless habiliments by going upon them, or in any other way condemned himself as did the knights of old when heart smitten; but after the manner of the nineteenth century, he declared his intentions quite as openly.

He sang to and at the lady. He haunted her parlors like a well dressed ghost. He wrote poetry for the X——Luminary, addressed to H. A., and signed C. R.

He breathed deep sighs, and gave soft glances, and said things that might have double meanings. And this, not for a week or month, but for a year, and at the end of which time Hetty Armstrong began to understand that she was expected by everybody to accept Charles Rokewood when he offered his heart and hand. Meanwhile, the soft eyes and the sweet voice, the delicate attention, and winning songs of her admirer, were not without their effect upon Hetty Armstrong's heart.

It began to be conscious of certain tremors and flutterings in his presence. Her cheeks flushed as they had in their girlhood. Her dreams were not the sober practical dreams which nature at five-and-twenty should indulge; and as the days rolled on, she felt more conscious that the "yes" which was expected of her would be uttered.

She tried to be prudent and judge the man carefully. The result was she declared him to be "an angel." At last Hetty Armstong fairly let the rudder of selfwill to which she had clung so long and allowed herself to drift down the tide of circumstances which were to lead her into the arms of Charles Rokewood. She left her hand linger on his arm as he bade her good bye. She smiled up into his eyes as a woman only smiles into eyes they love. She felt that life would be happier with such a bosom to repose upon, and began to wonder whether it would really be necessary for a widow to be married in pearl color when white was so becoming to her complexion. So matters stood when Christmas drew near, and with it Hetty Armstrong's regular Christmas eve party.

All X——, or nearly all, would be there even the Rev. Luther Paragon, who amiably forgot to say that he disapproved of dancing and charades when Mrs. Armstrong declared that she adored them. It was always the merriest party of the season at X——, and this time Mrs. Armstrong decided she would out-do herself. There was a dash of coquetry in her dress; a dash more of extravagance in the supper, a glitter of rare china, and perfume of rare flowers in the parlors—just as they say wine warms up the wits and fancy, so does love at times. All things should be brighter, fresher more sparkling just now, thought or vaguely felt the woman who had just began to know her heart aright and thought she knew another.

She stood in her rich dress of silk and lace, flowers in her hair and on her bosom, before her guests arrived, before the grate fire in her parlor when some one touched her on the shoulder, and turning, she saw Charles Rokewood.

Her face was a little paler, her eyes more earnest in their look than usual, and a sort of happy terror came upon her as she guessed why he had come so early.

"I knew I should find you alone," he said, "and I have something to say to you—something—"

There she stopped him. "Don't say it now," she pleaded. "I have an evening before me which calls for all my calmness. If it is anything agisting. I—I—I must ask you to wait. After those guests of mine are gone—or to morrow—I will hear you; not now."

Charles Rokewood bowed. "Your will shall be my law," he said, and took her hand and kissed it. She let him do it, blushing the while and not daring to look at him.

All the evening, after the other guests were there, her thoughts wandered back to that moment. She knew what he would say, and she could only answer in one way, only one—she liked him so well.

"And I have felt so sure I could never like any one again," thought Hetty Armstrong. "There is a fate in it."

But she danced, and sung, and talked as usual, and no one guessed that she was dreaming—not even Mr. Rokewood, who with a chosen friend had slipped away from the parlor, and was smoking and talking in the dressing room. He was a little out of sorts. Hetty, conscious of her duties as hostess, could not be allured into a tete-a-tete; and the women who were ready to be talked to he did not care about.

Engaged men are usually known by their bearish conduct to ladies generally.

Rokewood, though not engaged, believed he was far enough on the road to forget his old suavity, and he fell back upon his cigars and masculine friends, whenever his lady love could not be whispered to or gazed at. Consequently, damsels who thought Rokewood charming were wondering what had become of him, when Biddy, the waiteress, mysteriously beckoned her mistress into the hall, and in an awful whisper said, "more spoons were naded for the crame."

"Of course there must be," said Mrs. Armstrong. Where was my head to forget it? I'll get poor Aunt Martha's set from my upstairs china closet. Wait on the stairs until I come to you."

And away ran Mrs. Armstrong to the second floor, where she plunged into a long, old fashioned closet, and brought forth a legacy of silver ware, left her years before by a maiden aunt. Counting the spoons over, a murmur of voices from the next room fell on her ear. At the same moment she caught the perfume of a cigar. She knew that Charles Rokewood had the richest voice and smoked the best cigar of any man of his set.

"Then, with a loving woman's wish to see the face of that man so dear to her, she stooped forward and peered through a crack in the door of the china-closet, which opened into the little sewing-room, devoted for this evening to the gentlemen's toilet. Every word was plainly audible when her prying ear approached so closely to the crevice, and the first word riveted her attention. The men were talking about matrimony.

"It's a deuced bore," said the friend. "You are tied to a woman's apron strings for life. You can't say your soul is your own. Take my advice and keep out of it altogether, Charles."

"Look here, old fellow," said Charles, taking a cigar from between his lips, "that sort of thing is all a man's fault. Now, when I marry, my first step will be to prove myself master. As you begin so you go on, and before my honeymoon is over the woman who takes my name shall know that my will is law, and that here must yield to it."

The spoons in Mrs. Armstrong's hand tinkled together just then, but no one heard them. Charles went on:

"My wife, if I have one, shall have no chance to show her temper. If she does not like my orders, she must obey them without liking—I'll brake her in just like I would a horse—bring her down at once to the frame of mind I mean to keep her in; purposely thwart her for a while; contradict her; object to her style of dress; make her alter her way of doing her hair; refuse to dance attendance at church, and make her send regrets to party invitations when she wants to accept them; and show her at once what she may expect. And after a while I might yield a little more; because I choose, you understand—not to please her."

"Ye-es," said the friend dowtfully; "but you can't imagine how hard you'd find it; and if you stay out late, they make such a row—sit up for you in a nightcap, and cry when you come in."

"I'd manage that," said Rokewood, "by staying out every night until daylight. The one rule I would practice would be—never let a woman have her own way."

The spoons tinkled a little more, and Mrs. Armstrong's face was terribly flushed, but she still listened.

"Of course you yield a great deal to the woman you are in love with," said Mr. Rokewood, evidently brushing the ashes from his cigar; "but that's because of the romance and all that sort of nonsense, which dies out with the honeymoon. You can find women enough to write poetry to, and talk sentiment with, married or single. As for your wife, she's the woman that keeps house for you, and the sooner you make her aware of it the better. When I marry, Jones, my dear fellow, it will be with no idiotic ideas of perpetual courtship in my mind. I'll begin as I intend to go on, and be master, depend upon it."

"But not my master," whispered pretty Mrs. Armstrong, "not mine."

"Mistress Armstrong, them spoons, plase," whispered Biddy, at the stairhead just then.

Hetty Armstrong gathered up the spoons, that had slipped loosly down into her lap. She looked at them as they did so. They were solid and elegant, as was all her silver. Her eye glanced about the room, which wealth and taste had made the perfection of elegance and comfort. Her room! She heard down stairs the merry chat of her guests, the sound of music and dancing. She remembered that in the kitchen her servants were making ready a supper fit for a king. She turned to the mirror; a handsome woman, still young, and elegantly dressed, an hour before, all this, the woman included, she would have given to Charles Rokewood had he been a beggar. Just a twinge of pain went through her heart. One tear stole down her glowing cheek. Then she gave a little, bitter laugh.

"I, alone, am queen of me!" she misquoted; and ran out to give the spoons to Biddy.

"It was hard to find them," she said, "but here they are at last."

And she laughed a little louder than usual, and not quite naturally.

"It was the merriest Christmas-eve party of them all," said every one of her guests, "and Hetty Armstrong seemed the merriest there."

But no one saw her when she closed the door upon them all, and she was alone in her own chamber. No matter how brief a love dream has been, the awakening is always hard, especially if it is sudden.

Hetty Armstrong refused Chas. Rokewood the next day, and the people blamed her bitterly. As for Charles himself, he was amazed and injured and deeply grieved, for he never guessed that his lecture on married life had a second auditor; nor that Hetty would have said "Yes" instead of "No" but for the crack in the door of the china closet.

A School Mistress Stoned to Death by Her Pupils.

A correspondent writing from Canion, Mass, says: This usually quiet town was thrown into a state of excitement last Wednesday, in consequence of an attack on a female school-teacher, named Etta K. Barstow, a most estimable young lady, by four school boys, with stones, which resulted in her death. The circumstances of the case are as follows:—

On Wednesday noon, Miss Barstow "rung in" her scholars, but some of them refused to return to the school-room. She then turned the key in the door, thus shutting the delinquents out, whereupon they immediately commenced to throw stones through the windows. When the dinner hour arrived Miss Barstow started for her boarding-house, kept by, Mrs. Barcas. Whilst on her way thither, four boys, named respectively John Coffee, 11 years of age; James Cogswell, 13; Daniel Keliher, 9; and Jeremiah Keliher, 11—the two latter being brothers—commenced to throw stones at their amiable teacher. One of the missles, about the size of a common ink-stand, hit her on the neck, just below the ear, and another stone struck her on the back with such force as to cause her to stagger; upon which the young rascals twitted her of being drunk. The poor girl finally managed to get into the house, and throwing herself upon a sofa, she exclaimed, "Mrs. Barcas, those awful boys have been stoning me!" After a short nap, the injured teacher ate a hearty meal, and then went to sleep again. On awaking, she remarked that she should not teach school that afternoon," and immediately started for her father's residence, in Boston, where she died the following day.

The boys—with the exception of Cogswell, who has run away—engaged in the murderous assault were duly arrested and tried before Justice White, on a charge of disturbing the school, and were each of them sent to the State Reform School.—A post-mortem examination is also being made in the case, and it is probable that the grand jury of Norfolk County will find a bill against the boys for manslaughter.

The Tables Turned.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS NOT ALLOWED THROUGH THE CANADIAN CANALS.

The Belleville "Intelligencer" says:—

A few days since the United States Government, desirous of removing a couple of companies of infantry from the upper part of Lake Erie to Sackett's Harbor, taking it for granted that they use our canals for such purposes, totally obvious of the inconvenience to which our troops were put by the courtesy in the matter of the Red River expedition, made out the requisition to have them forwarded by the North Western Transport Line of Propellers. But the best laid schemes of men and mice "aft gang agee." When the aforesaid troops got as far as the Welland Canal they were stopped, not having any permit from the Canadian Government. They accordingly had to return to Buffalo, and from thence were forwarded by rail to Charlotte, the port of Rochester. Now they thought all was right and that they would quietly go to Sackett's Harbor by steamboat. Here again Uncle Sam was at fault; he has not a steamboat on Lake Ontario and as he would not allow a Canadian steamer to call at two of his ports in succession, the steamer "Rochester" by which he expected to send them, and which had been ordered by the Custom authorities of Oswego a few days before not to land coming passengers there, could not take them, and not daring to trust them in a Canadian port, the troops were ignominiously stored in a warehouse at Charlotte, waiting for a practicable route to their port of destination, and mediating on international courtesy as practised by the most enlightened government on the face of the earth.

ABSENT, VERY.—A gentleman, writing a letter at his breakfast table, dipped his pen in the coffee, and continued his letter. Noticing his mistake, he put a large lump of sugar in the ink, and then finding his second blunder, poured the contents into the coffee-pot to settle it.

Doomed Paris.

HORRORS IN RESERVE—WHAT STRASBOURG SUFFERED.

An account of the close of the siege of Strasbourg, by a correspondent of the N. Y. World, says,—

On the 26th, with the first streak of morning, the Germans began to

VOMIT FIRE.

on us again. They had never begun so early before. It was evident that acting under instructions from headquarters, the besiegers had resolved to make an end of our resistance that day. We could see them flittering about in their batteries in far greater numbers and with more of excitement in their gestures, than was their wont. Speech and hearing were impossible even to men placed close to one another, and the whole bloody business, both on our side and theirs, seemed to have resolved itself into a kind of diabolical dumb-show. Men made certain motions or movements. A gun was withdrawn and then thrust forth again, and then came darting forth the tongue of fire and the crashing shot. Our fire was nothing; we had but few guns uninjured, and of those few some could not be worked for the very sufficient reason that all their gunners had been killed, and others because their wooden "ways" had sunk at all sorts of impracticable angles into the ploughed and sodden earth. Our earthworks were shapeless heaps

REDDENED WITH BLOOD.

Sometimes a stray shot was fired by artillerymen, who ran neck or nothing to their work with heads ducked instinctively—like children running for wagers in the rain. From time to time, indeed, there came from us a something that sounded like the promise of a worthy reply. A few frenzied men would get together, and half of them "sobbing" the while with rage and hate, would pour in a "passionate" fire at some point of a German battery that for a time carried everything before it and converted besiegers into besieged. But the fire soon dropped, and then became utterly silent, and the Germans worked their unresisted will again.

The morning of the 26th found the streets nearly full of people. Here for a brief moment was afforded a sight of that courage of despair, of the existence of which I have just doubted. The cellars which received a rabble the night before had now disgorged an army. High rose the human murmurs amid the deep ominous growling of the distant cannon pointed against the staunch citadel, our last hope of defence. "We are being sacrificed to military pride" "We are to perish for political considerations." "Mon Dieu! what does France want of us?"

THE BONES AS WELL AS THE FLESH.

"As for me I can endure it no longer. Give me my pistol. I shall first go and send my wife and children to a place of safety and then follow them myself." But in the midst of all these purposeless grumblings one voice is heard with a practical proposition, "Let us go to the Governor."

The crowd passed out of the Place d'Armes where this colloquy was held, to the headquarters of Gen. Ulrich, but in the meantime another assemblage, had formed quite spontaneously and without any sort of communication with the one I have just described, was marching with colors flying and drums beating. They were beating up recruits to the cry of of "immediate surrender," and the "colors" they were flying was

THE WHITE FLAG.

The two deputatations met and joined in the Palace de la Cathedrale. Half of the men in the town, and certainly three-fourths of the women, were in their ranks. They sent in two of their number to Ulrich. He refused to see so much as this moderate delegation, to say nothing of the huge bulk of their constituents. He would fight to the last. The tumult became deafening on the announcement of this declaration. The grand square, the entire space in front of the house in which the General happened to be, was filled with the angry crowd. They refused to stir. The feeble attempts of the dispirited soldiers to disperse them were not calculated to alter this determination. They sang, they harranged one another, they laughed, they wept, they alternately embraced and shook their fists at the troops who defended them as well.

Such was the state of things during the whole of that memorable 26th of the 7th. Every one rife for the execution of some sort, yet no one seemed to know what to do. There was no leader. The disaffection, as I have shown, and this peculiarity, that it was spontaneously generated in the breast of every man and every woman who had borne the horrors of this most cruel siege.

At length the German batteries gave the signal for which we had been so long waiting. A shell, more loosely aimed than the rest, which were fairly enough directed on the batteries of the citadel, burst amid a mass of broken masonry, a stone's throw from the Cathedral square. A shudder and a cry ran through the crowd, and then from the centre of it there came a great shout, as a little man borne aloft on the shoulders of his companions towards the Cathedral door, was seen waving a sheet or table-cloth at the end of a pole. The little man who had the sheet and pole in readiness within his house, had at length done what the others could not do; he had "made up his mind."

An aide-de-camp of General Ulrich saw the movement towards the Cathedral door, and forced his way into the crowd, and at imminent danger of his life, wrenched the flag from the little citizens hands. There was a loud, angry roar, but he silenced the crowd in a moment: "Since the flag is to be hoisted after all, let a soldier do it. I will hoist it myself."

Five minutes afterwards, or at about 4:55 on the afternoon on Tuesday, the 27th of September, the flag of surrander waved from the Strasbourg Cathedral tower. The Germans must have been long and anxiously on the lookout for it. The firing almost immediately ceased. A solemn and almost fell upon the troubled crowd as a messenger from the General rode forth to meet the German officer within the lines. Men shook hands amid the ruins of their homes as if some great stroke of fortune had just befallen them. The beer glasses were brought out of the cellars. For the first time during for weeks the little children were seen in the streets.

"THIS IS WHY I KNOW IT."—"How is your father getting along now?" I said to the little daughter of a man formerly a poor inebriate, but whom, some months before, I had induced to sign the pledge.

"He is getting along very well," was her reply.

"Has he kept his pledge?"

"Oh! yes," she joyfully said.

"Are you sure he has?"

"Yes sir, I am quite sure."

"How is it you are so positive on this?" I asked.

"Why," said she, and her face was radiant with joy, "he never abuses mother any more; we have always plenty to eat, and he never takes off my shoes to pawn them for the drink now. This is why I know it." Temperance Banner.

A Volunteer in one of the infantry regiments found in the breast pocket of a French man killed at Gravelotte a letter from a Frenchwoman, who, from the terms of the letter, was evidently his cousin, in which the writer is a postscript, (always the essence of a woman's letter) says:—"Make haste to return, and bring with you the head of one of those infamous Prussians!—I should rejoice in such a wedding gift."

Information Given.

The Land Sale in 1869 cost $751.43.—The Land Sale of 1870 cost $465.02.

Measuring the space occupied in 1869, viz: 1410 lines at regular rates and nothing off, the amount would be $756.26, but three lots were taken off and not paid for; $751.43 was paid.

The space in 1870 is 1015 lines at usual rates as of 1869, the cost would be $465.60.

The preamble would be the same to ONE Lot in any year; $404.02 is the sum paid. The advertizing was done both years at same rate per line of space exactly.

QUERY: Who got the advertizing of the Land Sale always until this year? It never appeared in this paper before, and certainly the Review never asked for information on the subject, while its proprietor got his entire picking.

Monaghan Council.

October 22nd, 1870

The council met at 10 o'clock. All the members present. The Reeve in the chair. Minutes of the last meeting read and signed

A petition was received, signed by Mr. Brownscombe and fourteen others, asking to have the township divided into electoral division, so that there might be a polling place at the School House in No. 2 School Section, for the accommodation of residents in the eastern part of the township, at the next municipal election. A By-law was passed complying with the prayer of the petition.

Moved by Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Tully,—That the sum of $8 be granted, and that Mr. Brownscombe appointed to expend the same.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Birney, seconded by Mr. Robson.—That the sum of $32 granted at last meeting being insufficient to meet the expense incurred by Mrs. Keefe, at and since the death of her husband, a further sum of $16.13 be granted.—Carried.

An order was given on the Treasurer for the sum of $23.79 for painting the Town Hall

Councillors Robson and Birney were appointed a committee to see to the laying out of such sums as they deem necessary for the repairs of the bridge on the gravel road at Mr. Carver's.

On motion of Mr. Tuller, the Council adjourned to the 28th day of December, at 10 o'clock, a. m.

The Court of Assize and General Jail Delivery.

This Court for the County of Peterboro opened on Tuesday. Before His Honor Judge Galt.

The Grand Jurors sworn were:—

J. W. Gilmour, Esq., Chairman, and Wm. Armstrong, Fs Birdsall, Thos. Blezard, John Calder, Alexander Clark, Chas. Cameron, Lewis Davis, Thomas Fife, Thos Houston, Wm. Helm, Robt. Matchet, Hugh McFee, Jer. McCarthy, Jas. Reid, James Stevenson and Alex. Nixon, Esqrs

The cases disposed of the first day were

McDONALD et al vs. PERRY et al.—Smith for plf. undefended. Verdict for plf. $397.90. This was a gas case we believe.

WHITE et al vs. BECK.—Moore for plf. Cassels for deft. A promissory note. Verdict for plf. $111.60.

McDONALD vs. EGAN.—An account.—Verdict for plf. $62.53.

FANNING vs. SEELY.—This case was referred to Judge Dennistoun.

RUNNING vs. SEDGWICK.—This case was brought against Mr. Thos. Sedgwick, for entering upon and ploughing a narrow strip of land alleged to have been sold to Runnings for a road, and for taking certain rails on the fence of said road and claimed by Mr Running. There was judgement given on first and third pleas for plf. Running, and on the second plea for deft. Sedgwick, the effect of which we believe is to make both bear a certain share of costs. Smith for plf; Burnham & Patterson for deft.

ROGERS vs EGAN—For an account.—Scott for plf. Verdict for plf. $15.64

PRATT vs. HALL.—Scott for plf; Weller & H. Cameron for deft.

This was a case brought against the Sheriff, but to all intents and purposes against W. A. Scott, for alleged neglect in seizing property of one Armstrong, under a writ in favour of Pratt; and for applying certain moneys obtained by sale of some of Armstrong's property to executions other than Pratt's. It was sought to be shown that Armstrong had property when the Sheriff made a return that he could find none.—Verdict for deft.

HENDERSON vs. THOMPSON was withdrawn, and also a case of ejectment, undefended, was disposed of.

The QUEEN vs. SHEARER.—This was a case of alleged murder of one Francis Young, by Thomas Shearer, who was in the Dock.

Mr. S. Smith prosecuted, and Mr. W. H. Scott, defended the prisoner.

After challenging several persons, the following persons were sworn:—

Jas. Millar, Jas. Baptie, Wm. Blezard, Geo. Savigny, R. Weir, J. P. Cooper, Henry Moore, Robert Emmerson, Alex Donnelly, Angus Davidson, Michael Clarke and Jas. Gillan;

Mr. Smith briefly addressed the Jury.

Patrick Young, father of the deceased being sworn, said:—He resides in Smith, at Young's point. The deceased was his son. He is now dead. Last saw him alive on the evening of the 13th July, about 6 o'clock. He worked for me that day in the mill. Saw him at tea, did not see him see him alive. He was not at home that night to my knowledge. I do know where he went to. He was about 23 years of age. I first missed him next morning; we enquired about him among the neighbours first. I did not discover anything suspicious until the young people came home from the show; we searched all the night of the 14th for him. I saw his hat where found. There were marks of footsteps and broken twigs near. The hat was not the length of the Court room from the water's edge. There were marks toward the water as if a struggle, and there was a slab moved. I thought I saw blood on a stone near it, and I tried to rub it off. The body was not found there. There was a dry cedar handspike near where the hat was discovered. No marks on the handspike; it could not have lain there long. There were two canoes near the place, one a board canoe, the other log. The body was found on Sunday; I saw it as it was brought to shore; it was brought ashore by a number of friends. Cross examined by Mr. Scott. There was a strong current from the Mill. We were out all night looking for the body, saw the footprints where the hat was found. I could not swear whose they were. They were all over. Saw the canoe after breakfast, the day after he was missed. It was about 15 to 20 rods from where the hat was found and towards the mill. Two of the canoes belonged to our family, one to Jas. Kearney. I do not know where our canoe was that night. The one I saw may have been Jas. Kearney's. There was a paddle in it. This was an unusual place for the canoe. I have known the prisoner a long time. I never knew any quarrel between him and deceased.

Edward McKelvy sworn—To Mr. Smith, I knew Francis Young, was at Kearney's on the night of the 13th of July; saw Young at Kearney's that evening; he came about 5 o'clock. Shearer had been there all day; I was taking care for Kearney. They both left after 12 o'clock at night, to the best of my opinion. They went away together. Shearer was not sober. Young had taken 2 or 3 glasses.—Shearer could walk; he required no help; witness went out with them. Before going out, Young helped James Lang up stairs. Young then appeared in good health, no marks of violence could be seen on him. They did not say where they were going. They stood on the platform a while. I went in and saw no more of them that night. Never saw Young alive again.—Shearer had a bottle of whiskey with him, a common black bottle full. They appeared on good terms. Then cross examined by Mr. Scott, in which Mr. Scott drew his attention to the fact that he before the magistrate had sworn that they left Kearney's at one o'clock. He said he had not yet changed his mind in the matter.

Jas. A. Kearney sworn—Was the owner of the store referred to. Knew Young deceased. Remembered the night of the 13th of July, saw Young there; could not say how many were there. There was some scuffling for fun. I had been hurt, had to sit down for a time. Shearer and Young appeared on good terms. Deceased was an active young man.

Michael Barry, sworn.—Resides at Youngs Point. I teach school. I was at home in bed on the night of the 13th July. Persons in passing from Kearney's to Mr. Youngs would not require to pass my place. The hat was found about 140 feet from my house. I heard a noise on that night and got up and looked out, did not see any person. There were small cedar trees between the voice and me. The conversation appeared to be a friendly one. I cannot say at what hour I heard it, did not look at my watch. It was a moonlight night. The sound came as from the place were the hats were found. I heard the conversation while my head was through the window, as if talking to each other. Did not hear what was said, only the voice. I did not then recognise the voice.

Here a map of the place was shown but not to much purpose.

Thos. White, sworn—Lives in Smith, about a mile from Kearney's store. Prisoner came to my house on morning of 14th of July; witness knew him before; heard a knock at the door, got up and went to back door, then to front door, and saw prisoner; he was in shirt, vest and pants, and I believe a hat, but I could not say whether he was sitting or standing. He spoke, asked for a drink of water and I gave it to him, and he asked me if I would take a drink of his whiskey; I answered no; he took some himself; I asked him if he would go to bed; he said he would go home; witness told him he had better go to bed; he said he thought he would, and went in and went to bed with one of my boys. I did not stay to see him leave in the morning; I went to work before he left; he said he was going to Samuel Nugent's, where he worked. In going there my house lies a little out of his way, about 40 to 60 rods.

Cross-examined by Mr. Scott—The concession line is nearly the direct way to Nugent's. he was the worse for whiskey when he came to my place. He had shoes on his feet, his clothes were not soiled, they were clean as I had ever seen them. It was about 15 minutes to 20 from the time he came till I went to bed, when the clock struck two. I have known him for some time. Young got the name of a stout, active young man.

Richard White sworn—Is son of last witness. Remembers the 14th July. Saw Shearer that night. Could not say at what hour. I was in bed and asleep when he came. I was awoke by my father, and he came up stairs to my room. He came in and caught me by the arm, and I said hullos Tom. There was no light. He said if you had been where I was, you would not have got out with your life. He said there had been a fight in the store, and that some men in the pines had asked him if he had said he could fight such another one, he said yes; and a third one back from the rest said—kill him the damned heretic. I understood that the heretic referred to him.—He said he did not know his way out of the pines. He also said there was going to be a fight in the store. He said too that Frank Young had struck Kearney a kick in the crutch, and that he lay almost an hour dead. I saw him in the morning he had no coat, saw him dressing. His clothes were clean, quite clean. To Mr. Scott. He spoke of a fight in store first, then in pines. I understood that the fight had taken place in the pines first, although not first spoken of.

Alex. Rose sworn—To Mr. Smith.—I live about a mile from Young's point. I saw Shearer on the 14th July on our fields, and had a conversation with him. It was chiefly about work, and how he had got along. He seemed not to know that he was away for a day or two, and said that if Nugent did not pay him for the days he would slap his ears; for he had slapped a better man's ears last night. I asked him who he was; he said "no matter."

To Mr. Scott—He had a bottle, could not say it was liquor; he put it to his head. Through our fields is a short way to Nugents. I have known him for two years. He always talks boastingly when he is drunk; he was talking only about neighbours.

Patrick Young, jr., sworn—Is brother of deceased, Frank Young. I remember time of brother's death. On Thursday, 14th of July I went to Sam. Nugent's, where Shearer worked; it was about six o'clock; I asked him when he had seen my brother, or where he was last with him; he said is Frank not home yet; I said not. I asked him if Frank had been with him; he said he had come along with him to the church hill; he said they had had a long talk, but that prisoner had left and gone home, and Frank turned round and went home; I asked him if Frank was worse of liquor; he said no. He said not to fret, perhaps Frank was gone to the circus. I asked if Frank had a coat on; he said no; he said they both left Kearney's store together about 10 o'clock; I said I heard it was 2 o'clock; he said it was a lie. He said he had stopped at Thomas White's; he said Frank was sober when he saw him. I saw Shearer next day, when he was arrested. I spoke to him and asked him if he knew what he had been telling me; he said he knew nothing about it, that he was drunk.

To Mr. Scott—I do not recollect the very words I made use of before the magistrate, whether after 12 or after 2. There are three board canoes at the point. We have two; we never lock them, they are left were last used. I never saw Shearer in Kearney's; I never saw him much. I never took much notice of him. I never saw Shearer in a canoe; all round the point are good in canoes.

Robert P. Young, sworn—I am brother to the deceased. I went to Sam Nugent's on Tuesday between 11 and 12 o'clock, near midnight. Shearer was in bed. Mr. Nugent awoke him. He came down. I asked him if he had been with my brother. He said yes. I asked if my brother and he had sat on Kearney's steps. He said yes. I asked him if Frank went a piece with him. He said yes; to church, and remained there 15 to 20 minutes. I asked him if Frank had drank with him. He said a small nip, and then got up and went away. Shearer kept his head down all the time and had not much to say. Only answered questions put to him. I noticed a scratch on his face next day. When arrested I saw him and said Tom, Tom, you must know something about Frank. He said nothing as he had been drunk. He had seen him early in the evening, that is all. I found the body on Sunday morning. The body stood upright out of the water, then settled back and sunk under water except the head, but still remained upright. I shouted it was brother's body. It floated, still upright. They would not let me near it except to look at his face.

To Mr. Scott—What I said on Friday was after prisoner had been arrested.

Thos. Negus sworn—To Mr. Smith—I know the prisoner; saw him on the 14th July last at Lakefield. Nugent. He had a little with him, a little whiskey in it. I asked him if he had got back, he said he had, and that he had got a damned good licking. I asked where were his black eyes, he said he guessed he had given the black eyes. He said he would sacrifice me, but when he got up he could not stand, he was so drunk. I left him and went to work. I never had a conversation with him on this matter.

To Mr. Scott, this was about half-past one on the 14th of July. I only told these things to a woman. He had a little scratch on his face, went he away on Wednesday.

Dr. O'Sullivan sworn—I was called upon to make a post mortem examination. I saw the body partly in water, near the shore. It was taken to Kearney's shed.—Externally the body was much swollen, about the neck, head, face and chest; and and it was of a purple tint. There were abrasions on the back. Here he read a written description of the examination, which was filed.

To Mr. Scott—The external violence may have been from a blow of a broad faced instrument. There was no appearance of more than one blow, but there may have been more. There was extravasated clotted blood, which must have taken place before death.

Richard White recalled—Saw the bottle, but could not say there was much whiskey in it.

Geo. White, sworn—To Mr. Scott—Saw the bottle of whisky next morning; there were about 2 glasses out of it, the rest in.

Mr. Scott then addressed the jury on behalf of prisoner, in a forcible and effective speech of considerable length, going over every point in the evidence, and showing that the circumstantial evidence was not such as to convict the prisoner.

Mr. Smith did not address the jury.

The Judge then addressed the jury, going over the evidence to them, and dwelling especially on the Doctor's evidence—that violence was used before casting the body into the river; but summed up by saying that if there was a doubt, a reasonable doubt, it was legally in favor of the prisoner, not through sympathy, but because he was innocent until proved guilty without doubt.

The jury retired, and in about an hour returned into court with a verdict of NOT GUILTY.

The Judge then discharged the prisoner warning him to give up his course of drinking which had placed him in such danger and might have been the cause of terrible consequences to him.

The prisoner through the whole did not appear much downcast, but of course depicted more cheerful looking than usual.

WHISKEY may be written as the only cause of Young's said death, and of Shearer's narrow escape from the gallows. When will christian people blot it from the land?

Present the Mayor, and Messrs. English Lundy, Helm, O'Beirne, Doharty, Rutherford, and Toole.

The minutes of last meeting were read over and confirmed.

The Clerk read his certificate of approval of the By-law by the Ratepayers, submitted to them on the 27th inst., showing that a majority of 59 were in favor of the approval of the By-law.

Also the certificate of Robert Rowe that the Bridge on Hunter Street awarded to Angus Williams to build, has been finished in a satisfactory manner in accordance with the plans and specifications.

The committee on Finance beg leave to Report—That they have had under consideration the commission from the Mayor containing suggestions as to the lessening of the amount of the yearly demand of the Town Trust Commissioner for the debenture debts of the Municipality, thereby lightening our taxation. Your Committee consider that the suggestions are good, and they would recommend the Council to take measures to procure the neccessary authority for the commissioners to deduct the revenues derived from the Town property out of their yearly demand for sinking fund and interest.

As to the communication from Mr. Carlisle requesting to be relieved of his office, your Committee have no other course, under the circumstances than to recommend the resignation to be accepted and consider that Mr. Robert Rowe would be a fit and proper person to be appointed in his stead.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

Sir:—The Peterborough Review of last week contains the following piece of news:

"Samateman the 'man of promise,' a young Indian was ordained a priest of the Roman Catholic Church in the Village of Lorethotte, near Quebec, on Tuesday, with grand and half savage ceremonies, he takes the name of Vincent, and is said to be the first red man made a priest."

I certainly think, the Review has filed enough for its selections, and the exercises of its good taste, without culling falsehoods, and insulting the feelings of Catholics, who deserve widely different treatment at the hands of its present managers.

I am Sir,
Yours truly,
JAMES W. FITZGERALD.

Peterboro', 31st Oct., 1870.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner,

A Disgrace to the County.

Sir,—Any one who has been in the habit of attending the Peterboro' Court, will remember the wretched room in which the Courts are held. It was built many years ago, and has remained unaltered since. The room is small, the ceilings are low—no provision is made for ventilation, and and as a consequence, judge, jury suitors, and lawyers, dread the sittings of the Court. The air is stifling—stinking. If a window is opened colds are the result; so the Judges are compelled, to save themselves from colds, to endure an atmosphere polluted and unsuited for human use.

Petitions and remonstrances signed by Judges and Barristers, have been presented again and again, but without effect. The adjoining jail, built for malefactors is built under Government inspection, and in every way built with a view to sustaining the health of the Criminals—but the room in which honest men sit to try the rogues, is built as if to stifle justice by poisoning Judge and Jury. How long is this to continue!—Plans for ventilation are not unknown—Ruttan parambulates the Country urging his system upon the people. But while the more complicated means are not used, even the simplest are not tried. We suggest to the County Council several modes of abating the nuisance. First plan—add a story to Court Room. Second—put in Ruttan's stoves,—Third and simplest—cut four holes in the ceiling, one in each corner, and let the bad air into the garret. Adopt one of these modes and stop the continuance of so just a cause of complaint.

A SUFFERER.

47. In lieu of sub-section eight of section one hundred and ninety-six the following:—

"I, A. B., do solemly and sincerely make oath, (or affirm as the case may be,) that I am the person named or purporting to be named, on the list of electors; that I am a leaseholder (or freeholder, as the case may be); that my lease extends for the period of time within which the debt contracted by the by-law now submitted the ratepayers is made payable; that I have covenanted in such lease to pay all municipal taxes; and that I am, according to law, entitled to vote on the said by-law."

Provincial Exhibition.

The proprietors of the Brantford Engine Works are, as usual, among the foremost exhibitors at the Fair. Below we subjoin a few facts concerning their show this year:

The plot of ground enclosed by Messrs C. H. Waterous & Co., seemed to be the centre of attraction. This enterprising firm makes this year their usual grand display of machinery—and one of which reflects great credit on their manufacturing powers. They have in operation an 18 inch power Saw Mill, which is the wonder of thousands, when the whistle blows, thousands crowd around and all striving to procure the first and best place for seeing the Mill in operation.

This Mill the most portable Saw Mill built in the Dominion, is of 18 horse power; the engine and boiler are placed on timbers, so constructed as to render them both portable and stationery (when arrangement is patented). The Saw Mill, which is their patent Poney Mill consists of saw mandrel placed in an iron frame, which also holds all the feed and gig work; one end of this mandrel connected direct to the engine shaft, and on the other is the saw, a 15 inch inserted tooth saw, American Saw Company's Manufacture—so that every revolution of the engine is one of the saw; the engine runs 4 0 to 500 revolutions per minute; this principle of direct action is also patented. The saw carriage is a combination of several American patents, and is the best in use. When in motion as he saws a log through log, sees from the quality of the lumber that there is less to make due allowance, sets the log with one hand, and throws the feed into gear with the other. He noticed also two very ingenious contrivances, another of Mr. Waterous patents. This is a set gauge. It is bolted to the saw frame in front of the saw, and food for their own stock and also their neighbours. The mill is very durable, and easily kept in order and at little cost; a set of grinding plates can, by some occasionally personal, be made to last a long time, and when worn out can be replaced for six dollars,—making the mill as good as new

We also noticed in one corner of the ground a small store-room in which they exhibited a large quantity of American Patent Saws—both circular and long saws; there were seen a very fine specimens of the Emerson's latest assorted tooth saws. Nearly every one knows the peculiar construction of this saw Among its many improvements over the old style of saw, we would mention the following, viz: The teeth being separate from the plate are made of fine tool steel, enabling them to take and retain a keen cutting edge; they are set not as in the ordinary saw, but follow directly one after the other like so many chisels, the effect of which is to cut very smooth even lumber, cut it faster, take a third less power to drive it, and makes almost as fine lasting of saw dust, which is infinitely better feed. Though these saws cost more at first than the solid saw, we are assured that they are much the cheaper in the end. They never wear out, but are made large, and as good as new by inserting a new set of teeth which can be done in a few hours without removing the saw from the mangrel and at cost of seventy-five cents each tooth We also noticed a collection of Saw Mill furnishings, consisting of the latest improved saw gummers, saw gauges, and jointers for sawing wages, cant hooks, bolt studs, saw sets, &c., &c.

Messrs Waterous & Co. deserve a great deal of praise for the trouble and expense they go to every year in making such a grand display, which proves one of the attractions of the Exhibition.

We remember hearing some time ago that Brantford proposed having a Water Works. We since learn that Messrs Waterous received the contract for the machinery of the same, and expect to have it in operation during this month. It is a new style of Water Works, designed expressly to supersede the steam fire engine. The principle being to force the water through pipes, hydrants and hose to the fire without the usual expensive reservoir or or intermediate hand or steam fire engine; the motive power being a stationary engine or water power. All parties interested in having an efficient fire protection in their respective cities, towns and villages, will profit by attending the public opening and trial of these new works.—Toronto Telegraph.

For every word in the following certificate found untrue, after writing to the parties named: and to the U. S Consul, at Rio Janerio, the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid.

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 28th, 1866.

Messrs. Raymundo C. Leite & Bro:

Gentlemen;—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta [a large proprietor, in the Cidad de Campos] was staying at my House he was attacked with Intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr Tonoco, who is thought a good deal of in Campos, but the fever instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr Tonoco, declared that there was not the slightest hopes of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the relief pure on the chest, back and wrists; three of Radway's Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one dessert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the method of Dr. Radway & Co's. medicaments

I remain, gentlemen, yours very obedient servant

Select Poetry.

Sermons in Trees.

In the midnight hour, when silence reigns
Through the leafy forest deep,
Begins a whispering, resting sound,
For then each bush and tree around
Finds tongues when mortals sleep.

The wild rose breathed soft odours round
And gaily spoke though low;—
'Short is the rose's utmost prime,
E'en so!—the shorter is the time
And the brighter will I blow!'

The aspen said, 'My gaudy day
Allowed not with its glare,
The unbeam of a death stroke gives—
'Tis in the shade that wisdom lives
Safe, though I tremble there!'

And next the slender poplar spoke,
And pointed to the sky;
'Those streams so sweet so pure a light
Of moonlight beauty, calm and bright,
I fain would wave on high!'

The willow glanced to earth and said,
In accents kind and mild,
'My floating locks o'er thee I bend,
Thy fragile flowers be mine to tend,
As mothers tend a child!'

And next the laden plum-tree sighed
'Believe me of my board!
I bear it not for self alone,
My treasures when you make your own
My vigour is restored.'

Then spake the fir, 'What tho' on me,
Nor flowers nor fruit ye view,
From constancy my honours grow—
Alike, in sunshine, storm, and snow,
I never change my hue.'

The lofty oak exclaimed, 'Alone
Heaven's lightning me can rend;
No storm hath power to bend me down—
Let my strong stem and crown
The weaker tribes defend!'

The ivy heard him offer thus
His staunen support to lend:
And around him soon her arms were thrown,
For they who cannot stand alone
May lean upon a friend.

And now so many voices rose
That memory fades away;
Each whispering leaf had found a tongue,
Only the mournful cypress hung
Mute o'er a mound of clay!

Oh, that their whispered morals all,
In human hearts sank deep!
But all unheard and all untold
The trees their nightly converse hold
While mortals are asleep!

—From the German of Anastasius Grun.

Varieties.

Bashfulness.—There are two distinct sorts of what we call bashfulness; the, the awkwardness of a booby, which a few steps into the world will convert into the pertness of a coxcomb; that, a consciousness which the most delicate feelings produce and the most extensive knowledge cannot always remove.

Industry and Indolence.—Every industrious man, by his labor, manual or mental, depends upon his personal exertions for fortune and for fame. Every indolent man depends for subsistence upon the labor of others—upon patrimonial resources, or upon trick and fraud. One adds to common stock of wealth and human enjoyment, and the other adds nothing. The last are like the grain-worms, which consume or crops without rendering any equivalent to society.

A Man having bought a ten guinea pocket handkerchief for his better half an acquaintance remarked that she must be a "duck of a wife;" to which a bystander added, "Or he must be a goose of a husband."

Very Like.—A gentleman who was once interceding with Bishop Blomfield for a clergyman who was constantly in debt, and had more than once been insolvent, but who was a man of talents and eloquence, concluded his eulogium by saying, "In fact my lord, he is quite a St. Paul."—"Yes," replied the Bishop, dryly, "in prisons oft."

"Where are you Going?" asked a little boy of another who had slipped and fallen on an icy pavement—"Going to get up," was the blunt reply.

Looking after the Collector.—The gipsies in the Hof Garden in Pesth have a curious way of looking after the honesty of of their money collector. The person intrusted with the mission of taking the hat round among the crowd has a living fly put to his left hand while he holds the plate with his right. When he returns with the funds he must bring the fly back alive, as a sign that he has not taken any money from the common property; but if the fly be wanting, or even dead, he does not get his share of the money.

A Young Lady being told by a friend that silk dresses were very much worn, replied that she knew it, for here had two or three holes in it.

"How fortunate I am in meeting a rain beau, in this storm," said a young lady, who was caught in a shower the other day, to her "beau of promise," who happened to come along with an umbrella. "And I," said he, gallantly, "am as much rejoice! as the poor Laplander who he caught a rain-dear."

At a juvenile party a young gentleman about seven years old, kept himself from the rest of the party. The lady of the house called to him;—"Come and play and dance, my dear—Choose one of those pretty girls for your wife." "Not likely," cried the young cynic, "no wife for me; do you think I want to be worried out of my life like poor papa?"

Question and Answer.—A young lady wishing to entangle a young man in the meshes of Cupid, sent him the following invitation:—

O, will you come to tea with I,
And help me eat a custard pie?

To which the young man, with corresponding sentiment and grammar, replied:—

"Another one's asked me to tea,
And I must go and visit she."

A Matter-of-Fact Woman.—An American editor describes a clergyman's wife who never forgot herself in any momentary fit of enthusiasm. She could count the clock amid his kisses, and look to see whether the pot was boiling with her eyes full of tears he had wrung from them by some moving story. While he was listening in rapture to her singing, she would break off in the middle of a verse to ask her what she should cook for his supper, and he would never forgive her having once interrupted him while she was listening with deep emotion to his very best sermon, to tell him not to put his left stocking on the next morning till she had mended it.

Paddy, who was arrained before a court for horse stealing, and after having pleaded not guilty, the judge asked by whom he would be tried? "By the twelve apostles," answered the prisoner. The judge told him that would not do, for if he was tried by them he could not have his trial till the day of Judgement. "Faith, says Paddy, and I have no objection to that neither, for I am in noburry about it, at all at all."

MADOC, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to anyone afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The vegetable remedies contained in this compound are unequaled in their power to cure. Some of which are truly wonderful. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and ulcerous complaints, which have resisted all other treatment, have been radically cured by it. Many of these cases have been publicly known in every section of the country, so that the public scarcely need to be informed of the virtues of so well-known a remedy.

Sarsaparilla, in the mass of the community, is generally considered valuable for little else than its reputation. Often, this unscrupulous or ignorant practitioner imagines the compound to be powerless, and, prescribing it in broken doses, which can do no good, gives the patient the full benefit of his prejudice. Again, the sufferer, taking it through want of faith, and perseveres in it with the following result, that, after having wasted time, money, and strength, he is compelled to abandon it, and resort to other remedies, which, if taken in the first place, would have cured him at once. Hence the necessity of a Sarsaparilla which can be relied on to do all that Sarsaparilla can do. Such a one we offer to the afflicted, in the hope that they will not be deceived by inert preparations, which can only result in disappointment and injury.

Sarsaparilla and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing the evils these medicines inflict upon the system. But long continued use of this medicine will cure. Ulcerous sores on any part of the body, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Boils, Pimples, Blotches, Humors, and other eruptions or visible forms of impurity, are expelled from the system by this medicine, and the skin made to assume a healthy appearance. Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and the various Glandular and Visceral complaints, are commonly relieved by its use, and ultimately cured by it, in those long-standing cases which have baffled all other treatment. Female weaknesses, Irregularities, and Suppressions of the menstrual functions, are restored to healthful action by the use of this preparation. Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, and Diseases of the Skin, are cleansed by it, and the vital current purified, when these eruptions are found in our system, expelling them through the natural channels of the blood, which can only be done by an alterative of extraordinary virtues. Many of the worst cases of Scrofula have been cured by this remedy, and the popular confidence it has inspired as the best antidote for this fearful disease, is daily attested by the voluntary statements of those who have been cured by it. Many of these publications are well known to the people of this section of the country, and the certificates of the cures performed are of the most reliable character. Such evidence of the power of this medicine to cure the diseases for which it is recommended, we think entitles it to the confidence of the afflicted. While we do not claim for it the virtues of a panacea, we do claim that it is the best blood purifier that has ever been brought before the public, and that it will cure more real cases of disease than any other remedy we know of. Those who have tried other preparations, and been disappointed in their effects, are especially invited to give this Sarsaparilla a fair trial. The reasonable price at which it is sold places it within the reach of all, and the cheapest blood medicine you can buy is

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and strongly upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in no-wise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgements we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed. Unacclimated persons, either on visiting, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry Jacobs' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

The Wolf at the Door.

You're tired, dear mother, your cheek is quite pale;
Won't you lay down your sewing, and tell me a tale
Of fairies that sent, in the good times of old,
Rich banquets and jewels and purses of gold?
Or about little Riding-Hood crossing the moor,
Was the wolf that she met like our wolf at the door?

Shall we never walk out where the houses so tall
Have lace o'er each window, and lamps in each hall?
Where the curly-haired children play over the grass?
We might hear their gay laughter and talk as we pass;
Must you sit here and work till your fingers are sore?
I think we might stand by the wolf at the door!

I'll lay down your work,—oh, how warm it will be—
My nice little cloak—why I thought 'twas for me!
Once always in garments as fine I was dressed,
But I shan't ask for this if you think t'would be best;
Yet I can't understand what you told me before,
That it might for a while keep the wolf from the door.

The clothes I have on are so thin and so worn
I try to be thankful they never are torn;
But I should like some new ones, with tassels and braid.
And stockings, not shrunken, nor faded, nor frayed,
And a pair of new shoes—how they'd creak on the floor!
And then he might hear them—the wolf at the door.

The room's growing dark, and I can't see to play
By the light of the lamp that shines over the way;
And the shadows that flit o'er the gleam on the wall—
They frighten me, coming so shapeless and tall;
Oh, how I would beg for a candle once more,
If you thought he'd not see us—the wolf at the door!

And the fire on the hearth, it has died away quite—
Won't you kindle a new one, dear mother to-night?
Don't you love the soft flames as they crackle and glow?
They would warm your poor hands, that are cold as the snow?
And the kettle would sing—hark! is that the wind's roar?
Oh, mother! I fear 'tis the wolf at the door?

Well, hear me my prayers, and I'll lie down in bed,
And while your arm is passed under my head,
Won't you tell me again to be trusting and brave,
Though I march over thorns, on my way to the cradle my heart rests at this to the core—
Dear mother, is sin like the wolf at the door?

And tell me of mansions still grander than those
Where the rich children play, and the grass greenly grows;
Where they'll give me bright robes, and a crown for my head,
And on fruits from the gardens of God I'll be fed;
Oh mother! to think there we'll live evermore,
And be in no fear of the wolf at the door!

Mrs. A. M. F. Annan.

Natural Products of Red River.

"What are our natural products?" It is impossible to answer this question with any degree of fulness.

This country has hitherto been a TERRA INCOGNITA to the rest of the world. It is now in a state of verginity, and it will be impossible to state what may be brought forth and developed in the course of the next ten years. Our territory is the largest in the world, and the unrighteous monopoly, in whose possession it has so long been, have found it to be to their policy and interest to develope nothing but trade in furs. Undoubtedly they know more as to its mineral and metalic wealth than any others at present can know, which knowledge they have had the best means of acquiring; still, rather than throw the land open to an industrious population to the detriment of their profits in muskrat skins and silver foxes, they have studiously kept those sources of wealth concealed. But what they know about such things will soon be made apparent if the Honorable (save the mark) Company are allowed to make such reserves as they see fit when they make a transfer of their territory.

But when this country has been tolerably well explored by expeditions sent from England and Canada, and by private parties who have been travelling through on pleasure or business; and through them much has been learned of its surface indications, and by such out-crops we are led to believe that the womb of mother nature is teeming with wealth, comfort and happiness, and that it will be brought forth in good time, with the aid of a wise government and an enterprising population.

Our coal beds are among the largest in the world. The character of the coal is bituminous, and when taken from a bed of considerable thickness,—from 4 to 8 feet—it burns with a clear flame and deposits a clean white ash. The nearest out-croppings occur on the Assinniboine, about 100 miles from the town of Winnipeg, or some 40 miles above Portage la Prairie. The next surface show of it is upon the banks of the Souris or Mouse river, a branch of the Assinniboine, and about 130 miles above the portage. The thickness of the seams of coal at these points is not very great, but it increases as we proceed westward, and upon the North Saskatchewan at Edmonton it presents itself in a manner beth as regards quantity and quality, calculated to satisfy all requirements. The Company's black at Edmonton uses it continually in his forge, and replenishes his supply from time to time by quarrying it for himself from the seam on the banks of the river. But one of the most remarkable exhibits of coal in the territory is upon the banks of the Pembina river; a branch, we believe, of the Athabasca;—and distant from Edmonton about 125 miles. At the point where the trail to the Jasper's House pass crosses the Pembina, that river has worn its way through the stratum of coal and to some considerable depth to the harder rocks beneath, leaving a seam of inky blackness, from 8 to 10 feet thick, composed of an excellent quality of bituminous coal, and about ten feet, if we remember rightly above water mark. We were on that spot in the month of August 1862, and never were our eyes gladdened with a more remarkable provision of Providence for the wants of a future population. Standing upon a small eminence near a point where the coal has been on fire since the memory of man, we had a view of this immense store of fuel and could trace the seam by its blackness as far along the river as the eye could reach. This is undoubtedly the same bed of coal which protrudes upon the Saskatchewan and it appears to be of immense extent. It has been traced from Lat. 53° N., Longitude 113½° No., Longitude 116° W. Besides the place we have mentioned, the coal beds are on Smoking river, a branch of the Peace river, and upon the shores of the Lesser Slave Lake. Most assuredly the territory has an adequate supply of coal, but these immense beds will never be developed in their fulness until Old England and the Dominion are awkened to the necessity of a British Pacific Railway; and we hope the American Road, now nearly completed, will soon cause such a pressure upon the pockets of old John Bull as will arouse him into a sense of his duty.

The only seaboard deposits of coal in America are in the British dominion, in Nova Scotia and British Columbia, and these together with our own coal fields form an inexhaustible supply of fuel for all of the requirements of commerce between England and China.

It would be well in this place to make a few remarks about our asphaltum or mineral pitch. This useful substance seems to be deposited in inexhaustible quantities near the Athabasca river in Longitude 111½° W. Sir John Richardson says "the whole country for many miles is so full of bitumen that it flows readily into a pit dug a few feet below the surface." In fact the whole region is impregnated with bitumen, and in the spring of 1865, while encamped near the spring from whence the Company take their supply for pitching their boats, we gathered large lumps of sand which had become cemented with this substance, and upon applying fire to the heap, we had an impromptu illumination of that wild region which had indescribable effect, the night being moonless and dark. This copious spring of bitumen lies a little way back from the river, and the Company's employees dip out their supplies with a bucket. After boiling, this pitch has very much the appearance and consistency of coal tar which is produced in the manufacture of gas.

Petroleum, although analogus in its nature to asphaltum, has not, as yet, been discovered in the territory—although we have little doubt, but it will be found if sought after by experienced men.

Plumbago, according to Sir John Richardson, of excellent quality, has been found on the shores of Athabasca Lake.

Gypsum, or Plaster of Paris, occurs in cliffs upon the Peace river, not far from Fort Chipwayan, and is white and pure; in many cases, translucent and compact, like alabaster. This formation is believed to extend in a north-westerly direction to the Salt river, a branch of Slave river, and undoubtedly extends to the southward as well, although we had no opportunity of examining the opposite side of Peace

Salt is the next natural product which presents itself to our consideration, and we think thet a sufficiency will always be found for the wants of the future millions who will find their homes in this fair land. It can be produced in abundance within a short distance of this settlement; and it has been found in various localities so situated that in no part of the country will it have to be freighted to any great distance in order to afford an adequate supply for any centre of population.

Natural salt, of a fine edible quality, is produced in great quantity at the springs on Salt river, which flows into the Slave river, not far from Fort Chipwayan. This salt is beautifully pure, and is deposited in large cubical crystals close to the springs, of which there are eight in number.

We have been assured by an officer in the H. B. Company's service, that the salt is thrown up around the wells to the height of six or seven feet, and the men who carry it away have only to shovel it into their sacks. This salt is collected by the Company for the supply of all their posts on the Peace and Mackenzie rivers. This salt formation undoubtedly extends to the Peace river and across it. Salt springs have been found on the Peace river, not far from Vermillion. Coming further toward the east, salt springs are found at the base of the Wa-pask-wa-ow or Pas hills, not far from Cumberland, and is made by the Indians and half-breeds, although of a poor quality, from want of knowledge in its manufacture. Salt is manufactured for the use of this settlement on the shores of Lakes Manitobah and Winnepegoosis.—Good quality has been produced, but rarely, however. But the nearest salt springs have been found at Fairford mission, almost at our doors, and all that is needed is a little capital and proper knowledge to produce it as cheaply here as elsewhere.—Here is an opportunity for somebody to do well at reasonable prices, and this people will thank the man who will reduce the price of good salt to even $1 per bushel.—It now sells at from $2 50 to $4 per bush. The brine is very rich in salt. Mr. Thos. Spence last summer obtained one bushel from 24 gallons of brine.—Nor-Wester.

A tavern-keeper had recently erected a shower bath in one of his rooms. One evening an Irishman, who happened to be drinking with a few companions, rose up for the purpose of ringing for more liquor. Looking around the room for the bell-rope his eye fell on the rope attached to the shower bath. 'By Saint Patrick!' said he, 'I have found the bell-rope at last!' and seizing it, he gave it 'a strong pull and a pull altogether.' In an instant he was drenched to the skin, and almost frantic with rage, to the no small amusement of his companions

At a late printers' festival the following toast was presented: The Printer—the master of all trades: he beats the farmer with the Hoe, the carpentor with his rules, and the mason with setting up tall colums; he surpasses the lawyer and the doctor in attending to his cases, and he beats the parson in the management of the devil.

A free pass was sent to Rev. Geo. Trask, of Fitchburg, Mass., the anti-liquor anti-tobacco champion, which read as follows: "Pass the Rev. Geo. Trask for service in fighting the devil on his own hook, till December, 1869."

—The Montreal Witness is publishing valuable temperance tracts at 300 copies for $1. The temperance organisations might do a good work by ordering a few dollars' worth for gratuitous distribution.

Misprints will present themselves in other columns besides those of newspapers. The author of a temperance novel, who wrote, "Drunkenness is folly," was horrified to read "Drunkeness is jolly."

ARMY, VERY.—A gentleman, writing a letter at his breakfast table, dipped his pen in the coffee, and continued his letter. Noteing his mistake, he put a large lump of sugar in the ink, and then finding his second blunder, poured the contents into the coffee-pot to settle it.

Legend of a Musket.

Mark Twain tells the following story related by a fellow passenger, who, being bantered about his timidity, said he had never been scared since he loaded an old Queen Ann's musket for his father once, whereupon he gave the following:

"You see, the old man was trying to learn me to shoot blackbirds and beasts that tore up the young corn and such things so that I could be of some use about the farm, because I wasn't big enough to do much. My gun was a single barrelled shot gun, and the old man scared an old Queen Anne musket that weighed a ton, made a report like a thunderclap, and kicked like a mule. The old man wanted me to shoot the musket sometime, but I was afraid.—One day, though, I got her down, and as I took her to the hired man, and asked him how to load her, because it was out in the field. Hiram said "Do you see those marks on the stock—an X and a V on each side of the Queen's crown. Well —— means ten balls and five slugs—thats her load."

"But how much powder?"

"Oh," he says, "it don't matter; put in three or four handfulls."

"So I loaded her up that way, and it was an awful charge—I had enough scares to see that, and started out. I levelled her on a good many blackbirds; but every time I went to pull the trigger, I shut my eyes and winked. I was afraid of her kick. Toward sundown I walked up to the house and there was the old man resting on the porch.

"'Been out hunting, have ye?'

"'Yes sir.' says I.

"'What did you kill?'

"'Didn't kill anything, sir—didn't shoot her off—was afraid she would kick.'—(I knew blame well she would.)

Gimme thar gun!' the old man said, as mad as sin.'

And he took aim at the sapling on the other side of the road, and I began to drop back out of danger. And the next moment I heard the earthquake, and heard the Queen Anne whirling end over end in the air and the old man spinning round on one heel, with one leg up and both hands on his jaw, and the bark flying from the old sapling like there was an hail storm. The old man's shoulder was set back three inches and his jaw turned black and blue and he had to lay up for three days. Cholera nor nothing else can scare me the way I was scared that time.

"Show Him the Apple."

A few months ago, in the narrow main street of the clean little market town of Woolbridge, the following little incident occured, illustrative of the power of kindness to animals:

A horse was pulling a heavy-laden cart up a little rising ground in the street above named, when the poor animal which seemed to have more load than enough jibbed A——— persistently refused to proceed further. cart and driver. The latter and bystanders applied their shoulders to the wheel, but all to no purpose; another tugged at the horse's head and the lash was used pretty freely. The effect was a further jibe on the part of the horse, which nearly resulted in a wheel going through a plate-glass window of the principal booksellers's shop. The bookseller, a shrewd common sense man, at once saw how matters stood, and fetching a large rosy apple rushed into the street, and held the apple before the horse's nose, when, amidst the laughter and astonishment of the bystanders, off went the gallant grey, after the apple, up the street, at a smart five-mile an-hour trot as if he had only a perambulator or handcart behind him!

Reader—If you ever find a fellow-man hardly pressed—with a greater load than he can fairly struggle under—don't use the lash of hard words or the shoulder of illusage; treat him kindly, say a kind sympathising word or two, and show a little of that heaven-born quality, mercy.

In a word when you have a difficulty with a man or beat, don't use the whip but "Show him the Apple."—Uncle John.

Faithful is He.

By the side of a rippling brook in one of the secluded glens of Scotland, there stands a low mud thatched cottage, with its neat honey-suckled porch facing the south. Beneath this humble roof on a snow-white bed lay; not long ago, Nancy, the Scotch woman, patiently and cheerfully waiting the moment when her happy spirit would take flight to "mansions in the skies;" expecting with holy Paul, "We know that if our earthly tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." By her bedside on a small table, lay her spectacles, and her well thumbed bible, her "barrel and her cruise," as she used to call it, —from which she daily, yea: hourly, spiritually led on the "Bread of life." A young minister frequently called to see her. He loved to listen to her simple expressions of bible truths; for when she spoke of her "inheritance, incorruptable, undefiled and that passeth not away," it seemed but a little way off, and the listner almost fancied he heard the redeemed in heaven saying; "Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood."

One day the young minister put to the happy saint the following question: 'Now Nannie,' he said, 'what after all your prayers, waitings and watchings, God should suffer your soul to be eternally lost?' Pious Nannie raised herself on her elbow, and turning to him a wishful look laid her right hand on the precious bible, which lay open betore her, and quietly replied: 'Ae, deerie me, is that a' the length ye has got, mon?'—and then continued, her bright eyes sparkling with almost heavenly brightness: 'God would hae the greatest loss. Poor Nannie would but lose her soul—that would be a great loss, indeed, but God would lose his honor and his character. Haven't I hung my soul on his 'exceeding great and precious promises?' and if he brak' his word, he will he himself, and 'a the universe would rush into confusion.'

By faith the old Scotch woman had cast her soul's salvation upon God's promises in Christ by the gospel. In every sorrow she had found a 'very present help in trouble;' and now about to leave the weary wilderness for her everlasting home could she think that he would prove unfaithful to his word? No. Sooner than poor Nannie's soul would be lost. God's honor. God's character, God himself must be overturned, and 'a the universe rush into confusion!'

Dear old Pilgrim.

A Volunteer in one of the infantry regiments found in the breast pocket of a French man killed at Gravelotte a letter from a Frenchwoman, who, from the terms of the letter, was evidently his cousin, in which the writer in a postscript, (always the essence of a woman's letter) says:—"Make haste to return, and bring with you the head of one of those infamous Prussians!—I should rejoice in such a wedding gift."

How to be Handsome.

Most people like to be handsome. Nobody denies the great power any person may have who has a good face, and who attracts you by good looks, even before a word has been spoken. And we see all sorts of devices in men and women to improve their good looks—paints and washes, and all kinds of cosmetics, including a plentiful anointing with dirty hair-oil.

Now, not every one can have good features. They are as God made them; but almost any person can look well with good health. It is hard to give rules in a very short space, but in brief, these will do.

Keep clean—wash freely and universally with cold water. All the skin wants is leave to act freely; and it will take care of itself. Its thousands of air-holes must not be plugged up.

Eat regularly and simply. The stomach can not work all the time, night and day, any more than a horse; it must have regular work and regular rest.

Good teeth are a help to good looks.—Brush them with a soft brush, especially at night. Go to bed with the teeth clean. Of course to have white teeth it is needful to let tobacco alone. Any powder or wash for the teeth should be very simple.

Acids may whiten the teeth, but they take off the enamel or injure them.

Sleep in a cool room, in pure air. No one can have a clean skin who breathe bad air. But more than all, in order to look well—wake up the mind and soul.—When the mind is awake, the dull, sleepy look passes away from the eyes, I do not know that the brain expands, but it seems to. Think, read—not trashy novels, but books that have something in them. Talk with people who know something; hear lectures and learn by them.

This is one good of preaching. A man thinks and works, and tells us the result. And if we listen, and hear, and understand the mind and soul are worked. If the spiritual nature is aroused, so much the better. We have seen a plain face really glorified by the image of God and man which shone through it. It set us grow handsome. Men say they cannot afford books, and sometimes they do not even pay for their newspaper. In that case it does them no good—they must feel no sense while reading it. But men can afford when they really want. If the money spent in self-indulgence, in hurtful indulgence, were spent in books and self-improvement, we could see a change. Men would grow handsome, and women too. The soul would shine out through the eyes. We are not meant to be mere animals. Let us have books, and read them; and lectures, and hear them, and sermons, and heed them.—Health Reformer.

Love.

Never be ashamed of having loved any one. If you have "hated," then blush for it, but not for love. It does not matter at all whether the person on whom your affections fix themselves reciprocated the sentiment. Where there is no shame in loving, in itself, the fact of having given love without reward can bring none with it. You have only bestowed a gift more precious than any jewel can be upon one who did not thank you. Since there is sorrow to one's self in it, it is better to struggle with the heart, and keep it until it is asked for; but if it goes irrevocably forth despite all effort, no need to go about like a guilty thing, and long to hide from your very self. God gave you that great love, and I believe that somehow it will mingle with the life of the one it hovers over, and shed a perfume and lend a sweetness to it, though it has never been spoken.

Many a woman's life has shrivelled away under the weight of "disappointed love," merely because her shame in it was so great. The false sentiment that teaches "——" to be in the seem a natural beauty [illegible] future.

"I think it would be better if even a woman dare to say. 'I loved him, but he did not love me,' with the same sad sweetness with which when years have glided by she can utter the words, 'I loved him, and he died.'

HOW ALE STRENGTHENED HIM.—A student of one of our State colleges had a barrel of ale despotted in his room, contrary, of course, to rule and usage. He received a summons to appear before the President, who said:

"I am informed that you have a barrel of ale in your room."

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what explanation can you make?"

"Why, the fact is, sir, my physician advised me to try a little each day as a tonic, and not wishing to stop at the various places where the beverage is retailed, I concluded to have a barrel taken to my room."

"Indeed. And have you derived any benefit from the use of it?

"Yes, sir, it has strengthened me."

"How do you know that?"

"I know that when the barrel was first taken into my room, three days since, I could scarcely lift it. Now I can carry it in my arms with the greatest ease."

He was not expelled.

TO MAKE HOME HAPPY.—To make home truly happy, there should be no concealments; that is the canker-worm. Let a woman tell her troubles and follies freely to her husband, and he will assist her out of them. He is her other self—not her judge and master. If a man confides in his wife, her consolation and quick wit will often see things that escaped him. We are in the world all day—our minds are occupied by many details; but she sits at home, often alone, or with an infant companion; she thinks over what you have told her, and sees it in many lights; she has had the time you wanted. The discovery that there has been a secret excites jealousy, and loosens the ties of affection on either side. Without perfect and entire confidence married happiness is seldom lasting.

Christian Earnestness.

John Knox prayed, Lord give me Scotland or I die!" has been dead almost 200 years; yet all Scotland feels his power still. Such earnestness is not soon forgotten.

Geo. Muller began his work, teaching one orphan child, 35 years ago. He now has a church of 900 members, 90 of whom go out every Sabbath afternoon and preach to 10,000 people around Bristol. He has also established missions abroad. When he wants money he asks God and it comes

A gentleman in Dublin, who is no talker, but has great wealth, keeps eight printing presses going, printing tracts, many of which he writes himself, in seven different languages, and thus he is imparting gospel truth to multitudes.

A butcher in London, and a Christian only seven years, began telling others what God had done for him, and the result was their salvation. He has now a chapel that holds 1800, and has 560 members. He has a large business, but preaches five nights in a week in the streets, in halls and other places in the city.

Mr. Carter, who labors among London thieves, burglars and pickpockets, has gathered a church of 1,600 members, with wide interests sixteen hundred members, meeting 400 at a time, who, without her labors would receive no religious instruction.

These instances show what some may do when fully consecrated to the work of saving souls. Were all professed [illegible] ment, the world would be given to Christ in a very few years.

The Embro Review has a libel suit on hand.

The Premians are still around Paris, but are not active, except in strengthening their position. Faint hopes of a peace are expected.

The French provisional Government has refused to ratify the armistice arranged by Monsieur Thiers—It would thus appear that they are determined to provoke their own destruction.

Rumors are afloat that Peter Pearce, Esq., is to be the man for taking the census in the East Riding, and S. S. Peck, Esq., the man for the West Riding. Since it must go to favorites, these gentlemen will suit us as well as any.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.—Mr. Lech has just returned from the back country with over $3,000 worth of Peltry—consisting of 500 mink, 100 fisher, 150 martin and over 2,000 muskrat. He will return in a week or two, we understand, for another lot.

AN INDUSTRIOUS WOMAN.—One woman in the back woods sold Mr. Lech $51 worth of furs, trapped this fall by herself, and during the time she was attending to the trapping she raised 400 bushels of potatoes. We don't think she is troubled with dyspepsia.

Two hundred and ten of the Papel Zouaves, who left Montreal for the Papal army, returned on Friday last. They were met at the station by a few priests and after a march through the streets they proceeded to the Parish church, where the Te deum was sung. The Bishop addressed them. There were 12,000 persons in the church on the occasion.

PERSONAL.—On Saturday evening last numerous friends called on Mr. Thomas Bradburn to express their sympathy on account of the peculiar position he had been compelled to occupy by his former solicitor. An oyster supper was the result of their meeting, and a pleasant time afterwards. We have occupied so much space with the late trials that we cannot give the suitable to the occasion.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION—We have been requested to insert the following:—

"To parents, Guardians, Pastors, and others whose Sons, Wards, or Friends may be leaving home for residence in the City of Toronto.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Toronto announces that they have a Committee for the purpose of showing kindness to Young Men who are strangers, and leading them under religious influences. It is requested that all who desire the co-operation of this committee, will send the names and addresses of Young Men about to remove to Toronto, in whom they are interested, by the person himself if possible, or by post, with such particulars of character as they may deem proper.

ASSIZES—Continued.

POOLE vs. HENTHORN.

This was a case brought by Lieut. Col. Poole, against Mr. Henthorn, a magistrate, for false imprisonment. It appears from the trial that on the night of the election of Mayor, for Peterboro, Col. Poole assaulted Mr. George Tanner. Mr. Tanner had him brought before Mr. Henthorn, who fined the Col. $2 and costs, and ordered him to find sureties to keep the peace, and before settlement of the fines, Col Poole was arrested and taken to jail, but was immediately released by paying the fine and costs, and finding sureties that he would keep the peace for a year.

Mr. Scott and H. Cameron for plf and Smith and Patterson for the deft.

Col. Poole sworn.—Had a quarrel with one Tanner about the time of the last Municipal election. I was brought before Mr. Henthorn and fined $2 and costs. I was also bound over to keep the peace. I believed that Mr. Henthorn showed very bad feeling during the trial. He also overcharged in his costs I went to his office and demanded a detailed statement of cost. The bill was extortionate and improper. I got sureties to keep the peace; he did not take them; I was sent to jail; I had asked for a bill of costs; he said he would not grant it; I demanded it, and laid down half a dollar for it; I walked out. Two days after a Constable came to me; I asked if he had the bill of costs, he said he had, and I paid $13.20. He said I had better go up and settle the other affair and get sureties. I went and took two men as sureties, and asked if they would be acceptable, he said, oh yes, I suppose so, any person would do. He went to his desk to get papers but could not find them. I said I was in harry; he said he hadn't them; he supposed Freddy had them; and said he would go and look for them, and went out and remained about half an hour.—There was a constable at least part of the time. He came back and said he had nothing more to do with it, it was out of his hands now. I said I suppose I can go away, that I am free. He said he off about your business, you have too much to say. I went away and heard no more about it till next day, when the Constable came after me. I refused to go, and told him I was not going, that I had been annoyed enough. I had offered the surety, and had now nothing to do with it. He read the warrant and arrested me by putting his hand on my shoulder told me I was his prisoner, and took me to jail and handed me over to the Turnkey. I said I had now been fooled enough, and that I was willing to give sureties. Mr. Lewis McGregor and Wm. Waddell offered to go sureties. Mr. Henthorn then took them and I was discharged. The same evening the Constable came and offered me $5 back, this was after I had taken proceedings for overcharging me. During the Tanner trial he said some peculiar things. He said he would not allow me to dictate in his court, when I went back for bill of cost and for the half dollar I put on his desk. He said I would get no more I had got too much already. I had annoyed him. He once came into the Drill Shed when I was drilling my men. He asked me if we were going to Toronto; I said not. He said he would take a vote of the men on it. I said he was damned fool. I said I would put him out of the Drill Shed. He lost his temper then. A little after this he was telling in Mr. Chambers Saloon about being to Ottawa, and sitting in the Governor's chair, and having on a coat dressed in silver lace. I asked whose it was; he said he had borrowed it from the Hon. Sidney Smith, (great laughter). Cross examined. I was fined $2; don't remember the day. It was for an assault on one Tanner. The trial was before Henthorn. I cannot swear whether Mr. Croft keeps a Hotel or not. I do not know the name of the Hotel. This was after I had given directions to proceed against Mr. Henthorn. I think when I went to give sureties Mr. Cummings the Constable went out. Mr. McGregor keeps a stage. Mr. Waddell lives in town. I once met Mr. Henthorn at Faucher's. I did not draw my hand over his mouth, or across his face. Here the evidence was gone over much as before.

Lewis McGregor, sworn,—Heard the evidence of Col. Poole and believe it to be correct. The defendant was rather hasty. To Mr. Smith,—I have a stage, not livery stable.

Mr. Waddell, sworn.—Heard the evidence, and believed it correct. Cross examined.—I believe I was good then for $100, since I have gone into insolvency.

Wm. Croft, sworn.—I had a little to do with settling this case. Col. Poole asked me to go and try to settle it. I thought it was an over charge and did not pay it.—Mr. Henthorn came to my place to see me. He said Poole was a drunken loafer, and he was going to—— heading and that served him right to fine him.

Mr. Cummings, Constable, sworn.—Was in Henthorn's office when McGregor and Waddell offered to become his sureties. The warrant of committal was then given to me, at the time they were in the office. To the Judge—this is so. The day following the arrest Mr. Smith gave me $4 40 to take back to Mr. Poole. Cross examined. To Mr. Patterson—This was after the day he was fined. I went to Col. Poole for the money, he refused to pay it. I told him I had the warrant for committal, and also for him to fine sureties. I was two or three times with him before he paid it.—When he took the sureties there Mr. Henthorn said, I suppose they will do. Mr. Poole was to come back at one or two o'clock. He did not come. I next saw him in McGregor's Saloon, about 5 o'clock, Wm. Waddell was with him. It was too late to do business. Next day I went and arrested him. He said I had no right, as he had offered bail and Henthorn would not take it, and that he was not then going after bail; and unless I arrested him he would not go. I did arrest him and took him to hall of Court House. He then went back and found bail. He said now it is enough you have put me in jail. I will give bail. To the Judge—Mr. Henthorn did go to look for Freddie, to get the paper. Mr. Poole agreed to come back in an hour. He did not come back as agreed. I went afterwards to arrest him in performance of my duty as a Constable. I got no particular instructions from Mr. Henthorn. The Judge said there was no use to go to the jury, as Mr. Poole had really invited a law-suit and of course he must bear the consequence. Mr. Henthorn had done nothing wrong, and no Magistrate could be held to dance attendance on those who were brought before them. He therefore directed a non-suit, as Magistrates had a right to expect protection in the discharge of their duty.

McCABE vs. MCCANNON.—Weller for plf Edmison for deft This was a complicated land case, in which Mr. McCabe sought damages for trespass, and for wheat forcibly taken from a lot in Otonabee. One John Stewart took out the patent for the lot, but deed without heirs. The property fell to his brother in Ireland, as heir. This brother died in Ireland in 1852, leaving 8 children, the elder of whom lived in Upper Canada. He claimed the lot, and related it to one Osborne, for 10 years. Osborne died, and his wife's father worked the lot for her for 6 years. McCabe heard of the lot and went to STENSON vs. LASHER.—This was a case arising out of a 'partnership,' we believe.—Mr. Edmison for plf; Mr. Dumble for deft. Verdict for deft.

FRIDAY.

The first case was:—

TULLY & MCDONALD vs. CHAMBERLAIN.—This was a saw log suit. It appeared that Messrs. Tully & McDonald had agreed to draw saw logs for Mr. Chamberlain, but there was a provision, if there should be four weeks of sleighing sufficient in the woods. Owing to the deep snow they failed, and the dispute was left to arbitration. This case was to set the arbitration aside, on the grounds that it was not based on the agreement in reference to drawing the logs. Several witnesses were heard. It was held however, that the award of the arbitrators was good, and hence a verdict for plf. Mr. Weller for plf; Scott and H. Cameron for deft.

Toole v Scott—Edmison for plaintiff, Smith for defendant. Verdict for plaintiff by consent.

Hamilton v Toole—Moore for plaintiff, Edmison for defendant. Referred.

Weller v Buck—Moore for plaintiff, Smith for defendant. Referred

McGowen v Scott—Referred

Brown v Hall—Settled

FitzGerald v Campbell & Hason—A Lumber case. Withdrawn.

STEWART vs. STEWART.—This case referred to the same lands as in the McCabe vs. Stewart case, and was brought to by one Stewart, against another man of the same name. One of them had bought the land from McCabe and this was to sift the title. Verdict for Plf. for seven shares; Deft. being entitled to one only.

SATURDAY.

THE QUEEN v BRADBURN.—This was a very peculiar case, and extended over almost the whole day. It appears that in 1859 Mr. Thomas Bradburn of this town rented a farm in Otonabee to one James Johnston and his son, for a term of years, and at the time, George Erskine went security that the Johnstons should pay the rent. Mr. Erskine gave a written guarantee to Mr. Bradburn and never sought to deny this. After three years Mr. Bradburn sued Mr. Erskine for the rent and collected of him what was due. But at that trial, which took place in 1862, it was set forth that the guarantee given by Erskine had no seal on it when given, and on this plea the case went to the Jury. Mr. Bradburn gained the suit and Mr. Erskine had to pay the whole.

Mr. Elias Burnham was Mr. Bradburn's attorney on the occasions of the suit against Erskine.

Lately it appears that Mr. Burnham had intimated that the guarantee had no seal on it when shown to him first, but when again shown to him in Court it had a seal, and this trial was against Mr Bradburn for forgery for putting on the seal, not for signing a name but for putting on a seal.

Mr. Fortye produced the papers on the trial of Bradburn v Erskine, in 1862, and the minutes of the case, when it appeared that an exhibition, consisting of the lease, &c., had been put in and subsequently handed to Mr. E. Burnham.

Elias Burnham, sworn—I was plaintiff's attorney in the case referred to, of Bradburn v. Erskine. I received the papers as per minutes now produced by Mr. Fortye. I gave them to Mr. Bradburn immediately He was present at the trial. The other documents were affixed to lease. I have no recollection of having ever seen them since. The prisoner was notified so produce—admitted. I first saw those instruments in Mr. Bradburn's office. Saw them in connection with the proceedings. I examined the guarantee at the time, it had then no seal to it. I have no copy of it other than pleadings in that case. Mr. Erskine's name was to it then. It was a short piece of writing, I think in the handwriting of Mr. Bradburn. This was after the action was commenced. The instruments are correctly set forth in the pleaded at trial. There is no doubt of it. Here the Judge ruled that Mr. Burnham had no right to make known anything that had occurred between him as an attorney and Mr. Bradburn. Cross examined by Mr. H. Cameron—I was Mr. Bradburn's Attorney in the case, also his counsel at the trial. I had not the instrument in my possession, when I issued the writ. They were on separate papers. I saw them. I do not remember getting particulars of dates. They were shown to me together. I presume I received instructions to issue the writ. I presume it was at time of declaration that I saw the papers. I did not then get the instrument from Mr. Bradburn. I don't remember getting written instructions to issue the writ. Mr. Bradburn frequently told me to issue writs and I would get the papers afterwards. I presume I got these when I declared. The declaration was drafted by me or by my Clerk, according to my instructions. Can't say that I prepared special endorsement for the writ. The precipe put in is in my hand-writing. The copy of writ shown is in Mr. Edmison's hand-writing. Shortly after I got it, when drafting the declaration it had a seal on. I don't know if I told Mr Dumble that the first time I saw the guarantee with a seal on was in Court. I have said, and that I may have said it to Mr. Dumble, but after more consideration I now think I was wrong, and I was mistaken in that statement. I intended to tell Mr. Dumble the truth. I said before the grand jury that it was possible that the first time I saw it with seal on was at the trial. I did not state to the grand jury that when I first saw it I was so taken back about it that I did not know whether I was standing on my head or my heels. I did not say to Mr. Dumble. I remember a conversation with Mr. Scott in which I told him that the first time I saw it with the seal on was at the trial. He did remark to me that he had seen it with a seal on in my office before that. This did lead me to reform my opinion. It is all a matter of recollection that it had no seal on when I first saw it. I did not then believe it was a forgery. I had then no reason to believe it was a forgery, and seeing the seal on I asked no questions. I know the effect of putting a seal on an instrument that had none was changing its legal value, and hence was forgery. I told Mr Bradburn so, when I declared I had no cause to believe anything about it. It was none of my business. Mr Bradburn told me to leave it with him and he would have it made right. When I first saw it I told Mr Bradburn it would be forgery to put a seal on. Until the trial I had no suspicions as to the matter. I thought he had got Erskine to seal it. Hodgkinson a subscribing witness to the lease and guarantee gave evidence at the trial. The defendant's Council pressed the matter of the seal not being on very strongly. After the evidence was all taken I addressed the Jury as to whether there was a seal or not on the guarantee. I made it a principal question to the Jury, and the Jury found that the instrument was sealed at the time of the execution of it. There was no suggestion at the time that the seal was put on after the execution. I must have thought it was a forgery, and believing it to be so I put it to the Jury. I put it through knowing the consequence to Mr Bradburn. Hodgkinson swore at the time it had a seal on. One Johnston swore it had not. I have done business for Mr Bradburn for many years. About three years ago I declined to be his solicitor. Since that time I have done nothing for him: I have a large claim of about $4,000 against him—a personal account. Bradburn has got an order to tax the account. I commenced the suit against Bradburn when I declared he pleaded a set off. Mr. Bradburn often spoke about a settlement, and asked for his account. Mr. Bradburn, I believe, has told my sister that he wished I would settle my account before getting any more goods. I had a conversation with Mr. Dumble; I recollect going to him about this matter and my own suit also; it was on Sunday, about three weeks past; I knew Mr. Dumble was Bradburn's solicitor. I was never there before; we sat under a tree I said that the day being Sunday and beautiful weather, my feelings were of a better kind than usual, and better than they would be next week perhaps. I said I had thought the matter over seriously and a great many times, and that it concerned a person in whom he (Dumble) was very much interested, and I knew that what Mr. Dumble advised would be done, and so I had come to see him to save trouble. I told him the party was Mr. Bradburn; I explained the circumstances of Mr. Erskine's suit; I think I did tell him that the first time I saw the seal on was at the trial, and that I was thunderstruck; never was so troubled in my life; but since that time Mr Erskine had been to me several times, and Mr. Smith once or twice. I did say to him that I had lied to them for Bradburn; I did not say that I was different now from what I had been, and that I would lie no more; I used to lie, but my conscience would not allow me to lie any longer. I said it was quite plain that something was coming out of the Erskine matter, as Mr. Bradburn had acted so that I felt sure, and felt ugly at times; and I had come to see him that day while under the influence of a better feeling, and I feared if I put it off till next day I would not come. I said that I had continued to lie about the Erskine matter for Bradburn's sake. I did say that; and I have; there is no mistake about it. I did not say that if Mr. Bradburn would settle my account I would continue to lie for him; I did talk about my accounts. Mr. Dumble asked me what I would take and settle; I said the balance due me was at least $2400 but I would take $1000 to get rid of this ill feeling; I said I thought it was sacrifice enough; I said I was ill-tempered, and under this feeling I was afraid that I would say something out of the way, that I wanted the temptation removed, and as the taxation was to be on Tuesday I wished to know by to-morrow at noon, so as to stop proceedings. I told Mr. Dumble that I was apprehensive that Erskine would bring the matter up at the assizes. I saw Mr. Dumble next day, and he said Mr. Bradburn wished to see the accounts and see what was right, but that he could not yet.

After examination before Grand Jury I remember saying something to Mr. Dumble about the matter. I had several conversations about a settlement. I had demanded £500 Mr. Bradburn had said he would not give $500. I did tell Mr. Dumble I had been before the Grand Jury in ——, and I suppose you feel better now." "I did not say it as I had accepted my terms this would not be. I said "You know how I feel over it." I feel bad about it. Erskine had spoken to me a great many times about the matter. I did not say to him "If you put me in the witness box I will then tell the truth." Up to two years ago I always lied to Erskine about it. About two years ago I sent for Bradburn and told him. Since that time I have not lied. I have not denied to Mr. Erskine. I have said I will say nothing about it. If you put me in the witness box I will tell the truth. During the course of this year I have spoken to Erskine about it. I said I was Mr. Bradburn's lawyer and could not tell him anything, and would not, but if in the witness box and had to swear, I would swear the truth. This was in the course of this year—several times. I never told Erskine any more than that if in the witness box I would tell the truth. I have told others, and think I have told Mr Weller before I told the Grand Jury. I was asking Mr. Weller's advice I also told my brother. I think I told Mr. Smith, Mr. H. Smith not to bring the matter before the Magistrates, as if it remained in obeyance I might be able better to settle my accounts as I would have so much longer time. I did not mean that if time was delayed the matter might blow over It might be a month since Erskine spoke to me about it. Two or three weeks since, Mr. Smith spoke to me about it, he said he was making out the information. It is just as likely as not that I told him all about it. If I did tell him it was before Mr. Erskine spoke to me about it: It must have been before that. To another question he said it may have been before—and to the question, are you certain? He said he could not tell whether or not.

I don't remember arguing before the Jury that there must have been a seal on at time of execution. I did urge that the seal was put on before the execution.

Mr Smith's questions were over-ruled on the ground that Mr. Burnham was Mr. Bradburn's lawyer at the time.

George Erskine, sworn—knew the Johnston's they are related to me. I had a transaction with Mr. Burnham about a lot of land in Otonabee. The Johnston's leased it from Mr. Burnham for 5 years at £25 a year. I dont know that it was mentioned how the rent was to be paid. This took place 10 or 11 years ago. There was a lease, it was executed at Mr. Bradburn's office. I was present at the time of the execution of the lease. I had nothing to do with signing the lease. At time of execution Mr. Bradburn asked Johnston whom would become his security, he said he supposed I would be bail for the rent. Mr Bradburn then took some paper and wrote some document, and asked me if I would sign it, I think he read it to me. I did sign it, I think it was something binding on me for the rent, there was no seal to it when I signed it. I never saw the instrument since to my knowledge. I never authorized any person to put a seal to it. I was sued for the rent. I put in a defence and the case came to trial. The defence was that the document was illegal, as there was no seal to it when executed. Mr. Scott, my attorney, intimated to me that without a seal it would be illegal. I do not know that it was produced. Cross examined by Mr Cameron,—I intended to guarantee the rent for Johnstons and went to Mr. Bradburns office to do so. I did not then know that the guarantee was so good unless there was a seal to it; I was in the office while he was writing the lease, I think it was a written one but I am not certain. I did not see or whether the paper was blue or white. The paper I signed was not on same paper as lease. I had no peculiar circumstance to keep this in my memory—I thought the Johnstons were paying the rent yearly, but that if not I was responsible for it; I thought it was paid for 4 years but found it was not—except about half a years rent. Mr. Scott first told me a seal was necessary; I don't know that ever before that day I had signed a legal document or deed; I thought a seal was necessary to a deed, but did not think this was a deed. I don't know that I knew anything about seals at the time I signed that paper. I was beaten at the trial and paid 4 years rent, and compromised the fifth year for $60. I was not asked to swear there was no seal on it. I can't say when I first spoke to any one about there being no seal on it, but I never forgot it. I did not feel angry but I have thought that Mr. Bradburn should pay me back my money as he should have collected the amount off the Johnstons. He sold their property for another debt. I felt Mr. Bradburn did me a wrong; I feel so yet. I talked to Burnham about it, he would not give me any satisfaction, probably I did talk to him about the seal. I did speak to Mr. Scott, but can't say when I spoke to Mr. Burnham. He used to tell me "go home it is all right." I went to Mr. Smith a few weeks ago, I wanted to get my money back. I did not go to Mr. Smith to take proceedings against Mr. Bradburn for forgery; I only wanted my money. I came to the determination I would have something or nothing; I have met Mr. Burnham 3 or 4 times in the street. I have been at his office about a week ago. He said if put in the witness box he would tell the truth; it is about a month since he first told me what he would say if put in the witness box. Mr. Sidney Smith sent me to tell him he wanted him. He never came to my house.

Wm. Johnston sworn,—I am one of the parties referred to. I don't know the Lot or the year we leased it. Father and I signed it in Bradburn's office. There were parties in and out. Bradburn asked for sureties, father proposed Mr. Erskine; he said all right. He took a piece of paper and wrote something on it. Mr. Erskine signed it, there was no seal to it then, we went away, I never was spoken to about it until brought to Court. Cross examined by Mr. Cameron.—I never signed a deed before nor since. I did not know that the guarantee was useless without a seal, I first heard it was necessary at the trial. I can't swear that there was a seal against my name or my fathers. I was on Mr. Erskine's right hand.

Mr. Scott sworn—At the trial the contention was as to whether there was a trial or not. Mr. Bradburn was present. I saw the document in Mr. Bradburn's office, before the declaration of the writ. I saw it sealed, I went to assure myself that there was a seal on, it had a common seal on; I have no positive impression of the sort. I remember a conversation with Mr. Burnham after the indictment. He told me that he had not seen the seal till produced in court, and that he was perfectly astonished. I told him he must be mistaken, as I had seen it with the seal on in his office. I am almost sure that it was on the same paper as the lease; they were the same kind of seal on lease and guarantee

James Johnston sworn—There was a lease. I was present when it was signed. Mr. Erskine went security for the rent; Mr. Bradburn wanted security. The signature of the lease was about half-way from the foot. The guarantee was on a small slip of paper; Mr. Erskine signed it. There was no seal on it then. I saw it afterwards in the court; it had a seal on in the court; I was a witness at the trial. I did not know a seal was necessary. Cross-examined—I can write my own name, am a middling good scholar. I signed a lease about seven years before this one. I recollect that there was a seal to the paper I signed twenty years ago. There was a seal to my name and to my sons name, but I cannot recollect that there was one to Mr. Bradburn's name; his name was written above mine. There was a seal opposite the name of the witness. The lease was all written. Mr. Bradburn wrote some of it while I was there, I can't say whether it was on one leaf or on two; There were two papers—they were not pinned together in my presence.

The points taken by the Council for the defence were, that there was no evidence of the guarantee, and hence, no forgery, also, that there was no evidence of tracing the guarantee to Mr. Bradburn's possession, hence, no defence necessary.

These were over ruled.

Mr. Geo. Edmison sworn—Clerk in Mr. Burnham's office at the time of the suit of Burnham vs. Erskine. The declaration is in my hand-writing. I saw the guarantee; I think it was on the same paper as the lease; the lease ended in the middle of a page, the guarantee a short document, was written under; I never saw the document without a seal.

W. H. Hoskinson, sworn—was a clerk in Mr. Bradburn's store in 1858. Remember the Johnston's leasing land. I was witness to the documents. The writing signed by Erskine was written below the lease. There was a seal to guarantee at time of Mr. Erskine signing it. Cross examined—I was with Mr Bradburn 6½ years. I was absent in England 1 year.—I was book keeper. He had keys, but I [illegible] I saw the instrument between the time of signing and going to Mr. Burnham's. Mr. Bradburn keeps a ledger to enter such documents in; this lease document was so entered. The guarantee was not. I don't remember seeing the guarantee again before it went to Mr. Burnham's offices.—Never had any conversation with either Mr. Burnham or Bradburn, about it. I speak from recollection. The first time I heard of the paper being questioned was at the trial. The same instrument Erskine signed was in Court. I never saw it since.

Mr. Dumble sworn.—Remember the conversation spoken of with Mr. Burnham I paid special attention to it as of great importance. He told me about the document, said the first time he saw it it had no seal on; the next time he saw it was in Court, it had a seal, and he never was more astounded in his life. He did not know on which end he was standing, he was thunderstruck, but he had to put it in. He said he was now a different man, his conscience would not allow him to lie any longer, and that he was the only person who could control the matter, that it was all in his power, and this he repeated several times. He spoke of his feeling on the Sabbath morning, that they had been hard and bitter against Mr. Bradburn, but that he wanted to speak about matters of difference between him and Mr. Bradburn, and it was Bradburn's interest to settle, or if not, this matter would come on at those assizes. He said that if he was settled with he would continue to be for Erskine. He wanted a thousand dollars in settlement. He used the words he would continue to lie to Mr Erskine. I was to let him know next day and he would stop proceedings. I saw him told him Bradburn could not interfere. After his examination before the Grand Jury I said I suppose you feel better. He said no I do not feel better, but if you had accepted my offer this would not have happened. I made a note of this. I am Mr Bradburn's solicitor. He is a sharp, shrewd business man as I know of. He understands the drawing of ordinary legal documents well.

This ended the case.

Mr Cameron then addressed the Jury on behalf of the defence, and in a most withering manner referred to the evidence and conduct of Mr Burnham.

The Judge also applied very strong terms to the evidence of the same witness and intimated that his conduct would be reported unfavorably.

The Jury retired and in a short time entered again having agreed on a verdict of NOT GUILTY.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner

Sir,—In a communication in the Review of the 26th inst., over the signature of C. J. Bloomfield, he finds fault with the votes given by the County Council at the last sitting, in regard to a petition of 150 ratepayers of townships and portions of townships between Harvey and Haliburton. Mr. Bloomfield appears to think that the Council, at his bidding, should tax the settlers of the old townships (already quite high enough) to assist the monopoly to which he belongs. He says when the petition from the majority of the ratepayers of a northern section of the county to submit a By-law granting a bonus to the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway was submitted to the Council, I deemed it unnecessary to make remarks, for which they did not afterwards give me an opportunity. I did not for a moment suppose that the Council would deny the right of the people to tax themselves, or that they would reject the petition contrary to the statute "in that case made and provided." The above are Mr. Bloomfield's words. Now what are the facts? 150 people in the back country petitioned the Council to pass a By law to allow them to grant a bonus to assist in building the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway. Had their petition stopped there the Council would have passed it without a dissenting voice, but their petition asked more. It asked the County Council to issue debentures for $45,000 signed by the Warden and County Treasurer, payable in twenty years. Now Mr. Bloomfield and his friends must think that the members of the County Council are fools or he would never suppose that they would pass such a By-law as he wanted.

The 150 ratepayers of the back country asked us to issue County debentures to the amount of $45,000, which they had no intention of paying, as a warm supporter of the By-law—the Reeve of Harvey—acknowledged to me; and the father of the Bill (Mr. Carnegie) threatened an action in chancery if we refused to pass it. The fact is, had we passed it, the whole County would have had to pay the amount, as there is nothing in the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Act to enable the County to compel the Clerks of those Municipalities to levy a rate for the repayment of these $45,000. Their bill is therefore defective.

Mr. Carnegie, the President of the road,

IN MEMORY OF ALICE GILLESPIE.

Wife of Robert Wood, Esq., Otonabee, who died October 7, 1870. Aged 75 years.

Through death's dark vale mankind must go,
Both rich and poor, both high and low
None can escape the mortal blow;
For yield all must,
Both King and Beggar like must go,
To mother dust.

Our friend now gone, was of the few
Who are in friendship ever true;
The path of duty did pursue,
With heart and mind.
To all with whom she had to do,
Was ever kind.

Did not backbite, nor falsly blame,
Nor try to blot a neighbor's name;
But to make peace made it her aim,
Through all her life
For youth and age, she was the same;
Maiden and wife

Her husband did not need to run
Among the neighbors every one
To prove the mischief she had done;
As some need do.
For she was earnest with her tongue,
When she spoke true.

She's left, as she did live, in peace;
She's fought her battle, run her race,
If friends she's had it would be base to trace,
Her ill all through.
Nothing could find that would stain nor
The family few.

She read her bible every day,
And made the word of God her stay,
'Twas there she found the peaceful way
Of grace divine;
Which makes the christian love to say,
God's will is mine.

In Westwood burying ground lies she,
There all are quite in unity;
Within the grave her dust shall be,
Guiltless to stay;
Until the Lord her soul free,
At the last day.

Otonabee. A GRAHAM.

We have not yet heard of a single failure in curing Bronchitis, when FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES has been used, and feel satisfied that it is a specific remedy.

Price $1 50 a bottle; 6 for $7 50. Sold by apothecaries and by F. Cundill & Co., wholesale agents Montreal.

The Venerable Archdeacon Scott, of dunham Canada East, says, that he suffered from Dyspepsia more than twent-five years, but that three weeks use of the Peruvian Syrup (an Iron Tonic), has ben fited him so wonderfully that he can hardly persuade himself of the reality, and people who know him are astonished at the change.

When the body and the brain are well balanced, the stomach is capable of restoring the waste; but when the brain is large in proportion, the stomach is incapable of supplying it; in other words, the expenditure is too large for the income. Here lies the cause of so much suffering from disease of the heart, Liver, Stomach and Lungs, which is produced by taxing the Nervous System too severely; and FELLOWS Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is the only preparation known which imparts the vitality directly and consequently the power to overcome disease.

Price $1 50 a bottle; 6 for $7 50. Sold by apothecaries and by F. Cundill & Co., wholesale agents, Montreal.

That Iron is Valuable as a Medicine has long been known, but it is only since its preparation in the particular form of Peruvian Syrup that its full power over disease has been brought to light. Its effect in cases of dyspepsia and debility is most salutary.

12. That unless the construction of the said The Peterborough and Haliburton Railway shall have been commenced on or before the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, this By-law, in so far as the same provides for the issue of Debentures to the said amount of twenty-five thousand dollars, shall become and be void and of no effect, and the Debentures, if any issued thereupon, shall be delivered up and cancelled.

13. That as to both of the said proposed Railways the rolling stock thereof shall be arranged with sliding axles, so as to permit the rolling stock of each of the said roads to be used upon the other thereof, and upon the Grand Trunk Railway.

14. That in the event of any one portion and not the whole of this By-law becoming effete and of none effect, under the provisions of the tenth and twelfth sections thereof by reason of any one of such proposed Railways not having been commenced within the time hereby limited for the purpose, the said rate so to be levied as aforesaid, shall be sufficient only to cover the interest and Sinking Fund sufficient for the redemption of the Debentures, remaining valid under that portion of this By-law remaining in force and effect.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1858, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Laweck, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

The Highest Price Paid for RAW FURS.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A WORD

For every word in the following certificate found untrue, after writing to the parties named: and to the U. S Consul, at Rio Janerio, the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid.

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 28th, 1866.
Messrs. Raymundo C. Leite & Bro:

Gentlemen;—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pinreuta [a laige proprietor, in the Cidad de Campos] was staying at my house he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tonoco, who is thought a good deal of in Campos, but the fever instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could no speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr Tonoco declared that there was not the slightest hopes of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the relief pure on the chest, back and wrists; three of Radway's Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one dessert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the merical of Dr. Radway & Co's. medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen, yours very obedient servant
Joaquim Pinto Filcao, Merchant.

Dr. Radway's Remedies are sold by Druggists and County Merchants. See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.

Don't Know What to Do.

We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more readily and for higher prices The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Be Wise to-day.—'Tis madness to neglect a cough or cold, however slight. Consumption may follow, and though Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry has frequently cured this much dreaded disease, it almost invariably cures the primary diseases of the throat, lungs and chest, where other remedies fail.

CAUTION.
CORNWALL BLANKETS.

THE Cornwall Manufacturing Company beg to caution the public against a spurious shoddy imitation of their celebrated BLANKETS, now being imported into this country from England, and got up so as to cheat the public into the belief that they are of Canadian manufacture. The style and general appearance of the Cornwall Blankets have been closely copied, and so have the shape and printing of the tickets, except that the words "Cornwall Manufacturing Company" are omitted, and the words "Canadian Manufacture" substituted. Persons desiring a really good and genuine article will have to see that the words "Cornwall Manufacturing Company" are on the ticket of each pair of Blankets.

WILSON, BOWMAN & CO.,
Hamilton, Ontario,
MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED
LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,
Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.
The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.
It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.
The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.
EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

THE HOMES OF ENGLAND.

The stately homes of England,
How beautiful they stand!
Amidst their tall ancestral trees,
O'er all the pleasant land!
The deer across the greenwood bound,
Through shade and sunny gleam;
And the swan glides past them with the sound
Of some rejoicing stream.

The merry homes of England!
Around their hearths by night,
What gladsome looks of household love
Meet in the ruddy light!
There woman's voice flows forth in song,
Or childhood's tale is told,
Or lips move tunefully along
Some glorious page of old.

The blessed homes of England!
How softly on their bowers,
Is laid the holy quietness
That breathes from Sabbath-hours!
Solemn, yet sweet, the church-bells' chime
Floats through their woods at morn;
All other sounds in that still time
Of breeze and leaf are born.

The cottage homes of England!
By thousands on her plains,
They are smiling o'er her silvery brooks,
And around the hamlet fanes.
Through glowing orchards forth they peep,
Each from its mate of trees,
And fearless there they slowly sleep,
As the bird beneath their eaves.

The free fair homes of England!
Long, long in hut and hall,
May hearts of native proof be rear'd
To guard each hallow'd wall!
And green forever be thy groves,
And bright the flowery sod,
Where first the child's glad spirit loves
Its country and its God!

How the Quaker's Ram was Cured of Butting.

As honest Quaker farmer in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, had raised a fine large merino ram which he valued highly. One day Tanbark (that was the dog's name) unfortunately got into bad company, and engaged in a sheep-killing expedition. Having thus acquired a taste for the exciting sport, and for the fresh mutton thereby obtained, the dog, like all his race, did not possess enough self-denial to let a thorough good whipping prevent his indulging in it occasionally. The Quaker was greatly grieved, for he hated to destroy the animal. Presently the hired man, Jesse, suggested an ingenious plan to cure the dog of his sheep-killing propensities, which the tender-hearted Quaker joyfully adopted. We will let Mr. Jesse tell the rest of the story.

"There was on the farm a powerful old ram somewhat famous for butting, and I had tried in vain to break him off this bad habit. I speculated if I shut up the two together the bark and the ram—one or the other would surely have to give in, and either the dog would get sick of sheep-killing, or the ram of butting; and I was right. I shut them up over night in the cow-stable, and when I went out in the morning, I found poor Tanbark effectually cured. The ram had revenged the murder of his brethern by breaking every bone in the body of the unhappy dog. And wonderfully uplifted was the pugnacious animal by his exploit. Instead of being tamed by the dog, as I had hoped, his butting propensities increased so that his insolence became intolerable; he was sure to pitch into whomsoever or whatsoever went nigh him. I was so vexed at these constant annoyances that I looked about for a new plan to cure him. Sticking an iron crowbar through a knot-hole in the side of the barn, point outward, I hung an old hat on it. You can't always tell, when you see a hat, whether there is a head in it or not; how then should the ram? The ram made at it full butt, and being a good marksman from long practice, the bar broke in between his horns and came out under his tail.

Improvement of the Soil by Mechanical Means.

It must be evident to every one that, other things being equal, the permanently productive capacity of the soil will bear a direct proportion to its depth.—By deepening the soil the cultivator can change the nature of the land itself, and also alter its physical qualities and change its chemical constitution, and thus fit for bearing kinds of plants than those which [illegible] and naturally growing upon its surface. Those should be considered [illegible] very easily increase their products. But he cannot deepen the soil without [illegible]ing his labor, which is the first [illegible] of the farmer, especially where [illegible]are so high a proportion compared [illegible]countries; and to no other [illegible] is the strictest economy so [illegible]cess as in the one we see [illegible] here science comes to his aid [illegible]its the outlay and suggests that if [illegible]deepen his soil his plants will have a wider range for their roots in search of food, which will give increased growth, that the portion of the subsoil brought to the surface by deep ploughing will receive the ameliorating influence of frost and rain, by which previous, perhaps hurtful, properties are altered and washed out, that in the time of growth those roots can seek the grateful moisture which is being condensed from the atmosphere within its cooler depth; and he finds his account in the increased product of his crop. The same science will suggest the frequent stirring of the soil to expose fresh particles to atmospheric influence, the use of the subsoil plough, and where necessary, draining, which has been attended with so much benefit wherever employed. Again, the cultivator can improve his soil mechanically by the use of a different kind of earth from the one to be improved. Fifty loads of stiff clay to the acre, applied in the fall, to a light sand to be ploughed in the spring and one hundred loads of sand applied to heavy clay land, and spread any time before ploughing, will be found to have very beneficial effects, and this mixing of soils, where the necessary materials are not far apart, (which very frequently is not the case,) affords one of the cheap means of improving the soil, especially as the operation can be carried on at such times when the hands and teams might otherwise be idle. A still further advantage attending this method is, that twenty per cent, less of manure to the acre will be attended with equal results in the production of a crop.—There are other means of mechanically improving the soil, of which we may take the opportunity to speak on some future occasion.—"Journal of applied Chemistry."

The Evil of Intemperance.—Alcohol is a murderer. We have 1,000,000 confirmed drunkards in the United States, 60,000 of which die every year—are killed by the rum seller. Do you doubt it? If it injures health, causes accidents and spreads and increases crime and disease, is it not likely that this large number of deaths is under, rather than over estimated?

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SILLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try that Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.
I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

THE TRUE
THEORY of PURGATION
APPLIED TO THE Liver, Kidneys, Skin,
STOMACH & BOWELS.
DR. RADWAY'S
PERFECT
PURGATIVE PILLS,
Perfectly Tasteless,
ELEGANTLY COATED.
Dr. Radway has completed one of the most essential discoveries in medical chemistry in the combination of vegetable substances for the purpose of a PURGATIVE, APERIENT, COUNTER-IRRITANT ALTERATIVE PILL, that can be taken or administered with the absolute certainty of securing THOROUGH EXPULSION OF ALL DECAYED AND DECOMPOSING Elements of the human body, and also safe to take in the most malignant of Eruptive Fevers. In cases where the mucous membranes of the internal viscera are suffering from Ulceration, Inflammation, or from LIVER,
Gastric, Biliary, Pancreatic Complaints,
DR. RADWAY'S PILLS
supply the only Vegetable substitute for
CALOMEL or MERCURY.
In RADWAY'S PILLS you have one medicine that will secure quicker, more thorough and better results than will be given in from three or more different prescriptions of the medical practitioner. As a proof of this—You are seized with a Bilious attack! Doctor prescribes Blue Pills or Calomel! next, some Drastic Aloetic Pill or Powders to work off the effects of the Blue Pill; this prostrates you, and a tonic is next given, or a gentle aperient, whereas ONE DOSE OF RADWAY'S PILLS will do all the work that the three or more prescriptions are given for, without running any risk from mercurializing or salivating the system.
RADWAY'S PILLS.
In RADWAY'S PILLS, the true principle of purgation is secured—not alone to the clearing of the fæces and excrements from the bowels, but those humors that are checked or stopped in their passage through the Nose, Acidness, Larynx, and all excreting and secreting functions; for if there are excrementious secretions belonging to the skin, liver, lungs, kidneys, are obstructed in their escape they become pre-facts of decay and decomposition, and must be purged from the living body through their proper channels: hence the purgative qualities of RADWAY'S PILLS extend to the secretions of the SKIN, KIDNEYS, LIVER, &c.; whereas not one of the advertised Pills claim to act beyond the bowels.
How to Take Radway's Pills.
THEIR DAILY USE.
In doses of one or two pills, by all persons of a full habit of body, subject to giddiness, rush of blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, and all those subject to fits, will not only keep the blood from becoming congested or clogged up in the blood vessels, but will regulate its circulation, and prevent sudden attacks of apoplexy, disease of the heart, congestion. Persons who will take one of these pills every day will not suffer from Headaches, Dizziness, Hysterics, Fainting Spells, Pains around the Heart, and a hundred other disagreeable symptoms
DYSPEPSIA.
One of RADWAY'S PILLS, two or three hours before dinner, taken daily, will keep the system free from DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, COSTIVENESS, &c.
Bear in Mind,
RADWAY'S PILLS are the only purgative that will secure an alterative, diuretic, sudorific, aperient and tonic influence.
They are the only vegetable substitutes for Calomel or Mercury
They are elegantly Coated with Gum, perfectly Tasteless, and free from Smell.
SARSAPARILLIAN
RESOLVENT.
POISONED BLOOD.
When the blood becomes poisoned by the presence of an excess of BILE, UREA, HEPATIC ACID, and the accumulations, excretions of the SKIN:—SORES, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, SPOTS, ULCERS, and HUMORS of all kinds break out on the surface.
Dr. Radway's
Sarsaparillian
Resolvent,
When the blood is in this condition, should be taken alternately with RADWAY'S PILLS. The indication of Cure is to free the blood from the presence of these poisons, and restore the functions of the Liver, Skin, Lungs, Kidneys, Bowels, to their proper duties. This effected, which RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, aided with Radway's Pills, will soon secure—a Cure will be the result.
A BAD SKIN—Spots, Morphew, Sores, Pimples, Blotches, Pustules, Tetters, are caused by impurities of the Blood. Checked Perspiration, Sluggish Circulation of the Blood in the excreting vessels of the skin. One or two doses of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT will rid the skin from these visitants, and insure all a beautiful, clear complexion
UTERINE TROUBLES.—Prolapsus Uteri, Falling of the Womb, Ulcers, Tumors, Fœes, cured by SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.
Ladies suffering from Chronic Leucorrhea, Weakness or Irritation of the Bladder and Urinary Passage, Difficulty of Passing Urine, &c., will be relieved by a few doses of RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, and cured by a few bottles.
PARALYSIS CURED.
DERBYVILLE, Harrison Co., Ohio.
May 12th, 1869.
Messrs. RADWAY & Co.
Gentlemen.—The RESOLVENT has effected a cure in a very severe case, that of a Mrs. Lemuel Johnston in this neighbourhood. She was confined to her bed and had lost the use of her legs:—four bottles of the RESOLVENT has restored her, and last Sunday she was able to attend church. The demand for the RESOLVENT has increased, and we deem it advisable to order in time.
Yours truly, R. PITTIS & SON.
SARSAPARILLIAN.
So quick is RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT to enter into the circulation, that it may be detected in the urine, sweat, and blood in ten minutes after it has been taken.
A Remedy so quick in entering into the circulation and communicating its curative properties as RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN supplies a want that has ever existed.
RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian or Renovating Resolvent furnishes positive evidence of its Purifying and Fruitful efficacy in curing persons considered Impotent and Barren, who have since married and had children.
STOP THE WASTE OF LIFE!
RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent will stop the waste of the life-fluid that in so many persons follows a discharge of water through the urethra. It is a positive cure for spermatorhea, Nightly Emissions, &c.
SYPHILOID ULCERS.
Sores of all kinds, Tumors, Cancers, Sore Heads, Sores on the Tongue, in the Mouth, in the Glands of the Throat, cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian.
IMPOTENCY.
The best evidence we have of the powerful Purifying, Tonic, and Fruitful properties of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent is that it has cured persons who were verging on Imbecility and Insanity through Self-Abuse, with continued drains of the seminal fluid, and were cured by the Resolvent, when prepared under the old process in 1850, who have married and have children now living. A few bottles will restore the vigor of life.
VIGOR OF LIFE RESTORED
Persons who, from self-abuse, disease, or injuries, suffer from paralysis or weakness in the secreting vessels of the genital organs, will be cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent.
SARSAPARILLIAN,
PAREIRA BRAVA.
Two of the Wonderful Ingredients that enter into the composition of RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT.
There are some thirty or more different species of Sarsaparillian, and it requires great care and intelligence in selecting the proper kinds; so with Pareira Brava. This great remedial agent is to be found in Guayaquil, Peru, Nicaragua, Brazil, and there are some twenty species of this root. Dr. Radway uses only one kind, that which grows in Brazil. He employs, through his agents, none but experienced and intelligent men in gathering, selecting, packing and shipping these roots to the United States. No ignorant savages or Housatonics are employed in gathering vegetables, roots, plants, &c., for the Sarsaparillian Resolvent.
RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT is sold at $1 per Bottle, or 5 Bottles for $5, by all Druggists and Medicine Dealers, and at Dr. RADWAY'S Medicine Warehouse, 482 St. Paul Street, Montreal.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a
HAIR DRESSING,
nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.
They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.
Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—
For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.
For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.
For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.
For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Painfulness of the Kears, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.
For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.
For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.
As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.
An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

CAUTION.—All genuine has the name "Peruvian Syrup," (not "Peruvian Bark,") blown in the glass. A 32-page pamphlet sent free. J. P. DINSMORE, Proprietor, 36 Dey St., New York. Sold by all Druggists.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HARTELL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HUNT'S KEPHAN HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.
THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have some, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.
Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs. Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lascaik, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.
An Examination of my Stock is solicited.
The Highest Price Paid for RAW FURS.

Stabat Mater.

FROM THE LATIN, BY REV. J. R. BAKER, D.D.

Stood the mother, weeping, sighing,
On the cross, hung bleeding, dying,
Christ, her son the crucified.
Through her soul, o'erwhelmed and grieving,
As foretold, descending, cleaving,
Did the cruel sword divide.

Oh what sadness and affliction,
Here, the crown rich benediction,
Mother with the holy One!
Seems bearing, moaning, grieving,
Strong against that relieving
Of her sore, her glorious Son.

Who the mortal without weeping,
Could behold this mother keeping
Mother-vigils, in such woe?
Tortures see her at her station,
In that awful contemplation,
With her Jesus suffring so?

For the sins of so poor mortals,
Sees she him just at death's portals,
Scourged and beaten to the goal;
Sees her Son, nailed to His station,
Sweet, though in death's desolation;
Pouring out for us his soul.

Oh, though mother, may I borrow
Grace to share with thee in sorrow;
Grace to mingle tears with thine;
Grace to melt me with emotion,
Grace to fire me with devotion,
As I see such love divine!

AFRAID OF IT.

"If you are afraid of it all right. I wouldn't tempt you for the world." And the speaker drew the wine bottle he had pushed towards his friend.

All men should be afraid of it, was the steady answer.

I am not, said the other, with an air of proud self confidence. He was a young man named Hargrave, a handsome fellow, with a fine physique, and vigorous health—one who felt his life in every limb.

You will before you die, answered his friend, speaking quite as confidently.

If I didn't know you as well and like you as well as I do, Barclay, I'd be angry for that saying—it's a reflection on my manhood.

No, not on your particular manhood but on manhood in general. No one ever uses intoxicating drinks regularly without having cause to be sorry for it, said Barclay.

I've taken my glass of wine, or ale, or brandy, ever since I was a man, and I haven't been sorry yet, replied the friend.

You've had occasion to be sorry many times, I doubt not, returned Barclay.

Now look here, Harry, I'll not stand this! Did you ever see me the worse for drink.

On reflection, I think you will see that I am right, answered Barclay.

Not right so far as I am concerned.

Then your brain has never been confused by a glass of wine or brandy.

A slight shadow fell across Hargrave's face.

You and Harry Boyd were once the closest of friends, said Barclay. In an instant of time the bond of friendship was broken, and by an ungarded word. And from that day to this, you have stood coldly apart.

Don't speak of that if you please, answered Hargrave, in a tone of annoyance, as he poured out a glass of wine and drank it off hastily. There was higher color on his face, and a brighter gleam in his eyes after this.

Barclay did not reply, for he saw that his friend's blood was growing hot, and his brain losing its clearness. After a few moments of silence Hargrave said, almost offensively—I have no patience with your narrow, one-idea men; and I hate a fanatic?

The world is largely indebted to what are called one-idea men, he quietly answered, and even a fanatic may do good in persistently thrusting on public attention the baleful effects of a social evil.

Do you call wine drinking a social evil. There was an flash in Hargrave's eyes.

Then you class wine drinkers and evil doers together? said Hargrave.

No, I do not class them.

Then I don't know the meaning of terms. There was a slight curl on Hargrave's lip.

Wine-drinking leads to evil doing in too many cases, said Hargrave. This is no new statement. It is as old as scripture.

Any practice that leads to social demoralization must be regarded as a social evil.

Oh, you needn't try to explain it away, returned Hargrave, with considerable anger, sipping as he spoke. I'm an evil because I take my glass of wine, and you are a well doer because you do not.

Let's change the subject, said the friend.

Then take it back said the other.

Take what back.

The charge you brought against me just now.

What charge.

Why, that I was an evil-doer—a bad member of society, and all that.

I did not say so. In spite of his effort to control himself, Barclay was becoming irritated.

You did! exclaimed Hargrave, his face growing dark with anger.

No; I'll tell you what I did say, replied Barclay, his brows beginning to contract.

What.

That all men should be afraid of wine, and that you would be afraid of it before you died.

Pshaw! And Hargrave curled his lip contemptuously.

Barclay rose, and was taking his hat to go, when the other said, stepping between him and the door.—Not yet; we must settle this matter first.

What matter.

About my being an evil doer. No man ever said that of me before. He poured out another glass, and drank it off.

You misapprehend me altogether, was returned with much seriousness of manner; for Barclay saw that the wine taken by his friend had already unbalanced him, and put him in a captious and quarrelsome frame of mind. I only referred to the effect of wine-drinking on society.

And don't I drink wine, ha? cried Hargrave fiercely.

Yes, but it under the influence of wine you have never done a wrong act, no one can call you a wrong doer.

The quiet, serious way in which this was said, subdued Hargrave; and ere the outburst of his unreasoning anger flowed on again, Barclay said a quick "Good morning!" and was gone.

I am more afraid of it than ever, exclaimed the young man to himself, as the door closed the retiring form of his friend, and drew a deep breath. He's a good fellow, and I like him; but his heresies on wine cause many quarrels between us, and this, I fear, caused the first edge of friendship. We hardly ever meet again without reserve or embarrassment.

Nor did they; for in Hargrave's remembrance of the interview was an impression that his friend had classed him with some evil-doers. Just what was said, he could not distinctly remember; but he was sure about his being derogatory to his manhood or his honor. As for Barclay he felt that it was not safe to be on intimate terms with a man who had in so marked a way, illustrated the adage, that when wine is in, wit is out. But he was not yet done with this friend. A few weeks afterwards he received a note from him, saying, I want to see you this evening very particularly. I have got an unpleasant affair on my hands, and would like the aid of your clear head. Be sure to come. I will be in my room at eight.

Barclay called, as desired, at Hargrave's room. He found him walking the floor in a disturbed state of mind.

Ah, good evening, he said, holding out his hand as Barclay entered. It was very kind in you to come promptly. Sit down. You see I've got, as I said, an unpleasant affair on my hands, and want your help.

A bottle of wine and two glasses stood on his table. As Barclay sat down, Hargrave filled the two glasses, and was about handing one to his friend, when he checked himself, and grew slightly embarrassed.

Oh! I forgot, he said in an apologetical way. You don't take wine.

Barclay remembered but too distinctly his narrow escape from a quarrel in that very room only a few weeks before; and for a moment or two he hesitated to speak as duty prompted—but only for a moment or two. Then he said with a manly force and bearing that gave a power to his words—No, I'm afraid of it. It came near getting us into trouble the last time we met; and now, my friend, if you want counsel from me, you must put up the wine, and keep a cool head.

He spoke bravely and emphatically. Hargrave's face crimsoned to his temples—his eyes flashed with a sudden fire. But they soon dropped away from the steady gaze of his friend, who saw the line of his lips give place to weak irresolution. For a while he remained silent and still. Then in a slow forced sort of manner, as one acting under impulsion, he took the small tray on which stood the bottle and glasses, and put it out of sight.

Will that do? he asked in a strangely quiet tone.

Thank you for meeting my wishes—prejudices, if you prefer to call them so, said Barclay, with a softened manner. We cannot always see alike, and must have patience one with another. And now my friend, in what way can I serve you. Hargrave's face grew very serious.

I am getting unfortunate of late, said he; and hardly know what to make of it. It really seems as though everybody did put themselves out to insult or annoy me.

What has happened? asked the friend.

George Flenn behaved so rudely last night, at the Weston's party that I don't see how I can pass it over, replied Hargrave.

Annie Glenn's brother.

Yes; and what makes it so much worse is the fact that it was done in her presence.

I heard something about it to day said Barclay.

You did.

Yes.

Well, what did you hear? Hargrave turned to the table at which he was sitting, and reached out his hand. The movement was not to be mistaken, But the bottle and glasses were gone. He looked a little confused.

I heard, replied Barclay, that while you and Miss Glenn were standing together in the supper room, her brother came up, and without noticing you, put out his arm to his sister, and said "Come!" and that his sister took his arm in some confusion of manner and was escorted to the other side of the room.

Well, and what else did you hear, Barclay?

It is said, he replied, speaking deliberately and in a firm voice, that you had been taking too much wine.

Hargrave started to his feet—flushing deeply, and then growing pale.

Who said it? he demanded with suppressed anger.

I cannot give you names. But I heard it said by at least three persons who were there and saw the incident; and each of them said that George Glenn acted right.

Do you believe it? demanded Hargrave.

How much wine had you taken? asked Barclay.

Two or three glasses.

What were you doing at the time Glenn came up?

Nothing out of the way that I can remember.

You had a glass of wine in your hand.

Yes.

And was making a little speech to Miss Glenn.

I was saying something to her; I don't know what.

Gesticulating and spilling the wine in your glass all over her beautiful silk dress.

Who says that?

It is said so, replied Barclay.

A look of blank surprise came into Hargrave's face.

And you believe it.

Think closely, said his friend. You should be able to recall every particular of your conduct.

Yes, that is true, he answered, in an uncertain voice, but somehow there is an obscurity in my mind. It is all clear enough from the moment Glenn came up in his rude way; but just what I was saying or doing at the time has faded out of my memory.

Why should this be? Have you soberly questioned yourself as to the reason?

Do you mean to insinuate that I was drunk! Fire flashed in the young man's eyes.

I insinuate nothing. What you were saying or doing at a certain time you cannot remember. Others say, that they remember it quite distinctly, and agree in declaring it as their opinion that you had taken wine by far too freely.

The fiery flash went out of Hargrave's eyes once more. He beat his head in a tired baffled kind of way, drawing a deep sigh that was almost a groan.

I am at fault, must be speaking slowly.—There is a muddle somewhere. As to my having taken too much wine, the thing is absurd that———. He checked himself without finishing the sentence.

Wine is a mocker, said his friend, seriously.

And so you believe with the rest? Hargrave spoke half reproachfully to his friend.

It is never safe, my friend, returned Barclay, to take an enemy into the citadel of life.

An enemy!

Was it a friend or an enemy that did you such a grievous wrong last night? The question set to your conduct to clear and searching ring; and you sprang yourself when you [illegible] to require it.

A [illegible] confronted Hargrave in a fearless, injured kind of way. His eyes [illegible] to a wrong and abused judgment.

[illegible] you that; only that you had taken too much wine, and did not know what you were doing.

Hargrave sat, with bowed head for a long time. His countenance was pale but resolved.

Is it not so, Hargrave, asked his friend.

It may be all so, he said, I'm not sure of anything, in fact; except that of late men rise against me a great deal oftener than they used to do. You say it's all the wine.

I am sure of it, exclaimed his friend.

Very well, we'll see. Wine and I will part company, at least, for a while.

There's no harm in trying the experiment,

* * * * *

Do people rise against you as often as before? asked Barclay, meeting his friend some time afterwards.

No, I think not, replied Hargrave smiling. You have kept in your word about wine. To the letter.

And will so continue.

As long as I am in my right senses.—You told me once that the time would come when I'd be afraid of a glass of wine; and the time is here. I'm not so strong headed as I thought myself. Thank you, my friend, for your honest speech. It has saved me I think from much that I now shudder to contemplate.

Threatening the Press

An unseemly disagreement has arisen between the London Reporter and the Royal Insurance Company. In consequence of some by that journal upon the management of the Royal, the Managers seem to have been aroused into a state of unwonted indignation; they cut off their subscriptions, and attempt to terrify the editor with the announcement that all future advertising patronage will be withheld from his publication. The conduct of these Managers appear to us, at this distance, to be little else than childish.

But the sensible thinking public will be tempted to ask—Why take such mortal offence at a mere criticism? Has the Royal become so accustomed to the smoothing down process that a slight back-stroke not only raises its hair, but rouses its ire? Or is it possible that this editor has told some pointed truths, which can be better "bluffed" than denied? The Reporter man declares his intention—now that his wrath is stirred up—of pricking "this over-blown bubble," and laying bare to the public gaze the affairs of an Institution which he declares is "rotten to the core." If the editor of the Reporter can establish his allegation, or even a moiety of them, this quarrel will possess great interest in more than one corner of the globe

While the spokesmen of the Royal have acted a foolish part, we cannot acquit the Reporter of folly. Its criticisms display too much temper. It would seem that the editor has for the moment lost sight of the interests of the public in the pique of the journalist. No journal should be made the vehicle of personal spite, nor should its utterances be dictated by mere private interests.

In another London paper—one of the best and most enterprising of our English exchanges—The Review, the European Assurance Society displays similar sensitiveness to criticism. The directors, through the Company's solicitors, inform the editor that they "have reason to believe that the ensuing number of The Review will contain libellous matter affecting the Society," and state their determination to prosecute him forthwith if anything defamatory appears. To our mind, this is putting the meekness and forbearance of an editor to a severe test. Such unwarranted interference with the liberty of the press would not be tolerated for a moment in this country. If it is possible to control the utterances of British journalists in this manner, it is little wonder that a host of swindling life insurance and other organisations have sprung up, flourished, and fattened on the spoils of an unsuspecting public. Against this kind of mischief there is no remedy so effective as a free press; and we at once become suspicious of the soundness and honesty of any institution which shrinks from criticism, and seeks to elude it by attempting to muzzle the press.—Monetary Times.

MENTAL LEISURE.—How seldom do we see a man with his mind full of a subject, sit quietly down and 'think it out.'" In a recent sermon in Cincinnati, while speaking of the press, the minister said: "It does the practical thinking for a large portion of our people. They are too busy or too indolent to do it for themselves, so they get a man to sit up at nights, state the facts, draw the conclusion and advocate a theory for them, do the whole up in a convenient package and slip it under the front door. In half an hour, while they sip their coffee, they have not only learned exactly what is going on in the world, but exactly how they ought to think and how they ought to feel about the mixed up business in this great, rushing world of ours." It is to be feared that this evil is growing rapidly on the public mind. Young men are too easily satisfied with the appearance of things, and rarely place a heavy tax on their reasoning powers before arriving at conclusions. The blame of this defect generally rests upon those who have had the training of their minds, though in many cases their natural propensities led them astray. However prone men may be to shrink from physical labor, their desire to avoid mental exertion of any kind is much greater. How many persons can you name who like to write a letter, even to a friend, merely from the pleasure to be driven therefrom? The labour of the mind is more exhausting in its effects upon the human system than the labour of the body, and is just the same proportion that one is greater than the other, do men avoid its performance. Something should be done to stop this tide of shallow thinking which is gradually overspreading the shores of our national existence. Let those who do think and can fully realise the importance of careful thought, endeavour to inculcate these principles in the minds of the rising generation, that the high standard of our nationality fall not below those lethargic students of the old world!—Portland Transcript.

Just as the bleak weather sends us into our houses, and makes us thankful for the warmth and shelter we lately slighted, so reparations, sorrows, felt infirmity, will send us back into those faithful sayings, and will make us gladly retreat into the truth of the Gospel—a Gospel which has wrought life and immortality to light, and which cries against nature's death and deselation reveals an endless life, a deathless Savior, an eternal God.

The largest coins of Canada now current are the Confederation cent, the British penny as two cents, British half-penny nearly cent, and the penny tokens issued by the Bank of Montreal, and Bank of Upper Canada, and Bouchette Penny, pass for two cents, and the half-penny copper tokens issued by the same banks for one cent. These pass to the Post Office, Banks, and Railway Companies at these rates.

Civil Guns.

It may have been true some years ago that peace had victories no less renowned than war—triumphs of true [illegible] enough to be taken [illegible] and in these days wielding a march upon its rival and winning triumphs in the very fields of peace itself. It is no new subject of comment that science has entered the field as the ally of the soldier, and that all skill, patience, tireless energy, scholarly attainment and scientific knowledge can do is done to aid the effectiveness of the work of death. Hydrostatics, hydrostatics, acoustics, electricity, chemistry, and the mechanic arts have been "pressed into the army," and all the peaceful servants of man have been pressed into doing duty in the rank of war. Now comes Mr. Henry Bessemer, whose great work hitherto has been the ready production and consequent vast cheapening of steel with a proposition to kill men by steam. He proposes to construct a steam fire engine, from whose nozzle, instead of a stream of water for extinguishing fires, shall flow a stream of bullets for extinguishing life.

Mr. Bessemer proves very conclusively that an ordinary steam fire engine possesses the power of throwing bullets as well as water by a slight change of its machinery; that it would throw 2,440 cubical rifle bullets a mile high every minute; and that an increase in the weight of the projectile would insure an increase in range, say a thousand two ounce bullets per minute, having an initial velocity of possibly 1,900, certainly 1,600 feet per second, with a pressure of 150 pounds of steam. An engine of this description, with running gear similar to that of the Edinburgh traction engine, would travel over very rough ground, carry its own fuel and ammunition, and might even be employed, when not in action, dragging heavy guns, and doing other work for which horses are now employed. He proposes one of sufficient power to throw three streams of two-ounce bullets from nozzles in front, at the rate of a thousand a minute each, with two side nozzles each throwing two-thousand one-ounce balls per minute. A screen in front would protect the engineers and "workmen," as we suppose the contractors for human destruction might be called.

The principal objection to this machine will at once suggest itself to every mind—that the boiler will necessarily be vulnerable to cannon shot, and that any artillery missile hitting it would produce an explosion destructive not only to the steam gun itself, but of every one in its immediate neighborhood. Still, we suppose it is not possible to invent a method of limitless destruction without incurring some danger in return; and it probably does not make much difference to the soldier whether he is pierced by a bullet or scalded to death by an escape of steam.

American War Preparations.

Troy, October 31.—There is really something strange is going on at the Watervliet Arsenal at West Troy. The force of workmen employed there, which has for some years past been very small is constantly being augmented, and the arsenal grounds are beginning to put on their old war look. The utmost care is taken to prevent visitors from entering the grounds, and the soldiers on duty there have had explicit instructions not to converse with citizens in regard to recent shipments of military equipments and arms. Every thing is conducted with the greatest degree of caution and secrecy, and the workmen are constantly under a complete system of espionage. This is probably intended to prevent them from making public what they know. That large amount of military accoutrements have been and are being made up there can be no doubt. Every day, almost without an exception, the boats belonging to the Troy and New York Steamboat Company had carried arms or ammunition consigned for New York Harbour. What New York Harbour wants with so many arms or so much munition, is a mystery which puzzles all besides the people of this busy little city.

A contractor named Lawrence, [illegible] business in West Troy, it is known, recently entered into contract for the manufacture of a thousand sets of artillery harness, and harness-maker are being brought from a distance to make them up in short order. Of course, these things create a good deal of speculation in this vicinity, but so far nothing of a reliable nature is known concerning the reason for this great activity in these "piping time of peace."

Motives and Understanding.

A New Orleans paper tells the following story:

A few nights since the passengers in a crowded street car were startled by the soft cooings of a couple in the corner. A blue veil hid the lady's face, and the gentleman's hand was playing nervously with its folds.

'You love me, then;' they heard him say.

The reply was in a tone less loud, but its accent was tender as the heart could wish.

'I have loved you so long,' the swain continued, 'and I have been almost afraid to indulge the sweet hopes that are now resolving themselves into certainty.'

'was you afraid of pa?' asked the lady.

'No, but of you.'

'Why should you be afraid of me,' she asked.

'Because it seemed impossible that you could love me.'

'Why.'

'I'm homely; my nose is not handsome; I have nothing that attracts the love of women.'

'But you are rich,' the lady archly replied.'

'Passingly so, but not very,' said the swain.

The conversation had by this time grown absorbingly interesting, and every ear was listening in the crowded street car.

'Would you marry me if I was very poor.'

'How can you ask—am I mercenary.'

'No—but so many are.'

There was a momentary silence, and followed a noise something like a horse drawing his foot out of a mire hole. When love came in what little sense they had went out and both acknowledged resemblance to Job's turkey—neither had a cent. The lady once furtive glances at the swain, and at last murmured audibly:

'I'm too young to marry.'

'So am I.'

'We're both been mistaken.'

'Yes.'

And so they had. They left the car quietly.

MORAL.—When you are so lucky as to gain, through the plea of riches, a woman's love, don't be sure enough to let her know otherwise until the knot is tied, or you might as well have never gained it, for riches is the cause of nearly all hasty marriages.

WATER-PROOF GLUE.—One ounce of gum-sandarac and one ounce of mastic are to be dissolved together in a quarter of a pint of alcohol, to which an ounce of [illegible] turpentine is to be added. As the [illegible] is a very thick glue is to be kept [illegible] with a little [illegible] [illegible] ruins in alcohol [illegible] [illegible] in a glue-pot, and the glue [illegible] by with [illegible] [illegible] the whole [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

It is printed in alternate columns of French and English, and consequently suited to both English and French readers, and will be found interesting in families when the young folks are studying French. Should they by this, give him the means to retire from public life altogether, it would be a boon to the country. He has had vessel written on his every public act, by which he has purchased himself power and influence. Is this $150,000 intended to perpetuate the same trickery for 5 years longer?

THE ONTARIO CABINET LAWYER.—The above is the title of a new book of legal forms designed for the use of farmers merchant and others. It contains forms of Deeds, Mortgages, Contracts, Warrants of Distress, Bills, Notes, Bonds, Notices, Wills, &c. It is a very useful book, and being got up by a Canadian Barrister is just the thing for Canadian practice. By the copy before us we see Mr. A. B. Kidd of this town is publisher. Mr. Kidd has a large supply on hand, and can supply all who wish to save themselves the cost of getting lawyers to draw up their every day contracts and papers—The Cabinet Lawyer is only $1.50.

THE MCKENZIE TESTIMONIAL.—The Reformers of Ontario, alive to the earnest and successful labours of Alex. McKenzie, Esq., M. P., in the Reform cause, have determined to present him with something in the form of a testimonial. We hope the Reformers of this County will not be unmindful of the work, but will send in their mite to the good cause. They cannot but recognise his signal public services, and this can be done tangibly by forwarding a few dollars to the central committee. Those who wish it can remit direct to Wm. F. McMaster, Treasurer, Toronto.

ROME.—The affairs of the eternal city are not so fully discussed as their importance would seem to demand, owing to the great interest felt in the French war at present. We are not however to consider that all there is finally settled. The change may be satisfactory to the nation at large, but there are malcontents enough to require watching for a season. Pio Nono, however, is stripped of his temporal power, and confined to matters spiritual. But it is [illegible] expect that all those [illegible] fared sumptuous [illegible] with meekness the [illegible] advantage. For [illegible] perhaps by [illegible]me. But there will yet be [illegible] over their position, and consequent emoluments. So far, however, all is quiet.

THE CANADIAN LITERARY JOURNAL.—Toronto: Flint & VanNorman.—The November [illegible] of this new Canadian Peri[illegible]s, being the 4th [illegible] addition to the list of excellent articles (all original) that appear this month, there is a beautiful piece of music entitled "The Canadian Pioneer." The contents are as follows:—"Impressions from Goethe," W. F. Munro: "Rose's Cross," a tale of the Crusades: "Autumn," a Poem: "Something for the Young Readers of the Journal." "Canoeing in the North," concluded; "The Mountain Lake," a Poem: "John Reade's Poems," a critical review: "The Canadian Pioneer," words and Music: &c. &c.

The Journal appears to be prospering well, and while the articles are from the pens of the best Canadian writers, it will commend itself to all Canadians. May be had at all Newsdealers. Annual Subscription—75 cents.

John Sandfield, Mr. Richards and Carling, visited Lindsay on Wednesday, a torrid lunch was arranged for them: From the Warder Report, J. S. said very little. Mr. Richard hinted that Victoria had got its share of the surplus funds. Mr. Carling talked emigration, education, and agricultural. The "Warder" boasts that J. S. was up next morning at 7 o'clock, something unusual after such meetings.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening there will be an impromptu debate, the subject to be chosen by the Chairman. Meeting at 8 o'clock in the Good Templars' Hall.—Members of the Club and all wishing to join will please attend. Persons having books belonging to the Literary Club, will please deliver them.

ST. ANDREWS SOCIETY.—The annual meeting was held last Wednesday evening. From the Treasurer's report there appears $103.94 on hand; $79.80 were received received during the year; $32 expended in charities; and $39 lent to three different persons. The report was adopted. The officers elected are:—J. Carnegie, Jr., President: Messrs. J. F. Dennistoun, W. Hamilton and John Cameron, vice presidents; Secretary, Mr. A. B. Kidd, Treas., Alexander Smith. Committee:—T. M. Fairbairn, D. Sutherland, Jas. Hope, Jas. Whyte, Wm. Mercer, John Ross, W. A. Scott, J. R. Ormond, Jas. Millar, D. McDougall, J. A. Hall, J. McFarlane, John Bertram. On motion of Mr. Fairbairn $20 were voted to the Protestant Home. On motion of Mr. Smith it was agreed to celebrate St. Andrew's Day by a dinner, and a committee was appointed to make arrangements for it. It was was also agreed to ask the Rev. Mr. Rogers to preach the annual sermon.

The following from the pen of Mr. Sandford Fleming will be read with interest just now. It seems to have been written in the days of the survey of the Grand Trunk. The diagram referred to is one of the, then proposed, St. Lawrence and Lake Huron road, and also of the Grand Trunk, Mr. Fleming says:—

"The St. Lawrence and Lake Huron Railway will be of great consequence in another point of view. If we connect Toronto with it at Peterboro', a distance of not exceeding seventy miles, the whole line from Peterboro to Prescott may be made available as a portion of the Grand Trunk Railway, and would save to the Province the construction of about 150 miles of Railway, and consequently an outlay of seven or eight hundred thousand pounds! By referring to the diagram which I have taken the trouble to prepair on purpose to show the porposed routes more fully than can be done by description, we shall find that this Central Trunk Line passing through Prescott, Peterboro', Toronto and Guelph, is so near the crow line between Montreal and Detroit, that at no point does it deviate to the right or left more than about fifteen miles; and the whole distance from Montreal to Detroit, at[illegible]ween 500 and 600 miles, is not above twenty-five miles longer than the straight course. By comparing the proposed Central Trunk Line with the one surveyed along the shore we shall find that the distance by the former is actually less than that by the latter; and there can be no question which of the two would be of the most service to the country, which would secure the greatest amount of way-traffic, and consequently yield the most profitable returns to the stockholders. The Central would open up the fertile and extensive Basin of the Otonabee, the produce of which, and of the inland townships along the line, would flow in from every side; while the other would pass along the edge of townships already opened by one of the finest lakes in the world and with the shipping on the lake the railway would always have to compete. Besides this, a Railway passing through the centre of an agricultural country might reasonably be expected to do double the way business of one laid down along the edge of an inland sea, even if we suppose, for the sake of argument, that the commerce and shipping done by water be entirely given up in favor of the Railway; in the first case, passengers, produce and merchandise would be collected and distributed along both sides of the line; while in the second case, this could only be done on one side, the other being an unproducing and unconsuming waste."

The Grand Junction and Haliburton Railways.

On Wednesday next, 23rd inst., in the different municipalities, the vote of the ratepayers will be taken on the By-law to grant, by way of bonus, $75,000 to the Grand Junction Railway, and $25,000 to the Haliburton Railway schemes.

If these sums will insure us the two roads, we say by all means vote yes. As there can be no doubt but that the increased advantages of market, &c., and consequently better prices, would fully repay the whole amount in ten years.

There is some little ambiguity in both the acts relating to the construction of these roads, and we are not free from the belief that some of these may have been intentional. We have little faith in railway politicians; we doubt their good intentions, but surely the County Council can so arrange that the provisional or other directors shall not handle the peoples' money till they can show an equivalent in right of way, grading and construction.

This, we think, can safely be left to the County Council, but we are of opinion that railway hangers-on should be excluded from taking part in the general management of By-laws and the issuing of Debentures. Let the Council do these things. Then again is it not preposterous to have outsiders threatening the County Council with chancery suits if the wishes of a railway clique are not granted? We say by all means give us the railways, if $100,000 will ensure them, and we do think that the By law will be sustained by the good sense of the people; but to be plain we have no confidence in railway directors who never could manage their own business.

In voting on this By-law the ratepayers should be guided by reason, not by prejudices against railways in general, nor by fear of falling into the hands of unprincipled men. What they are to vote is to be a bonus, a gift, and consequently no further demand can be made unless the municipalities so desire it. We believe that Pete boro is the direct line between the east and the great west, and hence if these roads be constructed she will become the centre of a large and increasing trade. To this end we desire to see these roads built, and as they cannot be without money, we should assist.

BALLOONS IN WARFARE.—The balloon is becoming a war engine with a vengeance. M. Nadar has been appointed a member of the committee under the presidency of M. Berthelot, for the scientific defense of Paris, and several captive balloons are to be employed; while we learn from Strasbourg that captive balloons are to be used for dropping nitro-glycerine bombs on the powder-magazines of the town; the operations are to be conducted by an Englishman named Walter, and Herr Mahler, [illegible].

South Monaghan Ploughing Match.

This match came off on the farm of Mr. Josiah Perrin, on Wednesday, the 2nd inst.

The day was most favorable, being one of those quiet delightful days known as "Indian Summer," which are hailed with so much delight. The number of competitors was not large, there being four men and four boys. They had each to plough one-third of an acre. The ploughing on the whole was well done, considering the limited time being four hours and thirty minutes. In some places there was also a number of understones, being one materially mars the appearance of work. As soon as the judges gave their decision they, with the officers of the society and ploughmen, partook of a most excellent dinner provided by Mr. Perrin. Before leaving, the thanks of the society were given to Mr. and Mrs. Perrin, for their very kind entertainment: also to the judges for the discharge of their onerous duty.

PRIZE LIST, MEN:—1st Wm. Rutherford, 2nd Henry White, 3rd Wm. Dawson, jr. Mr. Alexander Wright was ruled out, as he was 20 minutes behind time. A fact worthy of notice, the first prize man, Wm. Rutherford, has only one hand.

BOYS:—1st And ew McLelland, 2nd John Dawson, 3rd John Finnie, 4th Martin Parker.

What is being done.

There is every reason to believe that the two McDonalds will again try the game of bringing on the elections for the Commons and Ontario Legislature at the same time. John Sandfield and Mr. E. B. Wood and Co., are availing themselves of every possible opportunity of addressing the people in various parts of the country. At Belleville we all know what inducements were held out to secure the continued support of the members for Hastings. They were told that their support insured them the Asylum, while the opposition of Hamilton people was the cause of its being removed from that city; the fitness or unfitness of the places having no weight in the matter.

Sandfield also harped on the old song—No party—Get rid of party—For God's sake get rid of party. What are these but blinds to seduce the unwary, or promises to bring in any that are fond of government pap.

The Review of this town has even the boldness to tell us that now is the time to secure our share of the spoil. As much as to say, gentlemen, here is a mess of pottage, what is your birthright of independance in comparison.

The whole Combination scheme is a matter of dollars and cents. Let us have our share, says our youthful politician: for be it remembered, the Editor of the Review is a Camp follower of Sandfield. The spectacle that the Combination makes of itself everywhere, is far from being an honor to Ontario. Witness again Mr. E. B. Wood at a Methodist meeting up West preaching politics, as if possible to blight religious efforts by an alliance with the baneful politics of the present day. Why does Mr. Wood appear amongst the prophets, if it be not to bribe them if he can? Have not our politicians a lofty opinion of christian principle when they even approach a whole body and try to purchase them to support them at next election.

An alliance of christianity with men who go about the country, too often not fit to address people without oaths, and accused of being now and then more than sober, would hardly tend to the growth of grace in the heart. When good and evil commingle the evil is sure to prevail.

This attempt to again wheedle over the great Methodist body, is ominous. They are told to remember that Mr. Wood was once a methodist. So was Satan once an angel of light—what is he now?

But we ask the electors of this County what are we to gain by continuing in power the present unfit, time-serving men?—We will be told that Sandfield has money, and the present men have the power of picking his pocket so to speak. Do the electors wish to continue this system of bribing Members to support a man, or party in power; for John Sandfield has a party who follow him for grab.

Just witness the consistency of John Carnegie, Junr, the out and out Tory, a thick and thin supporter of John Sandfield, who claims to be an out and out reformer, for he says he is still a Reformer. If Sandfield is still a Reformer, then it argues that Mr Carnegie is ready to barter his principles for some paltry honors. If Mr. Carnegie supports John Sandfield on principle, then Mr. McDonald is not a Reformer. Which ever way it is taken there is the greatest inconsistency.

The truth appears to be that Mr. Carnegie supports the Combination for our share of the spoil, see a late number of the Review.

The Reformers of Ontario if placed in power are ready and willing to manage all the affairs of Ontario, on different principles than sinking large sums in useless places to gain support of men without principle—Just witness the outlay of $30,000 at Young's Point, to let the Indian canoes through. There is not a scow even above it nor is there anything for one to do. We are told 25 per cent of the sum went into merchant's pockets, for goods sold. Unfortunately for this argument, the profits go out of the County. A distant relation of John Sandfield got the job, and carries away the profits.

The County Council granted $500 for the Burleigh road, and $2,000 for the Bobcaygeon road. But Sandfield secured the outlay of these sums—and who got the jobs? We leave those who know to answer the question, but every honest ratepayer should protest against voting over money to be placed in the hands of any party to buy up continued support for that party. Surely the Reeves and Councils of Municipalities are better qualified to be commissioners or to appoint commissioners than John Sandfield, who does such things to suit the tools he plays politics with at Toronto.

Not a stone is left unturned by them that even remotely points to a clear path at the next election. What are Reformers doing? We leave this for another occasion, when we hope to return to this matter.

Chancellor Blake died on Tuesday, at Toronto. He was about 61 years of age.

Those Over Charges.

The Review has of late become exceedingly cautious to lay before the readers of that reformers (we use the word advisedly) Journal, certain accusations of overcharging on the "Non-Resident Land Sale." To this end with his usual veracity, and we might say ignorance, wilful or otherwise, of figures, except, when they bring funds to his pouch, he has trumped up a completely erroneous statement, and one at utter variance with his own practice.

Always heretofore Mr. Romaine has pocketed the profits of advertising the Land Sale. This year, and this year only, was it given to us. Why, we need not now stop to enquire. In the past years he has thus obtained thousands of dollars, and now that the Council has directed that we should get it one year, he shows his holy ire, and like a celebrated character at an Eastern Court, he vows revenge—extermination we suppose. But he should remember Haman's end.

The plain facts are these;—we were asked to make a statement of cost of advertising certain Lots, 221 were furnished us. We took Mr. Romaine's published list of 1869, and measured it, and on it based the whole calculation. The measurment was 1015 lines, and at Mr. Romaine's Rate per line for 1869, and no more, it was paid for. We also got a practical printer, Mr. Romaine's late foreman, to measure the work, and he is ready to testify to the lines if required. The rate per line of space for 1870 is identical with the rate per line of space for 1869, although every one knows that a job costing $751.43 should be at a less rate than a job of half the amount.

As a proof of either the ignorance of the Review in calculation, or of wilful overcharging, we leniently lean to the former idea, we find the following item in Mr. Romaine's last account to the County Council:—

To advertising By-law, 135 lines 15 insertions, 50 per cent off, $32.40.

To carry this out correctly it should be $22.95. Hence here is an overcharge, or at least a wrong calculation in Mr. Romaine's favor and against the County of $0.45 in one single item. The 50 per cent off must have been inserted as a blind on the Finance Committee, while he only uses 25 per cent off. What will his honest rage be when he learns that the County has lost in this item $0.45, if his entry be right. If the item $32.40 be right, then why did he put in 50 per cent off? So much for this.

Last year the Review and the Examiner advertised the meeting of the Boards of Instruction. His account for that was $0.45, ours $8.60. This was against the Review's charges a little.

This year for the same thing for a shorter period, he charges $7.93, ours is $7.50 for the same advertisement; and another in the Review is $7.20, ours $6.75.

This year for the printing of 6,300 Assessors schedules, he charges $61.00, while $40 would pay well for the work. $7.00 instead of $10.00 per 1,000 would be nearer the mark—and yet with all these things staring him in the face, he dares to find fault with our charging regular rates, just what he charged in 1869.

In 1868, we were informed that Mr. Romaine sought to obtain a considerable sum per line in addition to what appeared in the advertisement. The Treasurer concerned refused to comply, and Mr. R. had to do with what was advertised. Now he wishes to make a virtue of a necessity.—He would have taken more—sought for it—but did dot get it, we are informed. What noble generosity? and now he would represent this as a virtue in himself instead of in the Treasurer

But we are ready to make this offer, viz: We will submit all the accounts we ever had with the County to any honest practical printer, if Mr. Romaine will but do the same, and we will bind ourselves to refund to the County every cent such printer shall say we have overcharged, if he, (Mr. R.) will do likewise, or if he will agree to refund those accounts for which he has charged more than we have charged for the same work.

In 1868 Mr. Romaine received from the County nearly $1,400, ($1,376) for printing, books, and binding.

In 1869 it was larger, but we cannot give the figures.

In 1870 the monopoly was broken up, and like the men who found the "hope of their gain gone," he would fain have it [illegible] the County.

Will he submit his bills for 5 years to be taxed? We are willing. But just think of it Mr. Robt Romaine receiving nearly $1,400 from the County for printing books and binding, at enormous rates, and now that he does not get all, he whines.

Let the whining be over, and the accounts for five years taxed by an honest practical printer.

By all means, in future let the work be measured by the Treasurer, or the whole work submitted to tender.

J. Sandfield at the opening of the Belleville Asylum, gave his advice to those present, thus:—"For God's sake endeavour to get rid of as much party spirit as you can." And yet he tells them that they have the Asylum at Belleville because the Hastings members stuck to him and his party; and he added:—"That so long as they stuck to him he would stick to them."

This is a verification of the old adage—"fools give advice but only wise men take it." We suppose John Sandfield is a violent party man, as bitter an enemy to an opponent as can exist. He has filled every office during the continuation of his regime with the veryest tory partizans, and he has governed the country by a majority of partizans; and yet he asked for God's sake to get rid of party. He has all along been a strong party man, but lately he sold himself to the John A party, and retains office only by consent of the Arch Trickster. He is now nothing short of a violent, ranting, howler for office, and he is ready to sacrifice every friend to retain it. He has a party who go with him, and just so long as they stick to him and keep him premier, he will stick to them. If they claim the right of thinking otherwise, he will soon form another party if he can. He at present governs by a party of sycophants who dare not vote against him.

We ask the electors of this riding how long are they going to allow themselves to be represented by men who are wholly unfit for their positions? by men who are mere voting machines for the Combination and for Cartier. How long are the wealthy and influential ridings of Peterborough to lend their influence to return men in whom they have no confidence? men whose promises have been violated, and whose independence only exist when John Sandfield or John A. permits it?

Have we a Government?

If ever a country was cursed with a do-nothing but spend-money Government, Canada is that country. For months the members of the Government have been running all over creation making themselves comfortable at the peoples' expense, while the interests of the country have been left to take care of themselves. Day by day proofs of this fact are looming up, the latest of which has just been made public by a circular from the North-West Emigration Aid Society of Canada. This Society has been established in order to point the attention of the public to the North-West as a proper country for settlers, and to aid parties going their who may become members of the Society, the Secretary was authorized by resolution to apply to the Government for information as to their Land Policy, and will our readers believe the fact, Mr. Dunkin, the Minister of Emigration, was forced to reply that, nothwithstanding the promises made last session of Parliament, the Government had done nothing whatever on the subject.

In a pure [illegible] Government, such a statement could not have been made public without bringing down on the heads of the imbeciles making it, the severest condemnation. Oh, Confederation Coalition, you have much to answer for! How fortunate we had nothing to do with it, but rather suffered martyrdom—a Reform member of the Coalition Government having struck the RECORDER from the list of advertising mediums in matters Governmental, because we would not swallow the pill prepared by the Confederation-Coalition Cabinet—a most tyrannical and contemptible act.—Brockville Recorder.

Total Eclipse of December 22, 1870. Earthquake and Tidal Wave.

This will be one of the greatest of modern total eclipses of the sun that has taken place; for not only does it occur when the moon is particularly near to the earth, but at a period when the earth is nearest the sun, and also at the time of the winter solstice, the moon likewise occulting the planent Saturn, the planet Venus on the same day being in configuration with the moon. 1° 6 min south, the moon at the time approaching her conjunction with the planet Mercury, which latter body will be only 1° 17 min. south of the moon.

In opposition part of the heavens, both the planets Jupiter [1° 7 min. north] and the planet Uranus [only 56 min. south] of the moon, at a period when the planet Jupiter is approaching on opposition to the sun, which will take place on the 13th December, exercising a most powerful reciprocal attractive influence on each other, by the combined influence thus exercised by the Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Uranus, and the Earth, all being nearly in a right line, a configuration that has not taken place for centuries, and which seldom occurs; consequently, the effects on the earth will be considerable, creating earthquakes, tidal waves, storms, hurricanes and cyclones. Similar configurations were present at the time of the total eclipse of the 16th August, 1868, when Quito and Callao were destroyed by earthquakes and tidal wave; but even then the influences were somewhat less than they will be on the 22nd December next.

The eclipse will begin in the North Atlantic Ocean, the central line moving in a south-easterly direction. Crossing one part of Spain and the Mediterranean Sea, it enters Africa near Oran, and soon afterwards attains its southern limits. The shadow of the moon now moves in a north easterly direction and leaves Africa, and crossing the Island of Sicily, the south of Turkey, the Black Sea, and the Sea of Azof, disappears.

The Penumbra of the moon decreasing rapidly, leaves the earth with the setting sun in Arabia.

The sea will be centrally and totally eclipsed at noon in lat. 36° 38 north, long. 5° 1 west, a little to the north-east of Gibraltar, and near the Lisbon coast, creating tidal waves and earthquakes there of great severity, agitating the waters of the Atlantic Ocean, the Bay of Fundy and the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The Fruits of Victory.

GERMAN CAPTURES IN THE WAR.

The N. Y. Tribune's correspondent, writing from Berlin on the 26th ult., says:—The official statement of German captures thus far, not including Laon, from 2nd Aug., on which day Saarbruck was temporarily abandoned by the Prussians, are as follows; At Saarbruck the French lost 6 officers and 67 privates, at Weissenbourg 30 officers and 1,000 men were made prisoners. 4 mitrailleuses, 22 cannon, and 51 army waggons and carriages of all kinds were captured; at Woerth the Germans made 6,000 prisoners besides 100 officers, and took two eagles, six mitrailleuses, 26 guns, 42 waggons and tents of two divisions, and two railway trains with provisions. The same day the French lost at Speisberen, and during the day following those battles, in the engagements at Reichshofen and Sarrgemunes, 2,000 prisoners, a pontoon train, a tented camp, and five mitrailleuses, containing 10,000 woolen blankets and 40,000 shots of rice, coffee and sugar, and also large quantities of wine, rum and tobacco, the latter articles alone amounting to half a million thalers. The fortresses surrendered during the first half of August increased these figures as follows;—At Hagenau, 3 officers, 150 privates, 80 horses and a large supply of arms; Liechtenberg, 3 officers, 260 privates, 7 guns, 200 muskets, 50,000 cartridges, powder, &c.; at Lutzelstein and Petite Pierre, large quantities of arms and ammunition; at Marshal, 60 guns. The three days of fighting at metz do not show such large captures in men and material because the enemy was able to save both under the guns of the fortress. Still, at Vionville the French loss in prisoners was 36 officers, and 3,000 privates; at Gravelotte 45 officers and 3,00 men. The losses in killed and wounded during the three days were 58,000. With the fortress of Vitry le Francois, 17 officers, 850 privates, and 16 guns were captured. The engagements and battles around Beaumont and Sedan, previous to the capitulation of the latter place, resulted in the taking of about 30,000 prisoners, besides several eagles and a large number of guns. Beaumont alone cost the French 7,000 prisoners, 2 eagles, 11 mitrailleuses, 23 guns, and a tent canon; and Sedan lost previous to the capitulation 26 guns, 2 eagles, and nearly 26,000 prisoners. Sedan gave the victors one Marshal of the Empire, 99 Generals, 230 officers of the staff, 3,088 line officers, 84,450 prisoners, besides 14,000 wounded. All the eagles of the regiments were taken, 70 mitrailleuses, 330 field guns, 150 field guns, and 10,000 horses were captured. At Laon the loss is not yet reported, but will include 23 guns and many muskets. With Toul and those before reported, the total will be 1 Marshal, 99 Generals, 3,359 officers, 106,950 privates, 10,260 horses, at least 56 eagles, 102 mitrailleuses, 887 field and fortress guns, 400 waggons and trains, several pontoon trains, magazines, and railway trains, with an incalculable quantity of supplies of arms, amunition, clothing equipments, forage and provisions.

THE WAR.

There is nothing of great importance to chronicle concerning the war since our last. The Prussians are still around Paris, and rumors are current that provisions will not hold out long. The French have repulsed General Von der Tan, near Orleans, and regained possession of the place, but the Crown Prince is hastening to the relief of the Prussian General, and ere long a bloody battle may be heard of.

A fight between a Prussian and a French gunboat took place lately off Havanna. The battle was pre-arranged between the commanders, and ended in the defeat of the French vessel, but she was able to withdraw without being taken.

There is not much prospect of peace yet The French are still hopeful, but the Prussians are too strong for them as matters stand. The French are not yet so humbled as to sue for mercy, nor are the Prussians yet in Paris. There must yet be a more terrible sacrifice of human beings before the two nations return to peaceful avocations.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—

In your last issue there appears a letter over the signature of James Millar, which calls for a brief reply.

The Directors of the Peterborough and Haliburton Railroad, in deciding that the portion of the County which should be immediately benefitted by the railroad should contribute towards its construction, to my mind adopted a judicious and equitable course. It was only just that the future settlers of the now unsettled territory north of Buckhorn, attracted there by the railroad, as well as the settlers in the more remote townships, who "have borne the burden and heat of the day." This was the main object sought to be obtained, and I venture to say that the public will admit that it is a fair and proper one. The Council was not asked to "tax the settlers of the old townships" along the Bobcaygeon or Burleigh road, "to assist the monopoly to which I belong," or anything else, and the area proposed to be taxed was strictly that which would receive an unquestionable benefit from the road.

The amended Charter of the P. & H. R. Co., it was conceived met the case, and it was certainly never the desire of the company to render the County as a whole liable for the Bonus Mr. Carnegie offered the Council to obtain further amendment of Act at next Session to remove all doubt on this head, and he did not ask the Council to give the By-law the third reading until they or a committee to be appointed by them should be perfectly satisfied that every guarantee has been obtained.

I cannot but suppose that Mr. Millar misunderstood the Reeve of Harvey. The Ratepayers of Dysart certainly never contemplated repudiating their liability when they signed the petition referred to. That there is nothing in the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Act to enable the County to compel the Clerks of the Municipalities to levy a rate for the re-payment of the $45,000, is a defect in the Bill, which however, Mr. Carnegie promised to get remedied.

The statement that "the whole thing looked very like an intended swindle" is one for which Mr. Millar exposes himself to actions for libel from the Directors of the P. & H. R. R. Co., and all the petitioners; but for my part I am satisfied that whatever be the source or motive of so malicious a slander, it will obtain no credence with the public.

Mr. Millar states that the County gave $42,000 for improving the Bobcaygeon road to Haliburton. The road does not go within 18 miles of Haliburton, and nothing was to be expended on the branch road to that Village. With of course a full knowledge of this fact, I gave on behalf of the Company besides its share of the $2,000 paid in County rate, $200 towards the improvement of the Bobcaygeon road.

The Burleigh road to which the County gave $600, was at that time only completed to the Mount road, 7 or 8 miles south of Harcourt, one of my Company's Townships, to which the road has since been constructed, virtually at my Company's expense. Here grants therefore ended to set down as chiefly benefitting my Company, as the public were intended to infer from the manner in which Mr.

line to Haliburton, $40,000 being set apart for a branch to Minden, while $75,000 is asked for the Grand Junction Railroad—which of all Municipalities will chiefly benefit Otonabee. Mr. Miller might judiciously have postponed his mourning remarks relative to the back country until he had secured the votes of its inhabitants in favor of a Bonus, in which he is largely interested.

The puerile personalities indulged in by Mr. Miller are unworthy of any serious reply. I will bravely remind him that the progressive ideas of men who have not yet arrived at the fossil age have been carefully considered and endorsed by nearly all the business men of the Town of Peterborough. I must however do Mr. Miller the justice to say that he was particularly go-ahead when a Bonus to benefit his Municipality was under discussion.

I am, Sir,
Your obed't servant,
CHAS. JAS. BLOOMFIELD.

[illegible] says the Hall Gazette, "Russia, about ground us to the wall in Asia, being a very pickle England will be in." Of late years the power of Russia has been rapidly increasing, her navies [illegible] increased, her military discipline [illegible] civilization greater than before, and the policy of the government become more European than Asiatic. One-seventh of the land of the globe is hers; her population is about 75,000,000, and only her western borders has to be fortified. The Russian regular army is more than 900,000 men on a footing; the army of the reserve is 126,925, and of the second 200,000. Besides these are the Cossacks, who, in lieu of taxes to the government, render military service. Russia has improved. 700,000 breech loading rifles, and abundant artillery. In 1869 its navy consisted of 280 steamers, with 2,205 guns; twenty-nine sailing vessels, with sixty-five guns; twenty four ironclads, with one hundred and forty nine guns; and a force of more than 60,000 sailors. From this it is evident how formidable a foe she would be and how much she has done since the Crimean war.

Few People unacquainted with physiological chemistry are aware of the quantity of iron in the blood, but all should know the importance of keeping up the supply, for debility, disease and death are sure to follow when the quantity becomes to much reduced. The Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of iron) supplies this vital element, and has cured many chronic diseases.

MANY SUFFER rather than take nauseous medicines. All who suffer from coughs, colds, irritation of the bronchial tubes of tendency to consumption, will find in Dr. Wister's Balsam of Wild Cherry a remedy as agreeable to the palate as effectual in removing disease. The Balsam is a pleasant remedy; it is a speedy remedy; it is a remedy that cures.

11. That the Warden of the said County of Peterborough shall within six weeks after the final passing of this By-law, pay and deliver such Debentures to the said remaining amount of twenty-five thousand dollars to the trustees appointed or to be appointed under and pursuant to the Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario, incorporating the said The Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, and the Act amending the same to be held by such trustees and by them paid over to the said last named Company, subject to and in strict accordance with the terms, provisoes and conditions of an agreement to be hereafter obtained from the said The Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company, to and in favor of the Municipality of the County of Peterborough, which said agreement is to be executed and delivered to the said trustees before or at the time of the delivery to them of the said Debentures as aforesaid, or any portion thereof, and shall contain in substance the conditions following, that is to say: That such last named Debentures shall be paid over to the said last named Company at the times and in the manner following, that is to say—to the amount of two thousand five hundred dollars when the said Peterborough and Haliburton Railway shall have been completely graded as far north as the southern limit of Harvey Township; to the further amount of two thousand five hundred dollars when said Railway shall have been completed to the same extent; to the further amount of five thousand dollars when the grading of the said Road shall have been completed as far north as the Monk Road; to the further amount of five thousand dollars when the said Road shall have been completed to the same extent; to the further amount of five thousand dollars when said Road to the Village of Minden shall have been completely graded; and to the further amount of five thousand dollars whenever the said Road to the said Village of Minden shall have been completed; such payments to be made by the said trustees in the manner and upon the evidence of the performance of such conditions as is provided in and by the said Acts, incorporating the said last named Company.

12. That unless the construction of the said The Peterborough and Haliburton Railway shall have been commenced on or before the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, this By-law, in so far as the same provides for the issue of Debentures to the said amount of twenty-five thousand dollars, shall become and be void and of no effect, and the Debentures, if any issued thereupon, shall be delivered up and cancelled.

13. That as to both of the said proposed Railways the rolling stock thereof shall be arranged with sliding axles, so as to permit the rolling stock of each of the said roads to be used upon the other thereof, and upon the Grand Trunk Railway.

14. That in the event of any one portion and not the whole of this By-law becoming effective and of none effect, under the provisions of the tenth and twelfth sections thereof by reason of any one of such proposed Railways not having been commenced within the time hereby limited for the purpose, the said rate so to be levied as aforesaid, shall be sufficient only to cover the interest and sinking Fund sufficient for the redemption of the Debentures, remaining valid under that portion of this By-law remaining in force and effect.

15 That this By-law shall take effect and come into force on the Sixteenth Day of December, in the year of our Lord one Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF is a household medicine, which no prudent family, that understands its value will ever be without. It instantly arrests pain, and its effects, as a diffusive stimulant, anodyne, nervine in cholera, cholera morbus, bilious cholic spasms, fits, malarious diseases, &c., transcends those of any other preparation known. As an external application for burns, bruises, wounds, scalds, &c., it has no equal. Pass on.

Wooly Horses.

Wooly horses are not so rare as many suppose, not such great curiosities either, there are many to be found in various parts of the country, but we doubt if they will ever prove as valuable to their owners as the one exhibited by Barnum; we imagine their owners would consider them more valuable without the wool, for this rough and wooly state of the hair indicates that the horse is not in a healthy condition—probably hide-bound or suffering from some disease which occasions this unnatural appearance; in such cases use 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy,' it will purify the blood, correct the appetite, remove all obstructions from the lungs and liver, and give to the coat a sleek and shining appearance. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. North & Lyman, Newcastle, ont. proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

THE RAT HOLE FLEET.—The Yankees have sunk some 20 vessels loaded with stone at the mouth of Charleston Harbour, which will doubtless prevent any vessels drawing over a few feet of water, entering that port for all time to come, this must prove a serious loss to the property owners there, but it will not at all interfere with the supplies of the Canadian Pain Destroyer for the cure of rheumatism, Tic douloureux, neuralgia, toothache, and all complaints of that nature. Sold by all medicine dealers everywhere, price 25cts per bottle.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A WORD

For every word in the following certificate found untrue, after writing to the parties named: and to the U. S. Consul, at Rio Janeiro, the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid.

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 28th, 1866.

Messrs. Raymundo C. Leite & Bro:

Gentlemen:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta [a large proprietor in the Cidad de Campos] was staying at my house he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tonoco, who is thought a good deal of in Campos, but the fever instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tonoco declared that there was not the slightest hopes of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co.s medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the relief pure on the chest, back and wrists; three of Radway's Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one dessert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the heroism of Dr. Radway & Co's. medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen, yours very obedient servant

Joaquim Pinto Pinho, Merchant.

Dr. Radway's Remedies are sold by Druggists and Country Merchants. See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.

Don't Know What to Do.

We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more readily and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Be Wise to-day.—'Tis madness to neglect a cough or cold, however slight. Consumption may follow, and though Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry has frequently cured this much dreaded disease, it almost invariably cures the primary diseases of the throat, lungs and chest, hereby also remedies ill.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 100 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Tourist's Portable Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical gen

OBITUARY.

ANN WINDRIM.

(Published by request.)

The subject of this memoir was born in Ernestown, County of Addington, C. W., July 27th, 1831; she was the second daughter of Alexander and Mary Ann Speer. In the year of 1835, Bro. Speer moved with his family to Manvers. At this time, Ann was very young; but when she arrived at the period of life, to discern between good and evil, her mind was set on that which would make her happy for time and eternity. She loved to read the "Book of life" rather than any other, and thus became the subject of religious impressions at an early age. She was only eight years old when she would ask her parents questions about divine and eternal things, which surprised them; and with marked attention, and apparent pleasure, would she listen to, and drink in their explanations. They wisely attended to her eternal more than her temporal welfare, and aimed chiefly at giving her an early religious inclination, and their exertions were amply rewarded in her pious life and happy death. Esther Hale was the honored instrument in the hands of God of bringing this blood-bought one into the Redeemer's Kingdom. At the time this Brother travelled the Manvers Mission, (which was about twenty years ago,) he held a revival meeting in the neighbourhood of Lifford, and in this meeting Ann was powerfully wrought upon by the spirit of God—ventured on the atoning blood for forgiveness and salvation, and anchored her entire dependence on Christ, as the only ground-sider of hope, when fleeing from the "wrath to come." By faith she entered this door, and found liberty from sin and peace with God, at the early age of thirteen years. She at once united with the New Connexion Methodists, and remained a consistent member until her death. For several years she attended Bro. Lindsay's class, at the Mountains of Otha, and no doubt many in that vicinity will remember the happy seasons they have enjoyed with this sister. On the 16th of June, 1850, she was married by the Rev. J. Shilton, to Richard Windrim, Esq., of Emily.—Their third son of James Windrim, of Emily.—This change in life would necessarily place her in the midst of worldly perplexities, but notwithstanding these, she was distinguished for evenness of disposition, meekness and patience. Bro. Windrim affirms that he never saw her in any way chagrined, but in every respect exhibiting christian decency. She was a devoted lover of the means of grace, and enjoyed many happy seasons both public and private. On the 13th of March, 1863, Bro. Windrim moved to Verulam, to provide in the wilderness a home for his family. For a while things seemed to move in a favorable direction; Sister Windrim's health was usually good, until the evening of Wednesday, the 26th of January last, when she was seized with inflammation of the lungs. The night was stormy and the roads were impassable, so that a physician could not be procured in time to render relief; the disease, therefore, was left to do its work; her pain was intense, and without intermission for about thirty hours, it was borne with great patience, not a murmur escaped her lips.—On Friday, I went to see her, and found her labouring under great difficulty of breathing, and expressing the fear of dying; but about noon the clouds cleared away, and she spoke of eternal bliss. She said her hope of glory was full and bright, and exclaimed—

"There's not a cloud that doth arise,
To hide my Saviour from my eyes;
I know all will appear the upper skies!
All is well—all is well.

She spoke of the goodness of God to her from the days of her youth; the time when he washed away her sins; the many renewed tokens of his love; how he had saved her from the evil of the world; watched over her path of life, and blessed her with an unwavering assurance of eternal happiness in the hour of her greatest need. She repeated a portion of the CCLIII hymn:—

"I know that my redeemer lives,
And ever prays for me;
A token of his love he gives,
A pledge of liberty."

She learned this hymn and could appreciate when a babe in Christ. We sung it for her, and offered up prayer in her behalf; but she was not silent; her voice was heard responding to prayer; after prayer she requested me to tell her relatives and acquaintances to meet her in heaven—shewed an increased desire for their salvation, and improved every opportunity of entreating them to prepare to meet her in the skies. She said, while praying for these, God had blessed her own soul, and that she confidently believed He would answer her petitions. Here she paused, and we sung—

Jesus united by thy grace,
And each to each endeared,
With confidence we seek thy face,
And know our prayer is heard.

After singing this beautiful hymn, we again engaged in prayer. It was a blessed season to our souls—a season I shall never forget. After prayer, I asked her if she felt much pain? Her answer was,—Oh! no.

Jesus can make the dying couch
Feel soft as downy pillows are,
While on his breast I lean my head,
And breathe my life out sweetly there."

Once she wondered how this could be—but had ceased to wonder—said it was owing to the tranquilized and peaceful state of the mind. She was now fast approaching the shore, but seemed to tarry for a moment, to reflect on the beauties of the "better land." She was only waiting to join the rapturous songs of the harping choirs, who were sounding heaven's music down her ears, as the celestial mansion was heaving in view. A heavenly glow appeared to settle on her countenance, as though she had caught a glimpse of the golden palace which was awaiting her happy soul. Before I left her, she had gathered her family around her bed; the scene was affecting; the partner of her youth shedding tears on her brow already moistened by death's clammy sweat; her only surviving sister, bathed in tears at her side; her five dear little ones weeping around her: with great composure did she talk with them of her prospects of heaven, and exhort them to strive to meet her there. She complained of having been too backward in bearing the cross, and said to her husband, "Oh! R——d, don't go round the cross." She willingly resigned her children into the hands of their "Great Provider." She then requested me to meet her in glory; I made the promise: she exclaimed, "Oh! I believe we shall meet there." She told me to be a faithful ambassador for Christ, and then requested me to preach her funeral sermon. When I was about to leave her, she took me by the hand for the last time, and with a heavenly calmness, such as a dying child of God could possess, repeated the well-known lines of the poet:

"Now here, see I seem not here my hand—
To meet you in that heavenly land.
And wave the sail of parting me."

She then bade me good bye! The next time she uttered words who stood by her dying. "What is this that steals upon my frame?" But their feelings were too much overcome to sing. As her voice was being hushed beneath the cold waves of the Jordan of death, she was heard to say, "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Her spirit had left its tenement of clay, and was now basking in the sunbeams of eternal day.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.
THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor ever had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.
Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1858, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lassack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

Farewell of the Birds.

To Jenny at play in the garden,
To Bessy and Maud on the hill,
To all the sweet children that frolic
So gaily by brooklet and rill.
We are coming to-day.
But, hush! Never tell!
We are coming, I say.

You welcomed us early in Spring,
With laughter and shouting so sweet;
To you our childhood our music we bring,
You scatter your crumbs at our feet.
You love us, we know,
Now listen, 'tis true;
We're sorry to sing
This farewell to you.

We've led you full many a race
O'er hillside and valley and dell;
We've beckoned you on to the forest,
And shown you where wild flowers dwell;
We've twittered and sung
Now songs every day,
We'll give a grand chorus
E'er flying away.

Where berries are ripest and sweetest,
Whose grass is their rich perfume distill
We enticed you by flutter and music,
We showed you our nest,
In hedriest nook;
We trusted your honor
To take but a look.

But the berries are gone from the roadside;
The flowers hold the dew drops no more;
The grapes from the vine have been gathered;
And, children our play-time is o'er.
Good-bye, then, to Bessie,
To Clara, and May,
To all who are kind
To the birds at their play.

We go where the days are all sunny,
The brook and so tender and blaud,
Where flowers and fruits never fail,
In a far-away, dreamy southland.
But we love you as well,
Now list while we sing:
We are sure to fly back
At the coming of Spring.

Yes, in the spring time again
We'll build near your homes in the tree;
We hope that each laughing-eyed urchin
And maiden will be there to see.
But now we must go;
Oh, pray, do not cry,
As upward and onward
We warble, Good-bye.

Lost Close by Home.

More than one parent has wept at the description of the finding of the remains of three lost children; the older ones were stripped to cover the little ones, who were partly concealed with leaves.

The saddest part of the story is that they perished near their home, not far from it, where the anxious searcher ceased his efforts. That thought will ever be the bitter drop in this cup of sorrow to all who knew and loved them.

But, ah, a sadder tale has reached my ears, of a boy, nurtured in prayer, taught of Jesus' love from infancy, never absent from church and Sabbath-school, with a memory stored with the words of eternal life, turning his feet gladly toward heaven and rejoicing his pious parents with the hope that their labors were crowned with success. This boy so near heaven "almost a christian," has wandered away in the wilderness of sin, and his father's voice and mother's entreaties seem to re-echo unheard, unheeded.

He has grown, as he says, "too big for Sabbath-School," "too busy," to present himself at family worship morning and evening, "too tired," after working all the week at his trade, or behind the counter, to rise in the morning and go with the family to church. He is too independent to be told what to do with his earnings, or how to spend his evenings. He has found out that his father is too strict when he forbade him to go to the theatre, to play cards, to read low novels. Satan has him in his power, leading him away from sweet home influences to the wilds and fastnesses of sin.

Poor lost boy! While the first excitement of new companions, new pleasures, continues, while he conceals his first steps in dissipation from his employer, and finds his sad habits are not hurting his pocket, or turning his father and mother against him, he goes on. All seems bright as day and a rot rn to old correct habits, if necessary, would be very easy. He fears nothing, and his brave young nature carries him on over the brambles and rocks lying in the road that leads to death.

By-and-by the parents die, the home breaks up, his employer becomes tired of his faithlessness, and he is lost. It is an easy step that leads him to gambling, to cheat in order to obtain means of living in sin, and in a fatal moment "Satan enters into him," and he signs a name, not his own, and his carried to a prison cell, with reputation gone for life. He has sunk from the highest, lost spot on earth, the bosom of a pious family, to the lowest place out of hell.

"Lost close by home." all will say who know his history. The wandering little ones, we trust, went to Jesus, and were found, not lost. This child of prayer, unless he turn and cry to the Saviour of sinners, for pardon, can never meet his father and mother, brothers and sisters again. His lost privileges enhance his woe, and through eternity will give him infinite anguish.

Blessed be God, while there is life there is hope. Our Lord is infinitely forgiving and loving, and the lost boy may rise from the dungeon to glory.

Tempted boys, I warn you not to try a like experiment. If you begin to feel "too big" for Sabbath-school, and the Christian home grows dull, and its pure enjoyments of fireside chat and harmless games cannot satisfy; if you would not like to have your mother see the book you are reading in secret, or that other one hidden in your trunk, lent you by the boy next door, you are beginning to wander: and unless a stronger hand than that of father, mother or Sabbath-school teacher find you, you are lost. Will it not ever be a thought of anguish that you were "lost close by home"
—Am. Messenger.

WATER-PROOF BOOT-SOLES.—If hot tar is applied to boot-soles, it will make them water-proof. Let it be as hot as the leather will bear without injury, applied with a swab, and drying at the fire. The operation may be repeated two or three times during the winter if necessary. It makes the surface of the leather quite hard, so that it wears longer, as well as keeps the water out.

Penitentiary Murder.

CONFESSION OF DANIEL MANN.

The following confession is made public at the express desire of the condemned prisoner, Daniel Mann, found guilty of the murder of Henry Trail, at the Penitentiary quarries. It is given in his own words:—

CONFESSION—THE PLOT.

"I cannot say for certain whether I first proposed to escape or whether Smith did. Smith's wife came to the quarry when we were at work in March last. Smith told me his wife would bring us citizen's clothes, so that we could easier effect our escape, and from that time Smith tried to get working at the lime kiln, and succeeded in doing so in April. When the Deputy Warden asked Smith who would be a good hand to work at the kiln with him, he replied "Daniel Mann." The Deputy Warden then called me out of the ranks and told me that I was to go to the kiln with Smith under guard Driscoll. I went accordingly. We burnt one kiln in April; another in May, I think Smith's wife never brought the clothes as she promised, so Smith wrote a letter to his wife, and sent it through the convict Lindsay's wife to the Post Office, pressing her to bring the clothes. This letter I don't think she ever got. Then told us he could get us the clothes; that his wife would bring the clothes and leave them together with a revolver under the shanty at the quarry. I paid convict Lindsay for the clothes. (Lindsay was the first and most important witness in the case, as to conspiracy.) He kept putting us off from day to day, until a kiln was set fire to again Lindsay asked guard Holland several times to remove another convict by the name of Mosquin, and get him his place. This was done so as to enable Lindsay to escape with us. He failed in getting Mosquin removed. Lindsay told us that that was the last kiln we were to burn, and if we did not make our escape at that kiln it would be our last chance, as I was to be removed. Lindsay knew it was our intention to strike the guard in order to escape. He kept urging us on to make our escape. I cannot imagine his object for doing this. He said he and would walk at the head of the gang, coming and going from the quarry to the Penitentiary. They would walk very slow so as to give us all the time possible to effect our escape. As soon as the gang left us we put on a fire under the kiln. Smith then said to me "your heart fails you." I made no answer but went and got three pieces of sticks and came back to him and asked him to who should strike [illegible] You can do it better than I can." I had three small bones in my pocket which were made to put on a watch guard. I pulled them out of my pocket and was looking at them, Smith came up to me and took them out of my hand. He then went over to the

CONVICT LINDSAY

PENNEGAN

DRAW CUTS

GUARD,

who was sitting in the door of the lime-house on a wheelbarrow, and [illegible] in front of him, showing [illegible] was done in order to draw [illegible] me. I then passed into the [illegible] and went where

THE STICK

laid, picked it up and set it against the door, for I felt as if I could not strike the guard. Smith looked up at me as much as to say "why don't you strike him." I then walked back to the stick, took it in my hand, put it on my shoulder and walked to the side of the guard, as I got beside him I on the back of the neck. All the while Smith was sitting in front of him, drawing his attention. As I was about to strike the guard moved, having seen me, but my motion was too quick. He then fell forward and exclaimed

STRUCK HIM

"OH MY GOD."

I dropped the stick at this moment. He gave himself a throw back and fell into my arms. I carried him into the lime house. Smith then took ropes and commenced tying him. The guard was lying on his back at the time. Smith was trying to bring the guard's hands in front of him to tie them. He could not succeed in getting his hands together. I then took hold of the guard and helped Smith to turn him on his face. We then tied his hands behind his back. Smith tied his feet. He then took his handkerchief out of his pocket and wiped the guard's nose and mouth which were bleeding. I then took Smith's coat doubled it up and laid it under the guard's head. [illegible] sections. He had his coat off. I took the coat and put it on. I took the watch from his pocket, and the revolver from the holster. I took the rifle and threw it into the lime. Smith fixed some ropes the day previous for the purpose of tying the guard. He tried them and said "They would hold him,"—then put them into his pocket. We went into a little shanty near the lime house and took off our outside clothes. Smith slipped out of the shanty and looked towards the prison, and said he saw Barney McConquile coming with a load of wood, and that we had better go. He then around the lime house and struck for the Crystal Palace. I followed him. I was always opposed to going away unless I got citizen's clothes. Smith said he had relations living close by and he could get them [illegible]

STARTED

NEVER INTENDED TO KILL

the guard, nor did I know he was dead till I went into a house to get dinner a week after our escape, and heard the owner [illegible] a guard had been killed. All the statements I have made are true in every particular. I could not make a false statement, knowing that in a short time I have to stand before my Creator, and answer for all my sins. I have no desire to live any longer in this world, and now that my peace is made with God I am anxious to leave it. There is nothing in this wicked world that I have desire to live for; it is only the thoughts of the ignominious death I will have to suffer that troubles me. I hold no malice or spite against any one, and hope to meet all in heaven, if it be the will of God. I hope my case will be a warning to all that read it, as mine has been a sad lot. I ask all who read this confession of mine to offer up their prayers to God for me, and that God may hear their prayers in behalf of my poor soul! I make the above statement of my free will and accord, to Mr. [illegible], without solicitation. It was read over to me as I wish it made public.

"DANIEL MANN."

Kingston, Nov. 15th, 1870.

THE CONDEMNED PRISONER DEACON.

A CONFESSION.

The prisoner Deacon has been visited frequently in gaol by the Rev. Mr. Hulin, [illegible] of the Episcopal Methodist Church, whom he request to visit him, and give [illegible] the benefit of his religious counsel. He is much re-signed, and his spiritual adviser believes that the work of sincere repentence is proceeding. He is now quiet and more rational in his conduct, an evidence it is thought of sincere contrition. Yesterday the unfortunate man, freely and voluntarily and without solicitation, unfolded the mystery which hung over the case owing to his extraordinary protestations of innocence at the time of his sentence. He made a frank and full confession of his guilt in the poisoning to the Rev. Mr. Hulin. It does not appear clear that he made up his mind fully to the poisoning when he bought the strychnine, and to his possession of that dire instrument of death, and the temptation it offered it the accomplishment of an awful desire, there remains to be attributed in a great measure the commission of the crime, and the awful fate that impends over the unhappy man Deacon. It is much to be lamented that his statement involves another person in guilt—one who has not altogether been held blameless in the affair It is declared by Deacon that they had a tacit understanding together and that the idea of poisoning was not his conception solely.

THE PRISONERS.

The condemned prisoners Deacon and Mann have been confined in separate wards at the gaol, and are removed to seperate cells at night for safety. They are carefully guarded, and are visited by their clerical advisers very regularly, showing themselves grateful for their attentions. The Rev. H. E. Bland attends Mann, and the Rev. Mr. Hulin visits Deacon. Mann does not desire a reprieve, and would sooner suffer the extreme penalty of the law than allow himself to be taken back to the Penitentiary for life. They both view their certain fate calmly; Mann has asked to be buried in Catarsqui Cemeterey, and deacon has begged of his clergyman to take charge of his body after execution. The sheriff has discretionary powers as to admitting persons to gaol to visit the prisoners, and exercises it rigorously and properly too, we are disposed to think, even to the exclusion of the reporters of the press. How the statements we have obtained were procured is we y evident from the manner in which they are presented.—Whig.

A Modern Wedding.

Every possible thing was done to reflect lustre on the occasion. There were eight bridesmaids, and every one of them fair as the moon; and eight groomsmen, with white satin ribbons and white rose-buds in their button holes; and there was a bishop, assisted by a [illegible] and [illegible] marriage-bell of cute-roses and lilies, of enormous size, swinging over the heads of the pair at the alter; and there were voluntaries on the organ, and chanting, and what not, all solemn and impressive as possible. In the midst of all this, the hair Lillie promised, "forsaking all others, to keep only unto him, as long as they both should live,"—to love, honor, and obey, until death did them part." During the [illegible] scene, Lillie kept [illegible] presence of mind and was perfectly aware of what she was about; so that a very fresh, original, and crisp style of trimming, that had been invented in Paris specially for her wedding toilet, received no detriment from this least unguarded movement. We must regret that it is contrary to our literary principles to write hail, or one-third, in French; because the wedding dress, by far the most important object on this occasion, and certainly the one that most engrossed the thoughts of the bride, was one entirely indescribable in English. Just as there is no word in the Hottentot vocabulary for "holiness," or "pretty," so there are no words in our savage English to describe a lady's dress; and therefore, our fair friends must be recommended, on this point, to exercise their imagination in connection with the study of the finest French plates, and they may get some idea of Lillie with her wedding robe and train. Then there was the wedding banquet, where everybody at quantities of the most fashionable, indigestible horrors with praiseworthy courage and enthusiasm; for what is to become of "pate de fois gras" if we don't eat it? What is to become of us if we do, is entirely a secondary question. On the whole, there was not one jot or title of the most exorbitant requirements of fashion that was not fulfilled on this occasion. The house was a crush of wilting flowers, and smelt of tuberoses enough to give one a vertigo for a month. A band of musicians brayed and clashed every minute of the time; and a jam of people, in elegeant dresses, shrieked to each [illegible] the din. [illegible] several of Lillie's former admirers got tipsy in the supper-room. In short, nothing could be finer; and it was agreed, on all hands, that it was "stunning." Accounts of it and of all the brides dresses, presents, and even wardrobe, went into the daily papers; and thus was the charming Lillie Ellis made into Mrs. John Seymour—Mrs. Stowe in Old and New for October.

The Author of "Sweet Home."

As I sit in my garret here in Washington watching the courage of great men, and the destiny of party, I meet often with strange contradictions in this eventful life. The most remarkable was that of John Howard Payne, author of "Sweet Home." I knew him personally. He occupied the room me for some time, and his conversation was so captivating that I often spent whole days in his apartments. He was an applicant for office at the time—Consul at Tunis—from which he had been removed.

What a sad thing it was to see the poet subjected to all the humiliations of office seeking. Of an evening we would walk along the street. Once in a while we would see some family circle so happy, and forming so beautiful a group that he would stop, and then pass silently on.

On such occasions he would give a history of his wanderings, his trials, and all the cares incident to his sensitive nature and poverty. "How often," said he, once, "have I been in the heart of Paris, Berlin, and London, or some other city, and heard persons singing, or the hand organ playing 'Sweet home,' without a shilling to buy the next meal, or a place to lay my head. Yet I have been a wanderer from boyhood. My country has turned me ruthlessly from office; and in old age I have to submit to humiliation for bread."

Thus he would complain of his hapless lot. His only wish was to die in a foreign land, to be buried by strangers, and sleep in obscurity.

I met him one day looking unusually sad. "Have you got your consulate?" said I.

"Yes, and I leave in a week for Tunis; I shall never return."

The last expression was not political faith. Far from it. Poor Payne! his wish was realized; he died at Tunis. Whether his remains were brought to this country I know not.

On Monday last a little boy six years old, a son of David Morrison, of Bernston Corner, became choked while eating a dough-nut, and died almost instantly.

A Student of Divinity.

A FOREIGN LUTCHEAN.

A Wisconsin secular paper contains the following good story:

One who does not believe in immersion for baptism was holding a protracted meeting, and one night preached on the subject of baptism. In the course of his remarks he said, some believe it necessary to go down into the water and come out of the water to be baptised. But this he claimed to be a fancy, for the propsition "into" of the Scriptures should be rendered differently, as it does not mean into at all times.

"Moses," he said, we are told, went up into the mountain, and the Saviour was taken into a high mountain, etc. Now we do not suppose that either went into the mountain, but upon it. So with going down into the water, it means going down close by or near to the water, and being baptised in the ordinary way by sprinkling. He carried this idea out fully, and in due season and style closed his discourse, when an invitation was given to any one who felt disposed to rise and express their thoughts. Quite a number of the brethern arose and said that they were glad that they had been present on this occasion; that they were well pleased with the sound sermon they had just heard and felt their souls greatly blessed. Finally a corpulent gentleman of Teutonic extraction, a stranger to all, arose and broke a solemn silence, that was almost painful, as follows:—

"Mister Breecher, I ish so glad I vash here to-nights, for I has had expained to my mint some things I never could belief before. We rest, Mr. Breecher, that Taniel was cast into ten of lions, and came out alife. Now, I nefer could believe dat, for de wilt beasts would shust eat him up right off; but now it ish very clear to my mint. He vash shust close by or near to, and did not get into de ten at all. O, I vash so glad I was here to-night! Again, we rest dat Hebrew children vas cast into de firish furnace, and dat, sir, alwish lookit too, for they would have peen purnt up: put it ish all plain to my mint now, for they were shust cast close py or near to the firish furnace, O, I vash so glat I vash here to-night! And then, Mr. Breecher, it ish said that Jonah was cast into de sea and into de whale h polley. Now, I never could belief that. Italwaish seemed to me to be a peg feesh story, put it is all plain to my mint now, he vash not taken into de whale's pelly at all, but shust shumped onto his pack and rade ashore. O, I vash so glat I vash here to-night! And now, Mr. Breachor, if you will shust exblain two more hardnuges of Scriptures I shall pe, O, happy that I vash here to-night. One of them is vere it aish de wicked shall pe cast into a lake dat purns with fire and brimsthone alwaish. O, Mister Breacher, shall I pe cast into dat lake if I am wicked or shust close by or near to it, shust near enough to pe comfortable? O! I hopes you tell me I shall be cast shust py a good way off, and I will be so glat as I vas here to-night. The other bashage is that which aish, pleased are they who do these commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city. O, tell me I shall gets into the city and not shust close by or near to, shust near enough to see what I have lost, and I shall pe so glat I vas here to-night!

He sat down with the impression made on many minds present, that it would do says.

The Fate of the Apostles.

All the apostles were insulted by the enemies of their master. They were cursed to seal their doctrines with their blood and nobly did they bear the trial. Schmacher says:

St. Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with a sword, at a distant city of Ethiopia.

St. Mark expired at Alexandria, having been cruely dragged through streets of that city.

St. Luke was hanged upon an olive in the classic land of Greece.

St. John was put in a caldron of boiling oil, but he escaped death in a miraculous manner, and was afterward branded to Patmos.

St. Peter was crucified at Rome, with his head downward.

St. James the Greater was beheaded at Jerusalem.

St. James the Less was thrown from a lofty pinnacle of the temple, and then beaten to death with a fuller's club.

St. Bartholomew was flayed alive.

St. Andrew was bound to a cross, whence he preached to his persecutors until he died.

St. Thomas was run through the body with a lance at Coromandel, in the East-Indies.

St. Jude was shot to death with arrows.

St. Matthias was first stoned and then beheaded.

St. Barnabas of the Gentiles was stoned to death by the Jews at Salonica.

St. Paul, after various tortures and persecutions, was at length beheaded at Rome by the Emperor Nero.

Such was the fate of the apostles, according to the traditional statements.

A MODEL ADVERTISEMENT.—The Perth Courier says:—"Many of our older readers will remember the old painter, Zachariah Catley, who in auld lang syne worked at his trade in the little house at the south end of the long Bridge. The advertisement below, copied from the Perth Examiner, the pioneer paper of the Ottawa valley, explains itself, and will give the young people of this generation some insight into the character of the eccentric painter. The paragraph takes us back to time when Perth was hardly out of its teens—40 years ago. We re-publish the notice just as it appears in the Examiner.

"Wanted immediately by the subscriber, a smart lad aged about 14 years, to learn the trade of a painter in all its ramifications. Morality, sobriety, industry and steady habits will be altogether disregarded as qualifications in the candidate, the subscriber possessing these in sufficient abundance to check the most licentious, and give all his outward man a colourable brush. A regular dashing, sprightly, dare-devil of a harum-skarum fellow will meet with good encouragement.

Perth, May 14, 1830. Z. CATLEY."

Coating for Brick Walls.

A good outside coating for rough walls of brick or stone in that need on government light-houses, etc. It is said to be a good water-proof as well as an excellent substitute for paint for outside walls. Take of fresh Rosendale cement three parts, and of clean, fine sand one part; mix with fresh water thoroughly. This gives a gray or granite color, dark or light, according to color of cement. If brick color is desired, add enough Venetian red to the mixture to produce the color. If a very light color is desired, lime may be used with the cement and sand. Care must be taken to have all the ingredients well mixed together. In applying the wash, the wall must be wet with clean fresh water, then follow immediately with the cement wash. This prevents the bricks from absorbing the water from the wash too rapidly, and gives time for the cement to set. The wash must be well stirred during the application—the admixture to be made as thick as can be applied conveniently with a white-wash brush. It is stated that this cement wash will stand for years, that it is admirably suited for brick-work, fences, etc., that it is nearly water-proof, but that it cannot be used to advantage over paint or whitewash.—Artizan.

THE WAR.

The Prussians are still waiting around Paris, to waste the place by hunger rather than the sword. The only means of egress or ingress is by balloons, and these are used as freely as circumstances will permit. As much as $400 is paid for a passage. The Prussians too are said to be preparing to use the same means to pour glycerine on the magazines of the city when King is unwilling to destroy the city, it would appear, from the delay in commencing.

The reverses reported to have taken place at Orleans do not appear to have been serious, as the French were not able to follow up their advantages. This has drawn the Crown Prince from Paris, as he is reported on his way towards the camp of Von Der Tan; and on his arrival fighting is again expected.

The French arms do not achieve victories as they have done heretofore. Yet the people are not afraid but that they will yet succeed in expelling the hated Germans.

RUSSIA.

Reports from this part of the world are rather threatening but not at all so much so as American newspaper correspondents represent. Prince Gortschakoff complains that the treaty effected after the fall of Sebastopol is injurious to Russian interests, and asks to have it reconsidered; and is reported as having a large army ready to take the field if those things are not remedied. Berlin advices represent the Russian army as undisciplined and poorly generated, and not at all prepared to take the field; in fact that it would require two years to fit them for the field.

TURKEY.

Is represented as having 600,000 soldiers trained and equipped, and it is believed that the attitude of Britain, Austria and Italy, will restrain Russia from attacking Turkey at present. The wisest, however, are quite unable to tell what the next despatch may contain.

ITALY.

Is not at all in a position to aid in a foreign war. The Supreme Pontiff is not satisfied with his restricted limits, and the removal of a large force to the Bosphorus or southern Russia might tempt malcontents to undertake some movement against the government. Italy, therefore, is not likely to take part in any probable struggle.

Spain has at last found a King. The Duke of Aosta, an Italian, was chosen by the Cortez, by 191 to 120 votes; and a deputation immediately set out to offer him the kingdom. He is a Catholic, but not at all of the extreme party and is not likely therefore to meet any great opposition from those who may be considered willing to discard religion in a prince. Thus Spain has got a king quietly, while France and Prussia are wallowing in blood for the trifling affair now settled by a vote of the Spanish Cortez. France in the meantime suffers severely for intermeddling in so trifling a matter.

CUBA.

Is lost sight of in the great European struggle. We scarcely hear of events in that unhappy place. Rumors through American papers are to the effect that the Spanish authority is about to be overthrown completely, and an independent power established; but it would be so weak that it would not be felt in the world.

THE UNITED STATES.

Are said to be friendly to the establishment of a native government, instead of a foreign. It does seem strange that a people who spilled so much blood, and spent so much money in quelling the South, and who make such ado about the Alabama, and what she did against them, should attempt to aid or abet the Cubans or any other people in rebellion against established authority.

The Fenians are now scarcely heard of. The winter will compel them to keep close quarters, so that both uncle Sam and his cousins will be able to spend the winter in quiet, and Canadians enjoy their pleasant winter's sleigh-riding, which by the way commenced here yesterday.

What we Give and what we Get.

It is a well known fact that Peterboro' is one of the roughest counties in Ontario. There are immense expanses of poor rocky lands scattered through it, and it is almost impossible to make anything like passable roads through many portions of the county. Hitherto the burden of making the roads has fallen largely on the old townships, and liberal they have been in doing so. Every year considerable grants are made to improve roads and build bridges through the County.

May it not be fairly asked who should build the roads in the back country?

Every year about 360,000 saw logs are cut in this County. The Government dues on these amount to $54,000. There are also dues on square timber, and licences and bonuses all going into the Government chest—not less than $70,000 or $75,000 a year out of the county.

Now what do we get in return?

A few dollars on the Burleigh Road, Monck Road, &c., and not on these except when some sychophant may chance to be agent.

Smith, Douro, Asphodel, Dummer, and Monaghan, have to make roads for the poor settlers that go back, to enable them to get in and out.

This should be protested against. Where so much is realized, and when so much is needed to make the roads, the Government should be compelled to make them. Some one will say how can we compel them?

Send the right kind of men to parliament to plead your cause. Send men who have your interest at heart. Send men who will say to them the land and timber are ours and you must leave it on the land or make roads for the settlers. Just think of having to beg and memorialize and petition to get $500 or $600, once in 5 or 10 years, while $70,000 are carried out of the county to Toronto every year, to enable the Government to purchase support by employing its minions wherever it chooses.

The lands too are unsold and unsettled, people are afraid to venture into the interior. They cannot get out again; yet we have money enough to make gravel roads every where, but we cannot get it.

The Catholics of Peterborough must well remember how John Sandfield starved out; John Carrol, a Catholic, not caring that his children might be hungry and naked. Some may say that he should have supported Sandfield and then all would have been well with him. But let them also think that John Sandfield would serve them all like as he did poor Carroll, if they dare oppose him. John Carling and John Sandfield take not less than $75,000 a year for timber and saw log dues, and it is well known that the whole thing with him is a political game, and that he does not care a cent for former [illegible] in his path now; except for political ends, he pays very little back.

Mr. Carnegie too is following in his wake. He once favored and flattered.—Now in his paper, as Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald showed last week, he delights to insult them. Is it too much to expect that the people of this County should unite to force from the government a full share of the money taken out of it? And as we need not hope for this unless united, nor from the present men. Should we not at least protest against the present management of the Crown Land's and public works departments, and ere long such a course would secure our proper representation, and throw the burden of building roads through government lands and timber limits upon the proper parties.

To the Ratepayers of the County of Peterborough.

We draw your attention to the following notice which we clip from the Review of last week.

NOTICE

"Is hereby given that the Peterborough and Haliburton Railway Company will apply to the Parliament of Ontario, at its next Session, for an Act extending and making proper provisions for the exercise of the powers contained in the Acts incorporating the said Company: for the Legalization of certain By-Laws which may have been passed in aid of the said Railway, for power to construct one or more branches, for reducing the guage of said Railway, for constituting the mayor of Peterborough a permanent director thereof, and for other purposes."

The italics are ours, and to that part of it we object. Suppose that the President of the Railway had succeeded in forcing the County Council to pass his $45,000 By-law, as proposed, and then suppose the above Clause to become an Act of Parliament, who would have to foot the bill? The whole County—not a doubt of it.—The promises of Railway Companies are worthless unless they can be enforced. Companies have no consciences—and if $45,000 had been or should be voted to them, they would delight in compelling the payment of the Sum.

The great desire that Railway Presidents have to handle large sums of money, prove strong temptation to get the money. We all know that those who handle the money too often get the stray dollars for extra labor

Then again, why should the Municipalities pro rata Railway Company to legislate for them? Or why should a Railway Company be in a position to take advantage of the simple errors that a Council may chance to make, or perhaps be induced to make?

At the last session of the County Council, absurd reasoning, wrong interpretation of Acts of Parliament, threats of a Suit in Chancery, and promises to get the Act amended, were all used to induce the Council to pass the $45,000 By-law. What guarantee have the Ratepayers that these may not be attempted again in the smaller Municipalities? And then with these amended powers in the act, the companies would gladly avail itself of the opportunity to compel payment of all sums in aid of their respective railways, no matter how illegally or how irregularly obtained.

Why is it not asked for power for Municipalities to grant bonuses and let the then pass By-laws in accordance wit well understood act of Parliament, not cording to the wishes of railway direct who too often are selfish in getting a l. of money.

All who know the history of Peterb[illegible] Railroads know that the Town had to [illegible] $44,000 to the Port Pope and Peterb[illegible] branch to secure themselves for any [illegible] ount [illegible] some shape in the agreement with the Company gave the Company an advantage that the directors were not slow to avail themselves of.

Are the Townships going to allow themselves to be led into the same pitfall?

The President of the Haliburton or any other Company can so easily represent that the amendments are sought by the people of Peterboro', this makes the whole a local matter, and the Members of the Legislature will then say if Peterboro' asks for these things it is her business, not ours.—Whereas if the Company had to go and ask for an act of general application, its merits and demerits would be fully discussed.

With all these amendments in view, and with all the Railway legislation of the Grand Trunk and Intercolonial before us—with the threats at the last County Council before the people, and the inordinate love of money of Railway Directors staring us in the face—is it too much to ask that the powers sought for, be petitioned against unless where the particular By-law is set forth—and then let the Municipalities concerned, watch their own interests. We believe it will be for the benefit of the ratepayers to vote aid to the Grand Junction and Haliburton Railways. All we seek is that such aid be left with the Councils granting it; and railroad influences kept at a proper distance.

INFORMATION WANTED;—In 1866 tenders were put in for the County printing, and among other things for printing and binding the assessors' and Collectors' rolls. Will some one who knows favour us with the amount for which it was agreed to supply the Rolls per quire. If our memory serves us right they were to be be furnished for 63 cents per quire—but perhaps we are astray. They are charged now at 70 cents. Will some one, who can, say which of these amounts are correct. In the rolls yearly, it would make quite a difference.

Also, will some one inform the public whether the offer included the binding.

Libel Suits.

Mr. McPherson of the Berlin Telegraph, has just escaped damages in a libel suit against him, by a hotel keeper in Brantford, named Fleming. The Telegraph made some comments on the dinner prepared by Mr. Fleming, for the Press Association, and because he would not make an apology, Mr. Fleming sued the proprietor for damages.—But the jury could not agree: each, therefore, would have to pay his own costs.—Poor Mr. Fleming will surely be satisfied now.——

Mr. Balch of the Argus, has also a libel suit, but we have not learned particulars.

The Rev. Mr. Scott of the Casket, a temperance paper, published at Napanee, also had a libel suit at Kingston Assizes; and damages were awarded against him amounting to $10. This case arose out of some remarks commenting on the conduct of a lawyer named Davy, while conducting a case for a tavern-keeper, brought before a magistrate for selling liquor without license. Since the trial, Davy has been taken up for perjury, and had to find heavy bail for his appearance at the proper time.

The great Globe too, had its libel suit: In fact, this is the way now sought to prevent enquiry into public institutions and acts of companies. If a word is said that even appears to wound the dignity of some would-be snob, a writ follows,—and sometimes, vexatious law-suits. Where parties can make out of a transaction to afford the lawyer fifty or sixty dollars, it is done: and woe betide the wight who dares to unravel any little knotty subject. We would not be surprised to hear of libel suits brought by the Coalition or Combination to stifle free discussion, and to prevent investigation into their doings. The government has the money chests at their hand; and John Sandfield could conduct the Crown business at the public expense; it's a wonder he does not try it, all who get offended now-a-days try it. What may happen soon, we know not.

Give Sawney his Due.

The County Council at the June Sessions granted $2,500 for the repairs of the Bobcaygeon and Burleigh roads; $2,000 for the Bobcaygeon road; and $500 for the Burleigh road; and the government like sums; but it would not have granted a cent, unless the County voted the grant first, and handed the money over to Mr. Carling.

Now we find the government and M. P. P's claiming the honor of having secured secured these sums. How they can do so, in the face of the fact, that not a cent would be given unless the County should give first, astonishes many. Mr. Carnegie went up the Burleigh road, of course he did, and the hangers on, looking for favors followed worshipping; and when the work was begun it was under men appointed by Sandfield; and Carling at the bidding of Mr. C., Mr. Carnegie undertook to show where the County money should be spent, not on the Burleigh rocks however, for 5 or 6 men and as many boys, (12 in all), did the first 7 miles in about 3 days, while it is well known that the first 7 miles are worse than all the rest of the road put together. Just think of it, about $30 out of $1000 spent on 7 miles of the worst part of the road, while the greater part was spent near, and through the government lands.—But why should Mr. Carnegie or Mr. Read, get the praise due to the Reeve of Burleigh? He spent days before he succeeded in obtaining the grant from the Council, and when it was granted, it was coupled with the condition that the lumbermen give a like sum.—They refused. Did Mr. Carnegie spend his time running after them to induce them? and when they utterly refused, who induced the Council to withdraw the condition, and to grant the $500 independent of the lumbermen? certainly not Mr. Carnegie, nor Mr. Read, but Dr. Clegg. And, notwithstanding all this, Mr. Carnegie assumes the praise of doing the whole. Of course he is an exceedingly modest man, and does not seek honor without giving an equivalent. But, Dr. Clegg got the $500, and the government spent it, how, we will not now enquire. If we live to see the road in the spring we will report.

The people of the Burleigh road however, should remember this; not a cent would Carling give unless the County would give its money into the Bank of Montreal first, so as to give them the honor of spending it. And if the County Council had refused, there would have been no $1000 for the Burleigh road. Dr. Clegg got the Reeve of the old townships to give in, and succeeded in getting the money. Now the Combination claim the honor, and their followers pocketed the profit. What a liberal government!

But settlers on the Burleigh road give the honor to whom it is due, your Reeve got you the money,—not Mr. Carnegie. And we might add, so with the other grants also; The Reeves did it.

The road has been in a bad state for years, and the late Reeve of Burleigh sought aid from the Combination again and again fruitlessly. At last $500 were granted, where as many thousands were needed.

Messrs. Huston & Campbell cut not less than 50,000 logs every year on that road, besides more than as much more by other parties going eastward. Thus that district supplies John Sandfield with $10,000 a year of dues, out of which $500 are doled out. If it were not for the old townships the road would have overgrown, and the bridges rotted down; so much for their liberality. We draw attention to these facts for the information of the people on the road, and to show what we get into this County in return for the $70,000 taken out of it, yearly.

Mr. Dixon's Lecture at Smith.

Mr. Dixon, Principal of the Peterboro' Grammar School, according to announcement, lectured at No. 4 S. S. Smith, on Friday evening, the 11th inst. Subject, "The Dignity and Importance of Labor." The evening was very fine, and the attendance large and respectable. Mr. W. Wood occupied the chair.

Mr. Dixon, on rising was warmly applauded. He congratulated the Trustees on having, not only, such a spacious and commodious school house,—the best he had seen out of Peterboro—but also, a teacher's residence, which he considered most creditable to their enterprize; and wished the school authorities with him would intimate the example of this school Sec., in providing accommodation for some of their teachers.

After defining labor, Mr. Dixon divided the subject into mental and physical, subdividing each into productive, non-productive, and destructive; exemplifying the whole with suitable illustrations.

In the course of his remarks—which we would like to see print in extenso and widely circulated—but we shall not from memory attempt any thing like a report. Mr. Dixon noticed that he considered labor a blessing, not a curse as too many imagined,—that it was the abuse which made it be looked upon as such, owing doubtless to the customs of ancient times coming down to the present. But with the machinery now existing, he believed, four hours daily labor would be amply sufficient to supply all our wants. It had devolved on America to gave such dignity to labor, as had never been accorded to it in the old world.—Indeed just the contrary had been the case there since the earliest times, [illegible] in proportion as parents would inculcate and impress upon their children the necessity of labor either mental ot physical, so would the world advance towards higher ground than that yet attained.

The song of the Locomotive was recited with excellent taste; and an interesting and instructive lecture of nearly an hours duration, was concluded by reading Charles Mackey's comparison of the past and present, of which we give the concluding stanza:—

Their chivalry brightened the gloom it is true,
And honor and loyalty dwelt with the few:
But small was their light—and of little avail,
Compared with the blaze of our Press and our Rail.

Success to that blaze, may it shine over all,
Till ignorance learn with what grace it may fall
And fly from this world with the sorrow she wrought,
And leave it to Virtue and Freedom and Thought.

A vote of thanks to the lecturer was proposed by Mr. John Bell, and was seconded by Mr Robt. Davison, and carried amidst great aplause. The chairman and he felt much pleased at being made the medium of presenting such a well deserved and hearty vote of thanks as that now tendered to Mr. Dixon, and as this was his first visit here, hoped it would not be the last. Mr. Dixon suitably acknowledged the compliment, when the proceedings terminated [illegible] which all joined.—COM.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—

In your last issue there appears a letter over the signature of Chas. Jas. Blomfield, which calls for a brief reply. Mr B. feels sore at what I said in my letter of the 10th inst. A man always feels sore when caught doing wrong, and the truth is told. Mr. B. virtually, acknowledges all that I said. He says "that the Council was not asked to tax the settlers of the old townships along the Bobcaygeon and Burleigh road to assist the monopoly to which he (Mr. B.) belongs, or any thing else, and the proposal to be taxed was strictly that which would secure an unquestionable benefit from the road. It was certainly never the desire of the company to render the County (as a whole) liable for the bonus." If the above is true why not issue their own debentures at once? Why ask the County to issue their debentures and cause a double shuffle. He further says that Mr. Carnegie offered the Council to obtain further amendment of act at next session, to remove all doubt on this head. True Mr. Carnegie did make such an offer, but it was after he failed in getting the Council to vote for his By-law as it then was. He first told us—it is imperative, you must vote it, you have no alternative, if you refuse I will compel you by a suit in chancery. They held the lash over our heads, and it had the effect on some, it drove my friend Mr. Walton, who is always sound in money Votes, into their ranks for a short time, but after he (Mr. Walton) read their bill more carefully he told them that they had deceived him, but that he would now vote right, which he did. Mr. B. further says that there is nothing in the Peterboro and Haliburton Railway Act to enable the County to compel the clerks of the municipalities to levy a rate for the repayment of the $45,000, is a defect in the bill, which, however, Mr. Carnegie promises to get remedied. It is strange those worthies did not find out this defect in their bill sooner. It was not till after I had taken the legal advice of Mr Dennistoun, of the firm of Dennistoun, Fairbairn and Cassels, that they found but their mistake. Mr. Dennistoun's advice was; if you pass the bill as it is, and issue County Debentures, assuredly the County will have them to pay, as the bill gives you no power to compell those 150 ratepayers to repay the $45,000. I leave the public to judge whether they would ever pay it or not. After I had explained the above to the Council, Mr. B. and Company lowered their tone and Mr. Carnegie asked us to give the bill a second reading, and that he would get the bill amended in Parliament, so as to protect the ratepayers not interested in the road. As soon as he gets that act amended there will be no opposition to his By-law. Mr. B. says that there is a defect in the bill; was the defect intentional or accidental? I leave the public to judge. Mr. B. supposes I misunderstood the Reeve of Harvey. I did not misunderstand the Reeve of Harvey, and I now ask Mr. Wood to say whether I am correct or not. Mr. B. says my motive is a malicious slander. I tell him it is no malicious slander, but the naked truth which he knows. He says that none of the $10,000 was expended on the branch from Minden to Haliburton. I am sorry for that, as he will most likely be back to the Council begging for more money. It was clearly understood by the Council that the money was to be expended on the road from Bobcaygeon to Haliburton. The argument used by the back country Councillors was, vote us the $2,000, it will enable us to get $3,000 more, making in all $10,000, and we won't require any more for eight or ten years. It now turns out that there are eighteen miles to be provided for yet. Mr. B. boasts of having given $200 for the Bobcaygeon road, and that the $1,500 voted for the Burleigh road was not expended within seven or eight miles of his company's townships. He wishes the public to believe that his company derives no benefit from the expenditure. I hold that every dollar expended on the Bobcaygeon and Burleigh roads is a benefit to his company as both roads leads to their lands. He says that his company pays large sums to the County funds. I will now show what his company pays, in the year 1869 the Company paid for all their nine townships, a country rate, in all $630.99, while the Township Otonabee paid $3751.87, so you see that Otonabee pays 5½ times as much as all of Mr. B. nine townships. The fact is Mr. B. pays in by the 100 and gets out by the 1,000, and the old townships pays in by the 1,000 and get back by the 100. While the back townships were were voted $2,500 in June last, Otonabee was voted $400 to build two bridges which were flooded by the dam built by the Board of Works at Hastings. He says that he expended money in the interior of his township. Admitting he does so, its all for the benefit of his company for to enable him to sell their lands. Mr. B. forgets to tell that 10 per cent of the purchase money was to be refunded to the company to be expended for the construction of leading roads through their lands; so after all Mr. B's. boasted generosity it appears that it is the Government pays for the roads, not Mr. B's. company's money. See Commissioner's report of Crown Lands Department, June 1835. Mr. B. says that I objected to the $25,000 bonus for the Haliburton ailway. This is wrong again, as both bonuses go together, and by voting for one we vote for both, which I intend to do. He says that the Grand Junction Railway will chiefly benefit Otonabee; I hold that Belmont, Asphodel, Dummer, Douro, Smith Harvey and Ennismore will be as much if not more benefited by it than Otonabee, as the settlers in the western part of Otonabee can go to Port Hope market and return the same day, and the eastern part can go to Baltimore and Cobourg and return the same day, during the winter season, which the settlers of the other townships cannot do. And as the grain buyers of Peterboro Haliburton, Keene and Allandale, will be able to give the Cobourg and Port Hope prices for grain, it will be a benefit to the above named townships. It would be more generous if Mr. B. would pay the $35,000 out of the proceeds of the sale of his pine trees to the lumbermen. It would only be a small portion out of the large amount which he receives annually. In conclusion I will put Mr. B. on a plan whereby he can raise money without continually begging from the Council. It is said that scotchmen can live any where, even at the North Pole. After Mr. B. gets his pine timbers all sold, and everything valuable, let him send home to Scotland and get out as many hardy Scotchmen as will settle his colony, for it is vain for him to try to settle it as he is now, for surely they will starve, and the Council would likely be asked to vote money to bring them to the front. The Directors of the Provincial Agricultural Society sticks up bills telling people to beware of a certain class of gentlemen prowling about. We will soon have to put up a notice in the council chamber at Peterboro, Brewer of Blomfield and his Haliburton Wooden Railway bill. As to Mr. B. threat about his libel suit, I treat it with the contempt it deserves. It appears to be a standing rule with those dignatories that when any person crosses their path to threaten them with libel and chancery suits Mr. B. forgot to tell who prevented him from address the Council at the last meeting. I must ask him again to name the parties, and to be more moderate with his demands in future, and he will be more likely to succeed. It is only last year since his man Friday, the Reeve of Dysart, brought a motion to the Council asking a sum of money to erect a dam at the mouth of some Lake to improve the navigation, not content with getting us to build the roads he wishes us to eclipse the Board of Works, and do their work.

I am,

Your old servant,

JAMES MILLAR.

Otonabee, Nov. 22nd, 1870

Although no precise date has yet been announced for the marriage of the Princess Louise to Lord Lorne, it is understood that the nuptials will probable be celebrated about the first week of February, at Windsor Castle. It is expected that Parliament will be asked to present the Princess with the same dowery as that granted to the Princess Helena on her marriage to Prince Christina of Schleswig-Holstein—namely £50,000, and an annuity of £8,000.

MASONIC FUNERAL.—Yesterday afternoon Mr. James Johnston, a worthy citizen, highly respected, was buried from his late residence on Chestnut street. The funeral services at the house were conducted by the Rev. C. C. Kimball, of the First Presbyterian church. After the close of the church services the Masonic fraternity took charge of the remains. The friends and family of the deceased took a last, long, lingering look on what was left of all that life once held dear, the coffin lid was closed and the casket borne in the tender hands of brethren of the mystic tie to the hearse which was to bear it to its last long home, the grave. During the march to the the cemetry the rain poured in torrents, but on arrival at the gates the shower subsided. The fraternity at the grave opened ranks, and the coffin, followed by the mourners, passed through. The ceremonies at the grave were entirely Masonic. At the foot of the grave were the weeping family and the friends of the deceased. At the head the W. M and Wardens, and around it were the Masonic brethern of the deceased in the funeral costume of the order. The services were very solemn and impressive, and will be long remembered by those who witnessed them for the first time. The officers were Brother H. C. Rogers, W. M., Brother J. M. Bryant, S. W., Bro. L. S. White, J. W., Bro. B. H. Hubbard, Tyler—Marshal—Bro. Richard M. Moore. Pall Bearers—Bro. Morgan, Luce, Hubbard, Brevellier, Davies and Gutwait.

The deceased was a noble specimen of man, respected by all who knew him, and one whose place in society cannot well be filled. He was a member of Perry Lodge of this city, and leaves a widow and a large family of children. Requiescat in pace.—Erie (Ohio) Republican.

The Price of Grain.

We noticed some time ago the accumulation of vast stores of grain at Odessa and at other points on the Black Sea. We now have reports of the collection at several other places, on the Baltic and elsewhere, of immense magazines of breadstuffs. The theory on which these movements have been made is, that on the cessation of the war a great demand will arise both in France and Germany, and that corresponding will then be realized. So plausible does this seem to the European mind that it is said large amounts of capital have been embarked in the speculation; English dealers, according to the London Press, being especially active participators Now that the end of the war is generally supposed to be at hand, the speculation in breadstuffs on the other side of the Atlantic will receive a great impetus, and probably be attended with no little excitement.

Symptoms of a like nature have begun show themselves here. Ripples in the Western market presage the coming of the breeze, and many who wish to grow rich quickly are trimming their sails with the hope of being wafted to fortune. There is a similar movement in our Eastern cities although it has hardly yet assumed extensive proportions. It is to be hoped that a conservative and prudent course will generally be adopted, and that we shall not be called on to record, in connection with the grain markets, another period of feverish speculation, of reaction, and general loss. There is considerable danger, as we have before suggested, of over-estimating the advantage to American growers of the prospective foreign demand for breadstuffs. It was supposed by many that prices would rise here as one immediate consequence of the Franco Prussian war. Yet as a matter of fact, taking for illustration the second qualities of wheat and corn, the prices are far lower now than on the declaration of hostilities. Thus, at Chicago this grade of wheat on the 18th of July—just before the war was about $1.18 as against 97 cents now; and corn was about 81 cents as against 54 cents now. This is a very good thing for the mass of our people, if not for the speculators for a rise. It certainly does not indicate a general expectation of higher prices.

As having highly important bearing on this matter, the recent development of the railway system in Russia, as well as other European countries, should be taken into consideration. The railroad has opened up and rendered easy of approach vast [illegible] ing territory which were, a short time since, practically inaccessible. Hence, upon any emergency, quantities of Russian wheat and corn can be thrown on the market, which were formerly consumed at home, destroyed, or more probably, before the inviting conveniences were built, not grown at all. We have therefore, to expect, as a consequence of this railroad development, especially in Russia, a formidable rivalry for all American grain, as well as some other agricultural products. No doubt there will still be a demand, and a large one, for our breadstuffs. But we shall not enjoy, in emergencies, practical monopoly. Eastern Russia will hereafter be to Western Europe something like what Iowa, Minnesota, and Illinois are to ourselves; and calculations in which this momentous fact is not duly estimated are very likely to prove delusive. —*N. A HOUSEHOLD REMEDY. No family should be without some efficacious remedy for the cure of affections, so universal prevalent, as coughs colds, sore throat, whooping-cough, and croup,—some remedy, too, which can be relied upon as safe, sure and certain. Dr Wistars Balsam of Wild Cherry combinds this desideratum.

Economy in Health and Physic is as important as in business, and we know of no cheaper, better, or surer means of preserving health and divesting the sick of their infirmities, than through the medium of Dr. Radway's famous medicines. We present a case in point:

Case 1. 336.—Marcus W. Mount, long a sufferer from liver complaints, has paid, he says, at different times, about $200 to physicians, and he thinks as much more for medicines. Is induced to try Radway's Pills, with occasional doses of the Renovating Resolvent, to assist in removing from his system the effects of the mercurial treatment to which he has been subjected. Soon feels the benefit of the change. Takes, in all, five boxes of the Pills and three bottles of the Resolvent, and at the end of the course is "as well as ever he was in his life."

Glance at the account current here below; Bills for medical attendance, $250; outlay for prescriptions, $250.....$500,00
Five boxes of Radways Pills, $2 25; three bottles Resolvent, at $1 each, $3—(disease removed).....4 25
Balance in favor of the REGULATING PILLS and RESOLVENT.....$495 75

R. R. R. Remedies sold by Druggists and Country Merchants. See Dr. Radway's Almanac, 1870.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all Bronchial affections, and obscuring the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where those marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the sale average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

Carelessness.

Many persons neglect their horses, health and condition until it is too late, when at a trifling expense and no trouble the horse might have been saved if attended to in time. To all who may have occasion to use an article of the kind we would confidently recommend Sheridan's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it is without doubt the best preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co is on each package—Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our South-ern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealers for 25 cts per bottle.

FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES will cause the formation of good healthy blood by its action on the Digestive Organs, the Lacteals, the Heart, Lungs, and Nervous System. Person suffering from impure blood, or whose health is giving way, either as ministers or those who study closely, will find in the Syrup a material to build them up, and the tonic to keep them so. DR CLAY.

Price $1 a bottle, or for $5. Sold by apothecaries generally by F. Cundill & Co., wholesale agents, Montreal.

Poverty is no disgrace, but the worst kind of poverty is poverty of blood. Of this malady a great many suffer, for it takes away by degrees the nutritious vital element, Iron. By adding the Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of Iron) and you will feel rich and "as good as any body." Try it.

They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

SHADOWS.

Maiden, at thy chamber window,
Through the twilight shadows peering
Weaving dreams of joy and gladness—
Dreams outlined by shade of sadness,
Of the life thou'rt nearing.

Dost thou, at thy chamber window,
Each shadow's tale divine aright;
Thinkest thou life will be gladness,
All outlined by shade of sadness,
Unclouded all and bright?

Look forth from thy chamber window
At that shadow's quivering form;
Seems it not to writhe in anguish?
Even so, heart-aches languish,
Life's sun oft is hid in storm.

Once more from thy chamber window
Watch that shadow lowly trailing
O'er youth's bright hopes in graveyard laid;
Life has partings, and friendships fade,
To fill the heart with wailing.

Yet from the chamber window,
These shadows all tell not of grief;
Life has its duties and its pleasure—
To duty done still in measure,
To care will bring relief.

So, too, from the chamber window,
Yon shadow stretching to the sky,
Breathes sweet hope of life immortal,
And points the way to Heaven's portal
To faith's discerning eye.

A Good Bedfellow.

An Irishman, about half-seas over, some time since, applied at a country tavern for lodgings. The landlord was busy, and had patronized his own bar most extensively, so he said to the new comer:

'If I give you a light and tell you where the room is, can you find the place?'

'Och, and its myself that can do that most illigantly. Just show me the way, an' I'll find it as easy as the Holy Virgin showers down blessings on the sinful,' rejoiced the Irishman.

The directions were given him and also a candle; he was directed to go to a room on the second floor in the house. By the time he had reached the top of the stairs his light had become extinguished, and he had forgotten in what direction he had to go. Seeing rays of light issuing from a room, the door of which stood slightly ajar he reconnoitered the inside of the room, and found it to contain a bed, in which lay a man, and a stand with a small lighted lamp upon it. Feeling disinclined to make any further search for the room to which he had been directed, he divested himself of his clothing and quietly crept into bed.

He had been in bed but a few moments when a young lady and gentleman entered the room. The Irishman eyed them closely. They seated themselves on chairs in close proximity to each other, and after chatting merrily for a short time, the young man threw his arm around her waist in a very coolly manner, and imprinted a kiss upon her tempting lips. The scene amused the Irishman vastly, and being free from selfishness, he concluded that his companion should be a participant with him in the enjoyment of the scene and nudged him [illegible] put his hand upon him, and found that he was locked in the embrace of death.—Synonymous with this discovery he bounded out of bed, exclaiming:—

'Murder! Murder! Howly saints of biven protect me!'

His bad scarcely touched the floor with his feet before the young lady and gentleman were making rapid strides towards the stairway, terror being depicted on their countenances. They had just reached the top of the stairs when the Irishman came dashing on as though the fiends of Pandemonium were close at his heels, intent on making him their prey, and the whole three went tumbling down the stairs. It is hard to say which of the three reached the foot of the stairs first.

The landlord stood aghast as the Irishman rushed into the barroom, with nothing between him and nudity but a garment vulgarly styled a shirt the hair on his head standing on end his eyeballs ready to leap from their sockets, and he gasping for breath. It was a sight that would make a man laugh who had worn a vinegar face from the day of his birth. Nothing could induce him to seek a bed that night.

When the young lady and gentleman found that it was not the corpse that had so unceremoniously bounded from the bed they returned to the room (they being the watchers for the night) and doubtless commenced their courting at the point where it had been so suddenly broken off.

A Kentucky lawyer on a circuit was asked to dine with the judge. At table, the judge, as was his custom, asked a blessing, and shortly after took from the sideboard a bottle of old Bourbon, of which he asked his friend to partake, partaking freely himself, as is also his custom. After dinner the lawyer said—

"Judge, will you permit me to ask you a question?"

"O certainly," replied the judge; "what is it?"

"I observed," replied the lawyer, "that after you had asked a blessing, you set on the bottle. Now I wish to ask whether you are ashamed to ask a blessing on the liquor, or whether you thought it good enough without it?"

The judge took the case under advisement.

Hints and Queries.

"Useful Manure."—For raspberry plants, it is recommended to mix equal parts of sawdust and stable manure, and place the compound around the roots every Fall before the snow comes the mixture tends not only to keep the roots warm during the Winter, but the sawdust, by partially decomposing, furnished a quantity of potash which is a very requisite food for the growing plants Grape vines may be treated in a similar manner.

"Buttermilk".—Persons who have not been in the habit of drinking buttermilk consider disagreeable because it is slightly acid in consequence of the presence of lactic acid. There is not much nourishment in buttermilk, but the presence of the lactic acid assists the digestion of any food taken with it. The Welsh peasants almost live upon oatcake and buttermilk Invalids suffering from indigestion will do well to drink buttermilk at meal times.

"Grass Land Meadows"—Usually speaking our brethern of the farm think no land is fit for grass, for meadow, or for pasture but the rich low ground. We "solitary and lone," would now enter a disclaimer. Somewhere about 1843 we saw Red Top [Herd's grass] on high upland in Holmes Co., Miss., that stood full three feet high One thing is certain, grass grown on rich upland, thoroughly drained is sweeter, richer in butter, flesh and fat, than that upon the lowland. We believe the difference in value would pay to enrich and subsoil fifteen or eighteen inches deep and thus insures a good crop yearly. Nothing will so certainly lift our country from the "slough of despond" as making good grass lots, good meadows, and to grain fields and raising good cattle, and sheep and hogs.—"Southern Farmer."

RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT

has made the most astonishing cures. So quick, so rapid are the changes like built by magic under the influence of the truly WONDERFUL MEDICINE, that

Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, cured and badly tainted Venereal in its many forms, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Boils in the Stomach, and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, Rapid Destructive Diseases of the Eyes, Sore, Mouths that the worst mercury in the blood, Erysipelas, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Pimples, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all Wasting and Painful Discharges. Night sweats, Loss of Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and a few days will prove to any person using it for any of these forms of disease, its potent power to cure them.

Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent eradicate all known remedial agents in the cure of chronic, Constitutional, Skin and Syphilitic disease, but it is the only positive remedy known to man, Blisters, Ointments, Mercury, Corrosive Sublimate, Arsenic, Iodine, Lead, Opium, Morphine, Strychnine, Alcoholic Stimulants, and all the long list of poisonous agents given in medicine and which, at last, fasten upon the organs and tissues of the human body the inseparable diseases and miseries which they create, can be entirely eradicated from the system by the use of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

Not Only Does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent eradicate all known poisonous agents in the cure of chronic, Constitutional Skin and Syphilitic disease, but it is the only positive remedy known to man, Blisters, Ointments, Mercury, Corrosive Sublimate, Arsenic, Iodine, Lead, Opium, Morphine, Strychnine, Alcoholic Stimulants, and all the long list of poisonous agents given in medicine and which, at last, fasten upon the organs and tissues of the human body the inseparable diseases and miseries which they create, can be entirely eradicated from the system by the use of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

1. That unless the repairs or nutriments are more than the wastes that decomposition and death will supervene, and the powers of life become wasted.

2. That the dying body cannot be sustained on the food of non-nutritious matter, that exhausts the eye to waste to nourish the blood the only means through which the elements are conveyed, and on which the growth of the body depends.

3. That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a want never before possessed by man to excel in increasing that new source of supply in Chemical science, which has been sought for a perfect system of cure, in which

4. Its natural power in assimilating the food in right proportions of distribution, the process of digestion, rhyme and style with the nourishing elements of blood, separating from these liquids all waste matter before they are taken up by the living tissues and are converted into blood. Here we see that its elements or principle that forms the vital powers to life, and its chemical gems in the blood in its active and complete condition, separates every particle of refuse material or element, and of which the [illegible] are formed.

2. That the blood thus prepared, and supplied with these nourishing properties, becomes strong, rich and healthy and holds in solution its proper constituents, through the Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and repairs the wastes of the body with sound and healthy structures. Such is the wonderful power the Sarsaparillian Resolvent exerts on the blood and juices of the system, that no virulent humors or poisons will exist by which deposits are made.

3. The rapidity which the Sarsaparillian enters the circulation, and communicates its curative powers through the Blood, Sweat, Urine, and other fluids, secures the constituent secretions of each respective organ, establishing functional harmony throughout the system; through its action and power over the Secretions, the Liver secretes its natural or proper allotment of bile; the skin sweat; the Kidneys urea; and the Lungs carbon; so that this wonderful medicine not only establishes health in the sick body, but preserves the system in health.

As we have shown the principle on which disease is formed, as well as the only sensible theory of cure, we claim that the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is unlimited, and that every disease that is of a Chronic, Scrofulous or Organic Diathesis, is properly within its special range.

in this Medicine consists in the selection of ingredients containing curative and nourishing properties that supply the blood and general system with such constituents which, in a condition of disease and depravity, is in deficient of, together with the combination of the several ingredients that form the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

In the constituent of Oxygen was exhausted from the atmospheric air, life would become extinct. So, when the blood becomes exhausted of its vital constituents, it deposits its tubercles and diseased humors in the body, and the elements of decay and decomposition supervene. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent is to the blood and general system what Oxygen is to the atmospheric air, it supplies the life principle, and enables the blood to hold in solution all its natural constituents.

DAILY CHANGES

take place for as the Sarsaparillian increases the strength and purity of the blood, all deposits are dissolved, and where there are tubercles formed in the lungs, the further deposits are arrested, and those that are established or forming dissolved, expelled, exhausted or the portion of the diseased lung cleansed, and the consumptive scrofulous subject receives good, if not sound, health.

BLIND LADY CURED.

Gravel, Dyspepsia, Sore Legs, Bleeding from the Lungs, Cured.

Mr. Orsmus Mortimer, a commercial traveller, in Canada West, writes us, under date of April 17, 1865, from Wood-stock:

"The SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT is in great demand, and working wonders. Mr. Hoag, of Strathroy, the merchant, told me of a case where a woman was BLIND, but by the use of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT can now see to read, she would give a certificate, but does not wish to be bothered with people writing. Hundreds call to see her. The cure is regarded as wonderful."

Messrs. Wurtz & Scott, principal druggists here, inform me of a person of note—high social standing who for years was afflicted with DYSPEPSIA and GRAVEL, who has been entirely cured by RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT."

Mr. Hoag reports another case of Chronic Sore Leg that resisted all other advertised medicines, cured by four bottles of SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

Mr. Jonathan Ferguson, of Weldier Station, cured by one bottle of bleeding from the Lungs, Nights sweats, Threatened Consumption.

"In every town I visit I hear of wonderful cures by the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT. For every kind of Humor, sore, Skin Eruption, and all weakening discharges, the people use it, and become cured, as with Pain, Scrofula, White Swelling, Sore Breasts and Eyes, Nose and Mouth, all kinds of Sores, this wonderful remedy acts so powerfully on the blood that all who take it become strong, sound, and healthy. Madoc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a newspaper. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands, and was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees remedy; I believe it will cure you,

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before during and after her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. For Restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use. In every country and among all classes, as this unpretending but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is that it is more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; and we may not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once or twice—that is never fails through a long period of time—in its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither mercury nor any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by any one. The regular cathartic properties of these pills are well known to the medical profession, and they are universally employed by physicians in their practice and in their families wherever they are known. Their sugar coating preserves them in any climate, and renders them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills speedily cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally sufficient.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite and invigorates the system. Hence it often advantageously where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well often finds a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

CAUTION.—All genuine has the name "Peruvian Syrup," (not "Peruvian Bark,") blown in the glass. A 32-page pamphlet sent free. J. P. Dinsmore, Proprietor, 30 Dey St., New York. Sold by all Druggists.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form (Radical Constipation Cured. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's Anti-Costive and Tonic Pills, Sugar-Coated Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it,—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using Hunt's Excina Hair Globe, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry Jacobs' Rheumatic Liquid. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one rival. Beware of Counterfeits.

Select Poetry.

"Going Alone."

With curls to the sunny air tossing,
With light in the merry blue eyes,
With laughter so clearly outringing,
A laugh of delight and surprise;
All friendly assistance disdaining,
And trusting no strength but its own,
The past fears and trials forgotten,
The baby is "going alone!"

What woful mishaps have preceded
This day of rejoicing and pride!
How often the help that he needed
Has carelessly gone from his side!
He has fallen while reaching the sunbeams,
Which just as he grasped them had flown,
And the tears of vexation have followed,
And now he is "going alone."

And through all his life he will study
This lesson again and again;
He will carlessly lean upon shadows,
He will fall and weep over the pain;
The hand whose fond clasp was the surest
Will wildly withdraw from his own,
The sunniest eyes will be clouded,
And he will be walking alone!

He will learn what a stern world we live in
And we may grow cold like the rest;
But just keep a warm, sunny welcome
For those who seem truest and best;
Yet chastened and taught by past sorrow,
And stronger and manlier grown,
Not trusting his all in their keeping,
He learns to walk bravely alone.

And yet not alone, for our Father,
The faltering footsteps will guide,
Through the dark mazes of earth-life,
And "over the rivers" deep tide.
Oh! here is a helper unfailing,
A strength we can perfectly trust,
When all human aid unavailing,
"The dust shall return unto dust."

Choice Literature.

Only Kate.

Mr. Farfield sat in the drawing room of Mr. Haverstone's neat little villa, at Notting Hill, patiently waiting the young lady he had called to see.

He had met Miss Haverstone with her uncle and aunt, at Southend, and as she was a very stylish, and, at the same time, an agreeable young lady, he had become intimate with her. This was the first call he had ventured to make since his return to London, he was wondering how she would receive him. He did not send his card to her, because he wished to surprise her—pleasantly as he hoped.

Be sure and keep out of the way, he heard a sharp voice say, "I should be ashamed out of my wits if any one saw you limping about.

There was no response to that injunction, and, a moment later, Miss Haverstone entered. She was a tall handsome young girl, who seemed borne to command; and yet there was a soft, bewildering light in her brown-black eyes

Miss Haverstone! he said, rising up.

Mr. Fairfield! she exclaimed. Is it possible that it is you? I am so happy to meet you once again!

Their greeting over, they settled down into a quiet little chat; and Mr. Fairfield was very much surprised to find how awfully time had fled when he arose to go. She invited him to call again, and he accepted the invitation, and called freequently.

He was her escort with her aunt to the opera, theatre, balls, and in fact to every place of amusement. In that way several months passed, and he was meditating asking Miss Haverstone to accompany him through life.

One evening he had called rather earlier than usual, and went into the music room. Somebody was playing a quaint little song, and singing in a soft, sweet voice. He had no doubt as to who that somebody must be, so silently stepped over to her side.

Amelia, he said gently.

The figure on the stool turned round suddenly.

Pardon me, I am only Kate? she ejaculated.

Pardon me he returned. I have made a mistake. I was quite sure that it was Miss Haverstone, I was not aware that she had any lady visitors.

I am no visitor, she responded, I am Amelia's lame sister.

Oh! a thousand pardons!

He could say no more. He was wondering why Amelia Haverstone had never spoken about this invalid sister. It could not be that she was indifferent to her! Amelia's heart was too tender for that?

Amelia will be here in a few moments sir, she added, as she took her two little crutches and leaned heavely on them.

Before he could speak, she had left the room, and he was alone.

Miss Haverstone entered. She apologized for keeping him waiting so long, and seemed all sweetness.

I was not aware that you had a sister before, Miss Haverstone, he observed.

No? Did I never mention her to you? she said. I thought I had—And yet I feel so sad when I think of her affliction, that I hate to allude to her at all.

There was a wonderful pathos in her voice, which touched him. He had not misjudged Amelia—it was only the extreme sorrow which she felt that had kept her lips from speaking of Kate. He often went to the house after that; but he never caught a glimpse of the little lame figure, whose mournful song had rung in his ears ever since.

I would like to see your sister, he ventured to observe, one evening—why does she keep herself so secluded?

Because she is so sensitive, was the response I have tried to induce her to come in here; but in vain.

He had to be satisfied with that reply, though he felt a great curiosity to see her. He imagined by the outline of her face, which had been partly defined in the twilight; that she was pretty, of course not so pretty as Amelia.

The next morning he called again. He had some concert tickets, and he would just step in a moment on his way to the city.

You need not announce me, he said to the servant, I hear voices in the breakfast room, I will go there and surprise them.

The maid-servant gave a mysterious smile, and muttered, much good the surprise will do you, if Miss Amelia is hunting as usual.

He did not notice her ominous words but kept on the even tenor of his way.

He put his hand on the door-knob and then he hesitated. He did not wish to enact the part of a listner, but he had caught the mention of his own name, and he had a little pardonable curiosity.

Do you love Mr. Fairfield? he heard a soft voice ask.

I'm glad the witch has asked that question for me, he muttered to himself as he waited impatiently for his Amelia's reply.

Love! she sneered, Who has anything to do with that old tangled notion now? Mr. Fairfield is rich and a man of the world. What more do I require.

But he may require something else, Kate responded warmly. He seemed so good that I do not know how you can help but love him. I would worship him sister.

Indeed! Perhaps you have fallen in love with him yourself? If you have, I wish you could hear a few of the remarks he made about the ridiculous way in which you limped about the room that night! I declare it served you right, though, if you will persist in going where you are forbidden.

Amelia! I am shocked! was her aunt's reply.

But Fairfield waited to hear no more. He had, in fact, already heard too much for Miss Haverstone's future anticipations.

Saved! he muttered. This visit was a special plan of Providence. Say nothing of my call, he continued, addressing the servant, whose ill concealed glee betrayed she knew what was going on in there, and slipped a half-crown into her hand.

You're a gentleman, she ejaculated, and I am glad you have found that creature out. She knocked Miss Kate—the sweet pretty angel!—down stairs when she was mad with rage, and hurt her back. Her aunt wants to take her to Paris, to the doctors, but that vixen wont let them until she's married.

Which will never be, he muttered to himself, if anybody thinks as I do now.

He went Home. He sat down—He meditated. He made up his mind at last. He was a very rich bachelor, he was well off, he had no relatives, he was independent, and he would do as he pleased.

He went over to the Haverstones villa before the usual visiting hour.

Tell Miss Kate that I wish to see her, he said to the servant.

The good-hearted woman laughed outright; she clasped her hands as she carried the message. Miss Kate was dear to her heart.

To see her! Amelia ejaculated. Who can it be! Be sure, Kate, and get out of the parlor before Fairfield comes.

With that injunction ringing in her ears, Kate went into the parlor. Mr. Fairfield rose to meet her.

Mr. Fairfield! she stammered, blushing.

He looked at her. Miss Amelia's beauty dwindled by the comparison he made. This little creature, with her abundance of soft, golden hair, and blue eyes, and wistful face, was far more beautiful than Amelia Haverstone had ever been.

Yes, Miss Kate.

Did you ask for me?

I did. Sit down here beside me I have something to say to you.

She obeyed him silently. She was trembling with mortification. This man had ridiculed her on account of her misfortune, she believed, and now she was doomed to sit beside him.

I know why you shrink from me, he said softly. Very unintentionally, I overheard a little of your family conversation this morning; and was happy to have your sisters true character revealed to me.

Mr. Fairfield, she ejaculated, impossible.

But not impossible—a blessed reality. I find that the shock does not hurt me. I never loved your sister; I was only bewildered by her for a time. But I find I do love somebody else. Can you guess who it is?

She looked up frankly into his face. How should she know? She had never been out in society with Mr. Fairfield, she knew nothing of his preferences.

Shall I tell you?

If you please.

Yourself.

She caught her hand quickly from him, and tears sprung into her beautiful eyes.

This is too cruel a jest, she cried.—If my afflictions have made me appear ridiculous in your eyes, you need not mock me.

You misunderstand me, he said, gently; I mean what I say. I love you too dearly to mock you. I want to marry you and take you to Paris with me, and get you cured.

She hid her face and cried, not tears of sorrow, but rather those of joy. The great, good gift of life, which she had coveted, had come to her at last!

Do your tears mean yes? he asked; and though he obtained no answer he was satisfied.

He left her. She went to her own room and he went home. Miss Amelia waited that afternoon in vain for Mr. Fairfield, and wondered what could have detained him.

He did not call the next morning, and she was feverishly impatient.

When Mr. Haverston returned to dine, he was radient with smiles.

Mr. Fairfield came to see me to-day, he said; and Amelia gave a little pleased start.

Did he propose, uncle? she asked confidently.

Yes. But so differently to what I expected. He asked for Kate's hand, not yours?

Kate's! Impossible!—You've made a mistake!

None whatever. He wants her immediately to take her to France.

And you knew it! Amelia exclaimed, turning to her sister. That was who your visitor was last night, you sly minx! You've been fawning and cringing to him, you—

Amelia, hush! said her uncle, sternly. Last night was only the second time he ever saw poor Kate—He told me the whole circumstance himself. He called here to see you yesterday morning, and overheard you venting your rage upon your aunt and sister. He was disgusted with you, and equally charmed with Kate, in proportion to the contrast between you. Please take warning.

She sprang from the table and ran to her room. The prize she had tried to win was lost

Four weeks later, Kate was married and started for France.

A year later, she came home perfectly restored to health and strength Her sister was single.

Toomuch prosperity makes most men fools.

A head wind—A sneeze.

Josh Billings says he believes in the universal salvation of men, but he wants to pick the men.

A young lady, upon one occasion, requested her lover that he should define love. "Well Sal, said he, "It is to me an inward inexpressibility, and an outward all-overishness."

A man called another an extortioner for sueing him. Why, my friend: replied the man who brought the suit, I did it to oblidge you. To oblige me, indeed! How so? Why to oblige you to pay me.

The only persons who really enjoy bad health are the doctors.

A steerage passenger by the steamship City of Cork, which arrived at New York on Friday, was relieved of $4,000 worth of diamonds by the revenue officals, which he was attempting to smuggle in a tobacco box.

Incidents of the War.

350,000 FRENCH PRISONERS.

The number of French prisoners in the hands of the Germans is now something near 350,000, never before had a nation such figures to show after a three months' war. And the details are equally striking. Among the prisoners are the Emperor, all his marshals who were capable of sitting a horse, 140 generals, and 10,000 officers. The total number of guns captured must be enormous.

THE PEN THAT IS TO SUPERSEDE THE SWORD.

Paris is not yet taken, but the pen which Count Bismarck is to sign the treaty of peace is already prepared. Herr Bissinger, of Pforzheim, has manufactured out of massive gold an imitation of an ordinary stout goosequill. The quill is polished, in order that it may be more conveniently handled, but the feather closely resembles a real quill, every fibre being represented, while the back of the feathers is thickly studded with brilliants, and below them a count's coronet and Bismarck's monogram are engraved. Besides the engraver and maker, two goldsmiths were engaged on it for five weeks. The gold employed is of 18 darats, and that part in which the brilliants are set is of 21 carats.

THE FRENCH CANTINIERE.

A correspondent of the Telegraph says:—"Your cantiniere is usually a fat person in trousers. Her chignon has cost money. But she has got her money's worth. All cantinieres are blonde. They gird themselves in uniform, and wear a képi, a sword bayonet, and a cigarette, when in full dress. On the campagne, these latter equipments are exchanged for a big jack-knife and a short black pipe. Many a time have we admired our favorite actress in coat and trousers. I recollect Miss Fanny Josephs most bewildering symetrical, as Lord Somebody in "Flying Scud." Whether it be the fault of the regimental tailor, or something wrong in the lady's figure, or whether it be the want of the footlights, or the beaming enthusiasm of such afternoon mood, or whatever line causes the cantinieres donned at all remind a man of his admired actress. The lady is a very useful person no doubt, and her accoutrements are all that military experiences pronounces best; but the fact is undeniable that any Prussian soldier might shoot down the regimental housewife in all innocence, and go on his way without disquieting himself.

FRENCH LOSSES.

The Pays give the following estimate of the expenses and losses of France in the present war: "War armaments from 1868 to 1870. £10,000,000; fortications which will have to be rebuilt, £40,000,000; loss of muskets, cannons, and other war materials destroyed or captured £60,000,000, destruction of buildings and fields by both sides, £80,000,000; total or partial ruin of manufacturers and other proprietors, £40,000,000; war indemnity to Germany, £100,000,000; loses in consequence of the influence of all these disasters, £80,000,000—total, £460,000,000.

Longevity in Men and the Lower Animals.

The duration of life of larva in closely allied forms, varies from four years and more to a week. Fleas are said to live as long as nine months. Fish have great tenacity of life. The carp is stated to have reached one hundred and fifty years. A pike which was taken at Halbrun, in Suabia, in 1497, weighing 350lbs, and measuring 19 feet, had a ring attached to it, bearing an inscription which, if genuine, would warrant us in believing the age of the fish to be at least two hundred and sixty seven years. The toad lives thirty-six years, the frog from twelve to sixteen years, and various tortoises must have seen many years if we may judge from the size to which they grow. Parrots and geese reach an age between one hundred and one hundred and twenty years, and falcons and ravens outlive one hundred and fifty years, but the little wrens live only two or three yrs. Of mamma's the whale and the elephant have the longest term of existence, living as they do over one hundred, perhaps to two hundred years. The horse lives twenty-five but sometimes reaches forty years; the sheep and the goat twelve years—Man, there is no reason to doubt, has lived long past the Psalmist's limit of three-score and ten, there being well-authenticated instances of his living over one hundred years; but it is only among highly civilized nations that satisfactory data can be obtained regarding his longevity. A minute investigation of the conditions that conduce to length of life, goes to support the theory that the longevity of animals is influenced by their amount of procreative power, and their ability to sustain wear and tear.—Scientific American.

How to avoid a Bad Husband.

The following rules will teach young ladies how to avoid the catching of a bad husband:

1. Never marry for wealth. A woman's life consisteth not in those things that she possesseth.

2. Never a fop, or one who struts about dandy-like, in kid gloves, cane, and rings on his fingers. Beware! there is a trap.

3. Never marry a niggard or close-fisted, mean, sordid man, who saves every penny, or spends it grudingly. Take care least he stint you to death.

4. Never marry a stranger, or one whose character is not known or tested. Some women jump right into the fire with their eyes wide open.

5. Never marry a drone, or one who drawls and druggles through life, one foot after another and lets things take their chances.

6. Never marry a man who treats his mother or sisters unkindly or indifferently. Such treatment is sure indication of meanness and wickedness.

7. Never on any account marry a gambler, a profane person, one who is in least speaks light of God or religion.—Such a man never can make a good husband.

8. Never marry a sloven, a man who is neglient of person or dress, and is filthy in his habits. The external appearance is an index of the heart.

9. Shun the rake as a snake, a viper, a very demon.

10. Finally, never marry a man who is addicted to the use of ardent spirits.—Depend upon it, you are better off alone than you would be were you tied to a man whose breath is polluted and vitals are being gnawed out by alcohol.—

Just as a goldsmith sets a foil around a sparkling brilliant, even so the Lord has allowed moral and physical evil to come into this world to cause his infinite wisdom, grace, power, and all his other attributes, to be seen by an intellegent universe.—Spurgeon.

How many knots an hour can a parsoil tie?

Family Go...

"William, stop [illegible] noise, I say!—won't you stop? Stop, I tell you, or I'll [illegible] you!

William [illegible] her.

"William, I tell you, shall you going to stop! Stop—I say! If you don't stop I'll [illegible] you, home!

William goes up a fifth, and beats time with his heels.

"I never saw such a child!—he's got temper enough for a whole team: I'm surprised he didn't get from me. Why don't you be still!—What William! Come, come, be still. won't you? Stop, stop, now, I say? Dear, you [illegible] this—don't you see this stick! And there now!" (Cuts the air with a stick.)

William, more furious, kicks very manfully at his mother—grows redder in the face, lets out the last note, and begins to roar, and shake, and twist. The most spiteful manner.

"Come, William! come, dear,—that's a darling—naughty William! come, that's a good boy: don't cry, p-o-o-r little fellow: sant a-b-o-o-o-s-e you, sall oh! Ma's little man, want a piece of sanger? Ma's little by by got cramp; p-o-o-r little sick boy." etc., etc.

William wipes up, and minds, and eats his sugar, and stops.

After Scene—The minister is present, and a very nice talk is going on upon the necessity of governing children. "Too true," says mamma, "some folks still give up to them and it ruins them: and every child should be governed; but then it won't do to carry it too far: if one whips all the time it will break a child's spirit. One ought to mix kindness and firmness together in governing children."

"I think so," said the preacher: firm now first and then kindness.

"Yes sir; that's my practice, exactly."
—Henry Ward Beecher.

Life in Buffalo.

Some days ago a rough in Buffalo, in a quarrel shot and killed his antagonist. He escaped to Canada, where his description being furnished, a Canadian constable near Fort Erie proceeded to make his arrest. A violent struggle ensued, during which the murderer secured his pistol and shot the brave constable. The poor fellow managed to shoot the villan, but unfortunately only in the arm, which did not prevent the man's escape. A Toronto Detective was in town yesterday on the business, and Detective Meneny was telegraphed for last night to go and be on the look out for him. These two Detectives are the only men known in Canada who can identify the murderer. It is to be hoped that they will be successful and bring him to justice. The unfortunate constable is not expected to recover, the wound being a very serious one.

The Price of Intemperance.

Did you ever awake in the night in great terror over some dream? Some fearful danger was just before you, and you cried out in fear for "Mother—mother!" Though there was nothing near to hurt you, yet your terror was just as real as though a lion was in the room.

Now, the imaginary terrors of a man in delirium which drinking causes, may seem very funny to lookers on, who know there is no [illegible], but they are terrible beyond all thought to those who experience them.

A man living in New Haven, Conn., drank so deeply that his realm was for a time overthrown. When his paroxysms came on, he fancied he had seen before him men preparing to flay him alive.—Slowly they began their dreadful work, cutting his flesh with keen little saws, then tearing of his skin in strings, and hanging it on wire before his eyes. He would shriek and cry out as if they were really doing it.—Then he would imagine that his heart was in a cage of wild beasts, who were tearing, growling, and fighting with each other. He would beg his companions to tear them out, and when to gratify him they pretended to do so, a deadly faintness would come over him. Then he would think those about him were throwing sharp hooks at him, trying to fasten them in his flesh. He would wrestle and fight for hours with his unseen foes, until the sweat poured down from him in streams.

Did he pay dear for his cup? Was the little pleasure he got out of them worth all that agony?

I have Lived Seven Years Without Christ.

More than forty years ago, a little girl, seven years of age, stood weeping and trembling at the door of her pastor's study. In kindly accents she was invited in, and encouraged to open her heart, and tell what it was that so distressed her. "Oh, sir," she cried, "I have been a great sinner all my life. I have lived seven years without God and without Christ. Do you think such as I am can be forgiven?" The good minister told her that Jesus died to take away her sins, if she would believe in him, love him, and give him heart; and then marked out a few chapters in the Bible for her to read, and prayed with her. Soon peace and happiness filled her mind. Some time after she told her mother she wanted to join the church. Her mother thought she was too young to profess Christ before men, and said to her, "My dear child, I am afraid that you will go back to the world, and bring disgrace upon the church of Christ." With a bursting heart and many tears she replied, "Cannot the Lord Jesus keep a child in the right way as well as a grown person? He has promised to take the lambs in his arms, and carry them in his bosom. I believe in him with all my heart. I know that I love him, and want to obey him."

Her mother could resist no longer; she gave her consent, and the girl was admitted to the church. She still lives, and has traised up a large family in the fear of God. Several of her children have also become members of the church.

The grandmother of this child was converted to God after she was ninety years old; and though she came to Christ at the eleventh hour, was permitted to work in his service for five years, when she crossed the river of Jordan with praises on her lips.—Child's Paper.

A Mrs. Phillips, of Portsmouth, Ont., recently brought a suit against Willis Calhoun, a liquor dealer in that town, for $250 damages for selling her husband liquor, thus causing him to neglect his business. The suit is brought under the provisions of a law past last winter, holding the retailer responsible for any damages that may be done by the person to whom liquor is sold. The jury gave her a verdict for $175.

When the Ontario Premier was on his missionary tour through the County of Waterloo, three years ago, the Galt Reformer says he favored the canny Grits of Ayr with his majestic presence, and among other rich things said in his speech, "I'll give you good government, cheap government, government without taxes, and what the divil more do you want?" His was another noble utterance. In fact the public addresses of this great statesman are full of similar beautiful expressions.

A drunkard is the annoyance of modesty, the spoil of civility, the destruction of reason, the robber's agent, the alehouse benefactor, his wife's sorrow, children's trouble, his own shame, his neighbor's scoff, a walking swill bowl, the picture of a beast, the monster of a man!

PERSONAL.—We are glad to learn tha Mr. George T. Leonard, of this town, passed a very creditable examination before the Benches at Osgoode Hall lately, and has been duly admitted as an attorney at law, Soliciter, &c.,

Mr. Marshall of the Agricultural Insurance Company is taking risks in this County. He offers inducements to parties Insuring, as he will take farm and isolated villiage, and town residences, at 75 cents per $100 for three years.—Read his advertisement.

LITERARY CLUB.—We are requested to state that the next lecture under the auspices of the Peterborough Literary Club, will be given by the Rev. D. J. McDonnell, in the Good Templar's Hall, on next Thursday Evening, the 8th instant. The Subject will be made known by postors.

The Kingston Whig says; "A woman named Lucas was found dead in her bed, at her husband's house on Bagot Street, on Suuday evening. It is reported that all in the house—the woman, her husband and son, were under the influence of liquor at the time.

"Montreal Witness,"—This is one of the best family papers published in Canada.

"The Canadian Messenger" and "The New Dominion Monthly," are also excellent publications and deserve the continued support of the public.

PHRENOLOGY.—We have received from the publisher the Illustrated Annual of Phrenology and Physology. It consists of 70 papers of neatly printed matter on the important subject of Types of Femalo Beauty, with cuts. Woman as an astronomer. Phrenology, its history, principles, proofs and use, &c.—It is published by S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway, N. Y., from whom all standard works on Phrenology can be obtained.

THE CANADIAN ALMINAC:—Mr. A. B. Kidd has kindly put us in possession of a copy of this excellent Almanac for 1871. It contains 126 pages of useful information, which every one in the Dominion requires to know, and which can scarcely be obtained from any other source. Mr. A. B. Kidd is ready to supply all who call on him.

The only arithmetic authorized to be used in Canadian Schools on and after January 1st, 1871, is Smith & McMurrhy's

The Chief Supt. does not seek the public welfare in thus continually changing our school books. The interest of the Province should not be sacrificed to the interest of authors and publishers.

HEARTH AND HOME [illegible] comes to us conjoined under the management of [illegible] Co. They also publish the American Agriculturist, an excellent paper for farmers, which can be had in clubs at $1 per year. The Hearth & Home is clubbed at 2.25 per year. The publishers are offering extensive premiums to those who may get up clubs.

THE MAPLE LEAF INSURANCE COMPANY:—This is peculiarly a County of Peterboro Institution, which has lately commenced operation. Mr. John Gilmour, well known here is the general agent; and will, no doubt, call upon farmers very soon. As Mr. Gilmour has the entire confidence of the people of this community, we feel satisfied that he will meet with a reasonable share of success.

The Peoples' Journal, published in Toronto, thinks Free Trade should be placed in the opposition platform. The Journal being protectionist is devoted to the building up of Home Manufacturies. It can only be joking, however, in its remarks on Free Trade. The Journal however appears to be well conducted, and whether the reader adopts its views or not, he cannot fail to be enlightened on the subjects of which it treats.

DOMINION BOOT STORE:—Our old friend Larmour, and Mr. C. Sarney, have opened a completely new assortment of boots and shoes, on McKellar and Casselman's old corner. Owing to the late fire and the difficulty of obtaining a shop, they have been somewhat delayed in commencing again: But they are now prepared to suit the wants of customers, and solicit a call.—Read their advertisement.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.—This Society had its Annual Dinner last evening. The dinner was a splendid affair, got up by Monsieur Faucher. There was a full room, excellent speeches and a pleasant time. As this was fully up before the dinner was over, we must defer our report till next week when we will give a full one. The address of Mr. Telford, poet to the society, we are able to give this week, through his great kindness.

The Orillia Packet, in the title of a new paper in that enterprising village. It is very neatly got up, and the first issues are edited with evident ability. It promises to be liberal conservative in politics, and certainly the publishers deserve credit, for declairing there side at one. Although we cannot see eye to eye with them in all things, yet we receive the Packet gladly, and wish Messrs. Hale & Co., the publishers, prosperity.

This beautiful (!) thought appears in a letter of a correspondent of the Irish Canadian.

"Oh! he is a coward having Iriah blood coursing through his heart that don't hate you, cruel England, perfidious, treacherous and uncrupulous—'the Nero of Nations.'"

The writer must be an admirer of British freedom, and certainly takes advantage of it. No other nation would permit its subjects to follow the example of this correspondent.

BURLEIGH ROAD.—Mr. Duncan Anderson, of South Dummer, has received the appointment of Crown Land Agent for the Burleigh Road Settlement. It is needless to tell our readers that Mr. Anderson was a warm supporter of Mr. Read at the last election. It is honorableof Mr. Read, to repay his friends for their trouble. It is good to have a friend at court.—We understand that Mr. Read was so harrassed with applicants without number, that he had to hurry the appointment, so as to receive a little calm before the session commenced, so as to gather his scattered thoughts before rushing to Toronto.

We were wrong in stating that Mr. Peck was census commissioner for the West Riding. His district lies north of the lakes, and on the Bobcaygeon Road in the county of Victoria. We have not yet heard who will be commissioner for the West Riding. We don't know either whether Mr. Perry gets rest and quietness on this matter. Aspirents however, should consider that the members have their speeches to prepare, and data to compile. Cruel office seekers, why don't you think of these things?

Mann who is to be hung for murder of Keeper Trail, has found his pardon, more than he would have found in all likelihood, if he had lived fifty years longer. Such hardened criminals are not beyond the mercy of eternal love, but they are slow to embrace it, and it is strange that the gallows appear more powerful to move the heart than all the other arguments human agencies can use. From the number of professed penitents at the foot of the gallows, and the professions of forgiveness and acceptance at the last moments, often it is to be feared, without due consideration, it may be a question if penitentiary for life would not be preferable to execution, as affording even greater punishment, and longer time for genuine repentence.

DEACON, who was found guilty at the Kingston Assizes, of poisoning his wife, and condemned to be hung, has made a confession acknowledging his guilt. During the trial and even while being addressed by the judge before passing the sentence. Deacon urged his innocence, and called God to witness. In his confession he (Adam like), throws the blame on an unfortunate girl name Vancoughnet, who he would represent deceived him, and he did sin His confession will induce very little sympathy. She did not tempt him to plead his innocence till the last moment, and only when he feared to meet his God with a lie in his right hand, did he acknowledge his guilt. He is not desirous of reprevie, he would rather die now than live; his peace is sure. All christians will pray that it may be, but why not like a man take his own share of the guilt. We have no doubt but that he first made his unholy overtures, whatever may have followed. In every case of such immorality man is the aggressor, without doubt, and too often his cowardly nature, would seek to shift the blame unto the weaker vessel.

The Committee of the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the following donations for November:—

From a friend, two pieces of beef; from Mrs White two pigs; from Mrs. Thompson, a basket of onions; from Mr. Kidd, a secretary's book; from Mrs. White, a quarter of mutton; Mrs. Lang, Monaghan, a bag of carrots, and one bag of turnips; Mrs. Lomaine, soap grease; Mrs. Mack, a quantity of soap grease, and butter for cooking; Mrs. A. Smith, a basket of pork; Mrs. Hay, a parcel of useful pieces; Mrs. Haultain, a bath tub; Mrs. Henderson, a bag of carrots; Mrs. W. H. Tayloy, a parcel of clothing, Mrs. Dunlop, four bags of potatoes.

N. B.—The Committee being in want of a few pillows would feel much obliged for contributions of common feathers.

THE WAR.

There is no acknowledged change in the state of affairs in France. The Prussians are still master of the situation, and are likely to remain so, as no force that can be mustered in a hurry is likely to be strong enough to succeed. The reports of French successes are to be taken with caution, until they are able to raise the siege, or cause serious disaster to the forces that are scattered through the country. Any temporary check of a few hundred Germans can effect nothing. It must be painful for the people to witness their devastated fields, their ruined dwellings, and cities, towns and villages destroyed—their stronghold in the hands of the enemies, and their chief city, the pride of France, surrounded by a powerful and victorious army ready to set it in flames.—Several hundred thousands of her army are prisoners in Germany, and their Emperor also in the hands of those against whom he declared war but a few months ago. These are no pleasant thoughts for the French people, but the cup is not full. It is supposed that Paris cannot hold out and that ere long the city will be in the hands of the Prussians. It would be a pity if the city should be destroyed.

RUSSIA.

Is not so imperious in her demands as at first. It is thought that the question raised about her being unfairly dealt with in the treaty of Paris, will be settled by a Conference of the Powers to be held in London. This would certainly be desirable, and more honorable than rushing madly to the sword.

We must not be too sanguine however. Complications may arise in the unsettled state of Europe that may bring on general confusion, and fearful carnage.

Temperance.

Mr. J. Bonnet Anderson, of London, England, and Evangelist missionary, in connection with the Church of England in London, visited this Town on Tuesday and yesterday. On Tuesday evening, through the kindness of the Rev. J. M. Roger, he delivered a lecture on Temperance, in the Presbyterian Church. The audience was small and looked smaller, because of the size of the building.

Mr. Anderson seems to be a "live" temperance man, and his lecture was well calculated to arouse the indifferent and induce a spirit of enquiry among the the indifferent, tipplers, and moderate drinkers.

The lecturer referred in very touching terms to the scenes that are witnessed in the Metropolis of Britain. The poverty, squalor, vice, misery, degradation and death caused by intemperance, he represented as enough to make even the profane shudder, and he pathetically called on christians, Christian Ministers and others to come forward and stop the mighty torrent of intemperance, that is cursing the countries and sowing the seeds of crime, shame and death, every where. Our space forbids us giving even a synopsis of the Lecture we wish that it was in the hands of the people, perhaps it would arouse them.

At the close Mr. W. Mason, moved, seconded by Mr. Stratton, a vote of thanks to Mr. Anderson for his very able Lecture, which was carried unanimously—when the meeting was dismissed with the Benediction, by the Rev. Mr. Rogers.

Miss Sarah Wigmore, 3rd;

At the close of the examination there was a meeting of the Board, and some discussion in reference to preparing questions for the next examination.

Rev. Mr. Patterson, Moved seconded by Rev. Mr. Young, that the questions for the next examination be prepared by committee, which were named in the resolution.

Mr. Stratton said that he was willing that either Mr. Patterson or Mr. Young should prepare them, but, that he was apposed to dividing the work amongst four or five committees, as it would only increase the chances of the questions getting into the hands of teachers and others before the day of examination.

Mr. Young remarked that at present the questions were entirely in the control of the superintendent, and that the other examiners had no opportunity of seeing them until the morning of the examination, which he though was unfair. He thought copies should be sent to the other members of the Board, a few days before the meeting.

Mr. Stratton still urged that the work should be done by one member, or by one committee of two members, and said he would oppose by every possible means the dividing of the work between four or more committees, where no one would be responsible, and if the papers got publicity no one could be held accountable in any way.

P. Pearce, Esq., remarked that hitherto the business of the board had been done very quietly, and the present system of using the same questions at both boards, necessitated great care in order that the questions should not get into the hands of outsiders. Using one set too, lessened the expenses materially, and he believed the County Council would not concent to increasing the cost of the Boards, where it could be avoided.

Mr. Roxburgh thought the present method worked well enough, and moved in amendment.

That the superintendent be instructed to prepare the questions as at present.

The amendment was carried.

It was then agreed to meet again on the last Thursday and Friday in June, to which time the Board adjourned.

We invite attention to the advertisement of English Insurance Companies in this issue; and to the business of the "Standard" compared with other Companies.—Mr. Alexander Smith, so well known here, is Agent.

We have received some lines on the death of Mrs. Cameron, of Otonabee, which will appear next week.

Another Gold Brick.

Though there is not much ado made about the matter, the gold region of Marmora continues to produce the precious metal in paying quantities. Dr. Williams, whose energy and enterprise are worthy of special commendation, has exhibited to the Toronto Globe a brick of gold from Marmora weighing fifty-seven and a half ounces, or four pounds avoirdupois. This is the largest brick that has yet been cast in the Hastings gold fields, though the doctor expects to produce larger ones before the winter passes over. This brick is the produce of 197½ tons of ore from Lot No. 7 in the 9th Concession of Marmora. Its value (estimated) as $1,255.00, as the Gold is remarkable pure and free from alloy of baser metals. Lot No. 7 is by no means the only place in marmor where the precious metal is known to exist, as numbers of others lot give fully as promising appearances as it has done. As yet, almost the only succesful working in Marmora has been done on this property, though others are progressing toward the point at which succes may be claimed. The working of the ore is the stumbling-block in some cases, but that is a difficulty which as been overcome in one instance, and certainly will be in the rest. The veins in Marmora are large—from 4 ft to 4½ ft. average—and, with such results as have been attained, labour and skill will work out satisfactory returns. The mine from which this brick was taken is 60 ft deep, and the levels have been run 50 ft. with no indications of any failure in the quantity or quality of the ore; in fact, the ore taken lowest down has given decidedly better returns than that nearer the surface. We may add that even with a single battery—five stamps—in operation, the yield of gold is sufficient to pay more than the whole cost of carrying on the operations at this mine.—Intelligencer.

Correspondence.

Mr. Woods' Letter.

To the Edior of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR:—I see in the Review of Nov. 25th, Mr. Woods' letters in reference to a conversation that he and I had about the $45,000 By-Law. He partly denies what he told me, but to refresh his memory I will give him and the public the benefit of the whole conversation. It is as follows:—In our room in Turver's Hotel, the evening after the 45,000 was objected to by the Council, Mr. Woods told me that he had a motion to put before the Council to-morrow, and that he wished me to second it. I asked him the purport of his motion. He said that he wanted the County Council to pass a by-law to issue debentures for $6,000 to build a road through the Township of Harvey, and that he would get the Council of Harvey to issue their debentures for the same amount to repay the County. I told him that I would not second any such motion, and added; why not the Township of Harvey issue its own debentures? He said that he would try the vote in the Council, and requested me not to speak against, and said only for my opposition the $45,000 By-Law would have carried. I asked him if the Council had passed the $45,000 By-law as it was, would the ratepayers of the back country pay it? He said certainly not, that it never was intended that they should, and ever if they were willing, that they were not able, as a large portion of their lands would not sell for the taxes after the pine trees were gone. I next met Mr. Wood the week of the Assizes in Peterboro, and he told me the same story over again. He may twist it into whatever shape he pleases, but the above is correct. I told it to several members of the Council the morning after we had the first conversation. I think that unless he is deaf he must have heard me, as I made no secret of the matter I now tell Mr. Wood, that I will hold no conversation with him unless there is a witness present. The following part of his letter corresponds with what I have said above. He says: I have no doubt that the back country will answer for itself in the payment of its fall share of the bonus. I ask him what he means by "its full share of the bonus." Mr. Woods and the wire pullers told us in the Council that the back country was to pay all; and now he says that they will pay their full share only. Who is to pay the other share? It must be the ratepayers of the old Townships. A ratepayer of Harvey told me in the presence of others, that the party who carried the petition through Harvey for signatures told him that the back country would only have to pay one-ninth part of it, and added; if they had ever supposed that they would have to pay it all, that not one of them would have signed it. I ask Mr. Wood who carried the petition through Harvey? I hope that all Harvey is not composed of such men as he.

I remain your
Obdient servant,
JAMES MILLAR.

Otonabee, Nov. 29th, 1870.

P. S.—There are some Editorial remarks in the "Review" of last week which I will attend to next week.

J. M.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—

As another attack on me from Mr. Millar appears in your last issue, I must again request the same medium for a reply, but I will encroach as little as possible on your valuable space.

Mr. M. asks "why not issue their own debentures at once?" I presume he refers to Township Municipalities. The reply and full explanation is to be found in my last letter. The object sought namely to tax equally all the settlers present and future in areas indicated, could only be accomplished by obtaining a Bonus from a portion of the County Municipality.

The opinion given by Mr. Dennistoun may have justified Mr. Millar in the course he pursued in the County Council, but certainly not in subsequently attempting to defame the characters of those who held a contrary view.

The payment of Debentures might possibly be open to doubt were it dependent on 150 Ratepayers, but apart from these being already a greater number, the taxation would of course fall on future as well as present settlers, and the By-law was properly worded so as to include Townships likely to be rapidly settled by the Railway.

Mr. Millar writes, "Mr. B. says my motive is a malicious slander." I said statement. What W. M's motive may be I cannot undertake to say, as I have never had the remotest desire to injure him, and not being a politician, I do not lay myself open to those ferocious and often libellous attacks so much the fashion in political warfare.

In my last letter I made no boast of what my company expended on roads, but merely stated certain facts to correct an impression that Mr. M. apparently intended to convey, that the County expenditure in roads chiefly benefitted my company; but I did not as Mr. Millar states, wish the public to believe that my company derives no benefit thereby. I take this opportunity of thanking the County Council for arranging as I am informed by Mr. M's letter—that part of the liberal vote of last session for the Bobcaygeon road, is to be expended on the branch from Minden to Haliburton.

The amount returned by Government for roads constructed, is a portion only of what my company has expended thereon. The dam referred to by Mr. M. was built without any expense to the County.

The Township of Otonabee pays more taxes than the Municipality of Dysart, simply because it is well settled and comprises a large number of valuable farms.—On the other hand, the company that Mr. M. holds in such unaccountable detestation pays taxes on a large tract of wild land, for which the County would otherwise receive nothing, and has established a large and flourishing settlement which would have had no existence had lands remained in the hands of the Government.

So far as paying in by the 100 and getting out by the 1000, Mr. Millar knows very well that only a small portion of what we pay the County is returned to us; but as I have made no charge against the Council in this score, and have no desire to do so now, I need not enter into details.

The proposition that I should build a railway out of receipts for timber, a small portion only of outlay, is about as sensible as if I were to suggest that Mr. Millar should build a railway through Otonabee out of the proceeds of his farm.

Mr. M. writes "it appears to be a standing rule with those dignitaries when any person crosses their path to threaten them with libel." I have not even crossed Mr. Millar's path, and yet he endeavors to brand me in public estimation as a party to an "intended swindle." Any measures that I may take, legal or otherwise, to defend myself against so false and malicious a charge, will be perfectly justifiable.

As I never stated that any one prevented my addressing the Council at their last session, but merely that they did not give me an opportunity. I need not answer Mr. M's peremptory question on this point.

In conclusion, I must point out that the letter that roused the fierce wrath of Mr. Millar was in no way directed against him or his Railroad. The few comments that I made on what I cannot but consider an unnecessary opposition to the P. & H. Railway, had no special reference to any Reeve, nor did I for a moment suppose that any one of them would exhibit such a malignant spirit against the back Country, my company or myself, as Mr. Millar has shown in his letter in your paper.

I am, Sir,
Yours, &c.,
CHAS. JAS. BLOMFIELD

The efficacy of Bryne's Pulmonic wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all bronchial affections, and cheering the afflicted, has passed into a proverb in the United States, where these marvellous wafers are known, they keep down all opposition and eclipse all rivalary; the demand for them has steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

A Secret Worth Knowing.

Some town dealers have discovered that by the use of "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Blower Remedy" their horses are so much improved in every respect that they will readily sell for from $25 to $50 each more than they would otherwise, and at cost of not more than $1 each. We consider this a secret worth knowing, and one which all who horses should not fail to profit by; it is unquestionably the best horse medicine ever sold. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co is on each package.—Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Health is Strength.—To prevent or conquer disease is one of the grandest attainments ever aimed at by man; and Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers will so surely cure coughs, colds, tickling in the throat and pulmonary complaints, as way and pestilence will destroy. Severe colds if not attended to sooner or later lead to incurable consumption, and the strength of the strongest soon fails if neglected. The readiest and best means known for the cure of these complaints is "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers", which have been thoroughly tried for the last twenty years, and have never been known to fail. Singers and public speakers will also derive great benefit from the use of them.

Wilson's Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites will not only supply the waste going on in the brain, but will enable the mind to endure a greater tax than before. It will impart vigor and promote clear conceptions to the intellect. It will strengthen the nerves and give power to all the involuntary as well as the voluntary muscles of the body.

Price $1 50 a bottle; 6 for $7 50. Sold by apothecaries and by F. Cundill & Co., wholesale agents Montreal.

Money Makes the Mare go.—This is an old and true saying, and it is equally true that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" will make all pains go from the body, and cures Bowel complaints, Tooth Ache, Head Ache, Sprains, Bruises, &c., sooner than any thing else discovered. Price 25 cents a Bottle.

$ 25 vs. $500 00.

Economy in Health and Physic is as important as in business, and we know of no cheaper, better, or surer means of preserving health and divesting the sick of their infirmities, than through the medium of Dr. Radway's famous medicines. We present a case in point:

Case 1, 236.—Marcus W. Mount, long a sufferer from liver complaints, has paid, he says, at different times, about $250 to physicians, and he thinks as much more for medicines. Is induced to try Radway's Pills, with occasional doses of the Renovating Resolvent, to assist in removing from his system the effects of the mercurial treatment to which he has been subjected. Soon feels the benefit of the change Takes, in all, five boxes of the Pills and three bottles of the Resolvent, and at the end of the course is "as well as ever he was in his life."

Glance at the account current here below; Pills for medical attendance, $250; outlay for prescriptions, $250.....$500,00
Five boxes of Radways Pills, $2 25; three bottles Resolvent, at $1 each, $3—(disease removed).....4 25

Carelessness.

Many persons neglect their horses, health and condition until it is too late, when at a trifling expense and no trouble the horse might have been saved if attended to in time. To all who may have occasion to use an article of the kind we would confidently recommend "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it is without doubt the best preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealers for 25 cts per bottle.

will as use the formation of good healthy blood by its action on the Digestive Organs, the Lacteals, the Heart, Lungs, and Nervous System. "Person suffering from impure blood, or whose health is giving way, either as ministers or those who study closely, will find in the Syrup the material to build them up, and the tonic to keep them there." DR. CLAY.

Poverty is Bad, but too worst kind of poverty is poverty of the blood; this makes a man "poor indeed," for it takes away his strength, courage, and energy; but enrich the blood with its vital element, Iron by taking the Peruvian Syrup (a protoide of Iron) and you will feel rich and "as good as any body." That Mustache.

Oh, barber, spare that young mustache!
Touch not a single hair,
Your razor brush and other trash,
Must not venture there.
At last the bud has bursted out,
By much coaxing taught,
Its fluff young tendrils how they sprout—
Then, barber, touch it not.

Though well laid out and wide the field,
Whence this young mustache shoots,
Tis chilly cuff no more can yield—
O, then guard well its roots;
For should the murderous blade sweep o'er
That cave'd lip's shadowy mist,
The tender plants would bloom no more—
Then, barber, O desist.

Think of the fair young girl whose lip
Was wont so oft to press
That budding mouth, its sweets to sip—
O, think of her distress!
'Tis unfledged manhood's pride and joy,
With sighs and tears 'twas bought;
Let no rude shock it's life destroy—
O, barber, touch it not!

The following admirable feature in the organization of the Prussian army is worthy of note: "All the privates who volunteer for one year have to pass an officers'examination before they can be accepted." A correspondent of the London Church Reviews says that the theological status of the Church of England clergy can be generally classified by their neck-gear. MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me and afterwards, I sought medical advice employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth, and has been on her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Gossip for the Ladies.

There is a new hat feather, as long that it may be twisted round the neck as a boa.

The three favorite shades for the winters evening robes are cerise, Mexican blue and maize.

The last style of ladies' jackets are denominated the 'Frieschutz' and 'La Fille du Regiment.'

Bonnets are all very small, some of them greatly resembling the reversed turbans.

Blue and drab are the popular colors for morning wear. These may be trimmed in any style and variety.

The best favored engagement ring now a days is a solitaire pearl. It is more symbolically pure, and not as unpleasantly conspicuous as the diamond.

The regular Scotch plaid is not as much worn as heretofore. Plaids of but two colors, sometimes broken with a third, are much more popular.

Blue cloth suits, trimmed with ... and finished with brass buttons, ... jaunty affairs for ladies. Even ... may wear them to advantage.

Striped and plaited wool st... will be this winter much more fashionable for boys and girls than plain white hosiery—Ladies will also wear them considerably.—

White fleece-lined piques is a very pretty material for house wear. Those trimmed with pique braid, and worn with bright flannel jackets are both comfortable and desirable.

For children's everyday wear there is nothing more prettier or more service able than the English water-proof. Some of this material is made with stripes or plaid of gold, especially for dress goods.

Velveteen is much less worn than formally. It is still sold occasionally for suits, but the fashionables who last winter choose this material almost to the exclusion of any other, now reject it with disdain.

The latest style for hair is to wear a large bow of colored ribbon on one side of the head with a loop and two long ends.

A 'veteran housekeeper' writes that she scarcity of good servants is largely attributable to the scarcity of good mistresses.

A BEAUTIFUL IDEA.—Away among the Alleghanies there is a spring so small that a single ox, in a summer's day, could drain it dry. It steals its unobstrusive way among the hills, till it spreads out into the beautiful Ohio. Thence it stretches away a thousand miles, leaving on its banks more than a hundred villages and cities and many a cultivated farm, and bearing half a thousand steamboats. Then ... the Mississippi, it stretches ... away some twelve hundred miles till it falls into the emblem of ... It is one of the tributaries of the ... which, obedient only to God, shall roll roar till the angel with one foot on the ... and the other on the land, shall lift up his hand and swear that time shall be no more. So with moral influence. It is a rill—a rivulet—a river—an ocean—an ... oundless and fathomless as eternity.

CHURCH TEMPERANCE IN PHILADELPHIA.—The movement on the subject of Church Temperance Societies has reached important results, and gives promise of extension. It was inaugurated a year or more since in Rev. Dr. Shepherd's church where meetings are held weekly, and more than one thousand subscriptions to a single pledge have already been obtained.—These Societies are gotten up under the auspices of the pastors, and in some cases the official staff of the church. Their membership is not identical with the roll of communicants; it is not even confined to members of the congregation. Last Thursday evening an opening effort was made in Dr. Stryker's church, the pastor taking the lead and the session heartly concuring. The meeting was fair in numbers, the addresses brisk and pointed, and the entire proceedings were of such a character as will bring the same audience back to the next meeting, with enough of their friends to at least double its numbers. Forty names were given in for membership, and on the condition of a vigorous campaign, it is hardly to be doubted that a few weeks will push up the list ten to one. We learn of eight churches in the city that have taken up this work, and several others that have it in contemplation.

REMARKABLE MOUNTAIN OF SALT.—In Paharanagat District, in the southeastern part of the State of Nevada—distant from Austin, estimated at 180 miles—is a remarkable mountain of salt, about 70 miles south of the mines. It is reported to be about five miles in length and 6000 feet in height. The body of salt is of unknown depth. It is chemically pure and crystalline, and does not deliquesce on exposure to the atmosphere. Like rock, it requires blasting from the mines, whence it is taken in large blocks, as is transparent as glass. This could afford an abundant supply to the world, could it be cheaply mined and transported: but it now stands in the wilderness, an object for the admiration of the curious and the inspection of the scientific. It is believed that there is but one other place on the globe where it exists in such a state of purity in workable quantities, and that is at Cracow, Poland. This is but another evidence of the state of her deposits in this interesting portion of the continent.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor ever had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Bradshaw, Henderson, Brown, and several others. Mr. F. W. Lassack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

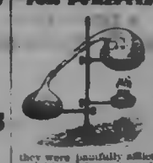
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.



The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, to which we are by nature subject, are counteracted and thus prevented from developing into the grosser forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the necessity of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla in a family, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Tic, Pallet-ay, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the mineral and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ulcerous Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by it—purifying and invigorating effect. Minute directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising from that cause. From the rankling poisons in the blood, this SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections consequent on Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as has this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the nations of men it has risen higher and higher in its estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a preparation against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed we all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, for no one does assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the cases the... are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified in the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

The Foe at the Gate.

O Paris, beleaguered! Proud city!
With ideals of fashion and gold,
My heart yearns toward you in pity,
And yet t'w stern truth must be told.
In this hour of your dire tribulation,
When girdled by bayonets and guns,
Your baptismal regeneration
Must be in the blood of your sons,

You have yielded to maddening pleasures—
The cafe, the dance, and the bowl;
You have violated your genius and treasures
On vices that peril the soul;
You have turned from the thing that was holy,
To sensual glitter and show,
And burnt up your manhood with folly
That leaves you a prey to the foe.

You have poisoned your sons and your daughters
With sins by the nations abhorred;
And it is not the German who slaughters
This day with the terrible sword.
Mid the carnage and thunder-cloud rattle
Of death moves the image of God;
He rides on the wings of the battle:
His hand 'tis that wieldeth the rod.

Oh, Paris, beleaguered! A shaken,
Mad lightning, and tempest, and rain,
The word of the Prophet once spoken,
Is true and ever shall remain—
Who lives by the sword, it is written,
Shall fall by the sword and its lust;
His sceptre and kingdom be smitten,
And wither alike in the dust.

You have bartered your honor for glory,
The best of the nations for years;
Your hands and your wands are gory,
Desiecrased by an ocean of tears.
With Zouaves and veterin legions
Your eagles have traversed the earth,
Defiling its beautiful regions
With bloodshed, destruction and dearth.

You let slip the war-dogs, with clamour
For conquest—for power on the Rhine:
Farewell your invincible glamour!
The triumph is His, and not thine.
The shadowy pageant hath crumbled,
As night flees at the dawn of the day;
So the might of the Cæsars was humbled,
Their empire consigned to decay.

O Paris, beleaguered! Proud city!
With idols of glory and gold,
My heart yearns towards you in pity,
And yet the stern truth must be told:
You have scandalized France with your revels
In your haunts of play, passion, and paint
Rather mimicking antics of devils
Than living the life of a saint.

Had you striven but to grasp the ideal
Of spiritual beauty and truth,
Your chivalrous fame had been real
And strong in perpetual youth!
Had you lived as the heroes and sages,
On the brow of Religion impearled,
Your greatness had grown with the ages,
And covered with blessings the world!

On your knees, O ye city of scorners!
Repent, while you may be forgiven,
And the heartbroken wail of your mourners
Shall rise as a prayer unto Heaven!
And oh, thou great valorous nation!
King-conqueror, be ye ourtime;
Unite with your strength with devotion,
And your name shall go down through all Time.

(From Chambers' Journal.)

Clive and I were engaged to be married, and had been so about three months. We had known each other a great many years; and he often came down to the rectory, till one day, in a very romantic manner, he asked me if I would be his wife; and though there had been none of the sighings and jealousies, and heart burnings we read about, I knew that in my foolish little way I was fond of Clive; and feeling how good and true-hearted, and strong, he was, and feeling how glad I ought to be that he would stoop to such a poor, little, insignificant girl as I was, I looked up into his brave, handsome face, which I could hardly see for tears swimming in my eyes, and then I said, yes, I would; and then for a while I was clasped close to his breast; and it seemed to me there could be no more care or troubles in this world, and all I had to do was to nestle there to be safe from all life-storms to come. He kissed me then, gently and lovingly; and some how I felt very happy—so happy, that when my uncle, who had brought me up from a child, came into the room, I did not flinch hastily away, but I went to him quietly and clung to his arm, while Clive, in his bold, open way, said, "Mr. Grace, Mary has promised to be my wife."

Uncle shook hands with him, warmly, and patted my cheek as he drew me closer to him; and after that, things went on in a very quiet, unexciting way for three months, Clive coming down on Saturday night, and staying till Monday morning, when he returned to his office in the city; and in those days he used to talk quietly about the future; how in years to come we were to be married, and how we were to plan and contrive about our little income, taking a cottage somewhere six or eight miles from town, and living very sparingly, for Clive's salary was anything but high. Our planning though was needless; for one day Clive came down in great haste, and I could see by his face that he had important news to communicate; and so it proved. He had been asked by his employers, a large merchant firm, whether he would like to accept another appointment.

"But is it advantageous?" I asked.

"Yes," he said, in a quiet, strange way, "six hundred a year."

"Six hundred a year, Clive!" I exclaimed; "why we shall be rich."

"Rich? yes," he replied, taking my hand; "but there is a drawback."

"A drawback."

"Yes, I must sign an agreement to serve them for six years certain."

"Well," I said, "but is not that advantageous?"

"Perhaps," he said looking very hard in my eyes as he spoke, "but I have not told you where it is."

"Not abroad, Clive!" I exclaimed, as a sudden pang shot through me.

"Yes, love, abroad—in Java — at a Dutch Station."

"But you cannot accept it, Clive,—six years—you will not leave me?" Then I checked myself, as I thought of my selfishness, and it struck me that I was going to be a stumbling block in his path when fortune was within his grasp.

"Do you wish me to give it up, Mary?" he said.

"Yes—no, no, no, Clive; I am selfish," I exclaimed, "you must not give it up—it would be destroying your future prospects. It seems hard to bear—hard to wait for six years; but we must be patient."

I could say no more, for the tears I had striven to keep back would come; but the next moment he held me sobbing in his arms as he whispered, "Is there no way of getting over the difficulty, darling?"

I looked in his face, for a few moments I did not see what he meant; but the next minute I was clinging to him, weeping silently; and so it fell out that at eighteen I was my dear husband's girlish little wife—so girlish that as we ascended the side of the great ship Batavian, at Gravesend, I saw the sailors whispering together, and I felt my cheeks burn, for I knew they were saying I was such a mere child. For it was like a dream—that hurried wedding, and the hasty preparation for our voyage. My uncle had said that it would be suicidal for Clive to give up so good an appointment; and though he felt it bitterly, he considered with Clive that six years was too long a separation.

"Had it been three," he said, "I would have thought it your duty to wait;" but as it was the the longer period, he yielded easily to Clive's solicitations; and in one short fortnight all was settled—farewells had been said, and the great ship was slowly sailing down the ever-widening river.

It seemed so strange, so wonderful, that it required at times the reassuring touch of Clive's hand to make me realize that we were bidding farewell to the old country But so it was; and though my heart was sorrow was mingled with so much happiness that I fear I did not think enough of his pain.

The days glided by, even as the great ship glided past the shores of the old country, and soon we had seen the last of the great rock point, which they told me was Lizzard, and we were at sea.

Had I been a queen I could not have had more attention paid to me; the captain, mates, even the humblest sailor always had a smile for me; and as we reached, in time, the hot regions, there was always a summons, the best place reserved for poor little me whenever flying fish, or dolphins, or a shark were in sight.

The days grew into weeks, and with almost invariably pleasant weather, the ship sailed on. There seemed no danger, nothing to apprehend; and as I sat with a soft breeze fanning my cheek, all the perils of the sea, of which I had read, seemed so distant and impossible, that I could hardly believe the gentle, rippling waves, and the soft cloud-flecked sky, could be guilty of the cruelties of which we hear.

At last, though, came a cloud, and that cloud seemed to settle upon my husband's brow. I asked him the reason, and he reluctantly told me that it was on account of the vessel.

It was upon one soft tropical evening that I first had re-pause from him; and as he spoke, he drew me closer to him as we leaned over the the side, looking down at the glittering starlight reflected upon the dark bosom of the sea.

"Are you keeping anything from me, Clive?" I said gently, "am I not to share the trouble as well as the happiness of life?"

"Trouble little one," he said—"trouble ought never to come near you."

"But I should not be happy, if I felt that I did not share all, Clive. By keeping me in ignorance you would be inflicting the very trouble from which you screen me."

"Beaten with your own weapon," he said lightly, and then, in under-tone, "I am uneasy, darling about the vessel."

"But why," I said, "what is there to make you uneasy?"

"Look along the deck and tell me what you see."

"What do I see? The man at the steering-wheel, the men at the watch and the four men pumping."

Clive was silent.

"What makes you uneasy then?" I asked after a while.

"Darling," he said, "if you had not asked me, I should not have told you; but I cannot bring myself to seem wanting in confidence. Have you not noticed any change in Captain Webster and Mr. Green?"

"They have seemed a little more cheerful and merry than usual," I said.

"In the cabin—yes; but on deck it has not been so. Mary, darling, I fear there is trouble at hand; those four men pumping look ominous"

"Omnious."

"Yes, love. Three days ago one man was employed pumping; the next day two men were at the work at once, and they were relieved again and again; yesterday four men were working all day till evening; to-day it has commenced at day-break. And orders have, I know, been given that it shall be kept up all night."

"And what does that mean?" I asked, thought I felt that I knew what the answer would be.

"It means, love, that we are a thousand miles from any land, and that the ship has sprung a leak."

I was only a weak girl then, and very young, so that perhaps my emotion may be excused; for I felt a strange catching of my breath, and a sense of dread stealing over me; but I tried hard to master it all, and I don't think my voice shook as I laid my hand on Clive's breast and said: "Dear husband, we are in the hands of the Almighty; let us hope that in our weakness we are magnifying the peril."

He caught my hand in his and held me at arm's length for a few moments, gazing down in my eyes. "And I've been thinking you a timid little girl, Mary!" he at length exclaimed. "God bless you! Yours is indeed a brave little heart!"

We were interrupted by a little display of excitement forward, and in the dim light we could see that the captain and both the mates were there. Orders were hurriedly given and soon there was the clanging noise of another pump hard at work, with the plashing of the water as it streamed down over the side. Lanterns were busily moving about, now on deck, now disappearing below. Then I heard calls for the carpenter, and the captain giving loud orders; and soon there was a great deal of bustle close to the ship's bows; and Clive explained to me that they were drawing a sail under the bottom of the ship so as to try and stop the flood of water, for it was evident the danger was growing greater

All through that long, dark night we staid on deck, listening to the clanking noise of the pumps, and the rippling splash of the water as it ran over the side; but when morning broke, it was evident that the danger was not lessened. The captain looked pale and anxious, and there was a sullen discontented look about the men, who could only with difficulty be prevailed upon to keep to their work of pumping—About midday they broke out in open mutiny, and refused to pump any longer; for the carpenter having been sent below, came up with so bad a report men left their work directly, and, in spite of commands, and even threats, they set their officers at defiance, and began to make preparations to leave the ship.

"Look here Cap'n Webster," said an old bluff-looking sailor, "we've realy enough to obey, only it ain't no good to stop here, with the ship sinking under us. The murder's out now, and what's the good of fighting again' it? She's started a plank, that's what she's done; and all the pumps, and twice as many more, could not keep the water under."

"Tom Jackson," said the Captain, "you are the last man I should have thought would turn against your Captain."

"So I am cap'n—hang me if I ain't," said the man. "It's no good, lads; I'm under orders again; who's coming on my side?"

Three more men came out of the little group and followed the bluff, old sailor to where the captain and the mates were standing in front of us; but the rest of the crew went on stolidly placing water and provisions in a couple of boats, and at last launched them, and were about to push off without a word, when Captain Webster threw them in a compass and gave them directions which way to steer.

Five minutes after they were rowing swiftly away, when, for the first time, Clive spoke. "Is there no chance of saving the vessel, Captain Webster?"

"No, sir," was the reply, "not the slightest. In two hours she will have gone down."

I shivered as I heard these words; but I tried to smile as Clive glanced around at me; and then, for the next hour busy preparations for leaving the vessel were carried on.

The boat left was large and roomy, and upon its being launched, sails, masts and cordage were placed inside, with quite a heavy store of water and provisions, every man working hard; and though they smiled at my efforts, I ran backwards and forwards from the cabin, carrying necessaries for our use.

But at last it was declared to be in readiness, and I was lowered over the side. Clive quickly taking his place with me in the boat; where there was already the four sailors; then came the two mates, and lastly the captain.

"You bear witness, gentlemen," he said, "that I left nothing undone, and that it was not until every effort had failed that I left the ship." He would have said more, but something that caught his eye made him shout to his men to seize their oars, and then altogether they rowed hard away from the ship's side.

At first I did not know why this was done, but I soon saw that it was to avoid the vortex which the sinking vessel would cause; for, before five minutes had elapsed, the great ship began to roll slowly from side to side—and then in spite of myself I uttered a cry as it gave a plunge forward, and seemed to dive down out of sight, leaving us alone on the surface of the great sea.

The night came on and passed slowly away, affecting us all with a deep feeling of awe as we thought of the frail defence we had against death. To us the vast ocean, heaving so slowly and regularly beneath, seemed like the threshold of eternity, and I know that no one slept, for we all sat watching and longing for the morning.

At another time I could have remained rapt with wonder and joy at the glorious sunrise which flooded the whole surface of the sea with orange and gold, but there was the great sense of solitude oppressing me always, while around me were the pale, haggard faces of the men who knew the perilous strait in which we lay. As the morning broke, though, the captain rose up in the bows, and stood looking round in every direction, to try if he could make out where the other boats were, but though he tried again and again he could see nothing; and we felt that we were alone It was not a time for repining, however, and every man set busily to work, arranging such things as we had in the boat; then a little mast was set up and a sail was hoisted, which the soft breeze gently filled, and the boat began to go lightly over the swell. After a short consultation the captain decided to sail for the island of Amsterdam, a tiny spec in mid-ocean; but which might prove to us a haven of refuge till a passing vessel could take us off; for, though at the present time the sea and sky were serene and bright, we did not know how soon a storm might arise to engulph our tiny boat.

One—two—three days we sailed on, and then came a change—a fierce wind from the very direction in which our island lay. First, the sky grew black with clouds, while the sea became white and foaming, the waves each moment curling up more fiercely, till they beat against the sides and splashed over. The boat's course was altered the sail lowered all but a tiny portion, and then the little vessel began to ride swiftly over the waves, now riding over a great hill of water, hanging balanced on a foamy ridge, and then plunging and gliding down into a depth from which it seemed impossible that we could ever rise.—Then came a time when every one except the captain, who at pale intervals steering the boat, began to bale out the water which dashed constantly over the side. Even I would have helped, but every one smiled and tried to make the, part of the boat I was in more comfortable by putting up a portion of the sail to screen me from the spray, which was now icily cold.

It might be thought that in such a time of trouble men would have been moved by selfish thoughts; but it was not so, for again and again it seemed to me that I was made the first consideration. When biscuit and water, or wine, were passed round I received always the first share; and all through that wild and fearful time, even the roughest sailor there was ready to show me respect, and try to do some little act to show his willingness to serve me.

For a whole week we were borne along that great chaos of troubled waters, each moment expecting some huge wave to engulph us; and then slowly the tempest began to abate. First the wind went down, and then by slow degrees, the waves—so slowly, though, that losing care, now that the peril was supposed not to be so great, one of the sailors, who was steering, deluged the boat from end to end, so that it seemed about to sink, and I clung to Clive, feeling that our last hour had come.

The confusion caused by this sudden danger made matters worse, and two of the men plunged overboard with an oar each, to keep themselves afloat, for they felt that the boat was going down. But, a few words from Captain Webster restored confidence; and in spite of fatigue, the water was attacked, so that each moment the vessel rose higher, and at last was entirely free once more.

It was two days, though, before the sun once again shone out to cheer our disconsolate state; disconsolate, indeed, for in the time of peril the little water casks had been washed or thrown out, while the greater part of our provisions had floated away, at a time when every thought had been directed to keeping afloat. The biscuits were saturated, and we were all cold and numbed with being so long in the water. It almost seemed to chill our very hearts, when upon examination being made of each bag and case of provisions they were, without exception, found to have been destroyed by exposure.

"Looking will not mend it my lads, said the captain bravely. "Let us be hopeful and fight through it as bravely as we can. Never despair; and recollect that we have a change here to make up with Ourselves."

He pointed to me; and the men gave a faint cheer, as in accordance with his orders, the mill was once more hoisted, the boat trimmed, and we were once more skimming over the sea.

Night, morning—night, morning succeeded each other, for I don't know how many strange and misty days of horror; with a gnawing pain of hunger tormenting us, and the pain of thirst becoming hourly more and more unbearable. Captain Webster held up bravely, and encouraged us all; but we could only see that we were sailing on to our death—a death of torment with the burning sun above us, and the mocking water around, ever tantalizing, as if it asked us to drink, as it leaped merrily around the frail sides, foaming, sparkling and pure. But the captain's advice was not always taken; though with a faint smile on his lip, Mr. Gray, the first mate, owned to his weakness, he persisted during one frantic fit of agony in drinking the draught that hastened his end; for soon, he grew delerious, starting as if spoken to then leaping up and wanting to alter the direction of the boats head; while, when a couple of sailors tried to restrain him, their was such that he thrust them aside, and they sank back in their places, helplessly gazing at him as he climbed over the boat's thwarts, pushed the rope aside that held the sail, and muttering angrily, trampled upon me as he made at the captain, who was steering. Clive tried to restrain him; and in spite of my efforts to stay it I uttered a loud scream, for the poor creature seemed to catch his foot in my dress, and before we were aware of it, he made a lurch sideways and fell into the water.

For a few moments we were all petrified; but the captain changed the boat's course and ran back to the place where the mate disappeared; but though we ran too, and fro for some time, and though every eye was gazing intently at the limpid water we saw no more of the poor mate, and the rest of the evening I sat with my head bowed down upon my knees, praying that help might come.

The silence that reigned upon that little boat was almost startling; but it was silence engendered of despair, and when in the pale moonlight I looked up again I was to have that despair augmented by the fixed stare of poor Clive's eyes.

I did not know then, but I heard it afterwards, that my share of the food and water had been daily augmented by the half of his, and now it seemed that he was dying, and that I was to lose my sole protector. I flung myself at his feet and tried to speak, but my mouth was parched and dry. I looked around for help, but it was only to gaze on four impassive, stony figures, whose fixed and heavy eyes responded not to my appeal. There was a smile, though on poor Clive's face as he felt my arms clasp him, and slipping from his seat, lower and lower, he sat at last on the bottom of the boat with his head resting upon my breast, while the sigh of content he gave sent a shudder through me, for my heart whispered that it was his last.

"Throw some water in his face, moisten his hair," whispered a harsh voice, which I did not recognise as the captain's; but I tried to obey it, and bathed my husband's, forehead, but apparently without effect, for he lay motionless, his arms lightly circling me, and his eyes half closed; and then it was, that with bodily powers momentarily growing weaker, my mental faculties seemed to become more active, and my tears fell fast as I thought how hard it was, for him so young and brave to die thus early. At times I asked myself whether I was to blame—whether I ought not to have dissuaded him from accepting this post—to have been content with less brilliant prospects at home. I felt that it was for my sake he had accepted it, and this, was to be the end!

That long, long night passed, and with the morning sun I gazed upon Clive's face, to find it still and placid as if in sleep. The captain, who was the only man who, moved, seemed to me—for all I saw was in a dreamy, misty way—secured the rudder and then crawled forward, when he pressed a scrap of biscuit into my hand, and from a bottle would have pressed a few drops between my lips when one of the sailors snatched at it. There was a moments struggle, and the precious liquid dropped over the side, the sailors making a rush for it, one falling over the boat's edge, where he lay with his face in the water, too weak too struggle back till the captain and the stout old sailor dragged him in—but the bottle was gone.

A time of bright golden mist, with a red-hot globe seeming to scorch my head, and a time of dense black darkness, the one mingled with and running into the other. Then pleasant visions of green fields and bubbling streams, with delicious melting fruits hanging over the bright, glistening waters. Then the old days, with Clive half supporting me as we wandered in the pleasant lanes, talking of the happy future. Then again the golden glowing haze, and the burning heat, the muttering of voices, the soft fluttering of the sail; and then once more the black darkness, mingled as if with the hissing of mighty winds; and then it seemed to me as if my head sank upon my husband's, neck, and I went to sleep.

And it was so; but it was almost the long sleep of death; and so dear had been the end that it was not until after days of unremitting attention that reason returned, and I found that I lying in a cot in a dimly shaded cabin. For a long time I could not realize the past—could not understand where I was. There was a heavy motion of the vessel, the wash-wash of the water hurrying by, and occasionally a heavy footstep on the deck overhead. But at last came a sign, apparently close at hand, followed by a rustling noise, and turning my weary eyes in that direction, it was for them to encounter my husband's face, but so care-worn, pallid and anxious as to be almost unrecognizable. The next moment my feeble arms were round his neck, and the tears of thankfulness flowing for I knew that we were saved.

Saved, indeed; but how near had been our end may be divined when I relate that the merchantman that picked us up passed us in the night; but the sails of our boat attracted the attention of a sailor; and upon the vessel's course being changed, the impression at first was that the duty to be performe I was to afford Christian burial—a rite indeed by the three sailors. Captain Webster and the mate being only survivors.

A month later, weak, and the shadows of our former selves, we landed at Madras, the destination of the vessel that had picked us up; and soon after, but with many a shiver of dread, we re-embarked, soon after to reach Java in safety. It was not for many months that I recovered from a strange, nervous depression, whose effect was constantly to bring before me in all the vividness of reality, those terrible hours when all seemed shrouded in a golden haze whose scorching heat had burned and wasted the life within me. But by degrees came restored health and the calmness of strengthened nerves. We learned afterwards that the two boats and their crews were also picked up, after many days of fearful suffering, similar to that which marked with indelible lines the forehead of my husband—a glance at which at any time is sufficient to bring back to memory our fearful peril, and the manner in which we were saved from death.

In an Eastern city, a cabinet-maker employed two Germans as porters to deliver his furniture. One morning he loaded his car; with a bureau, and gave him directions where to have it left. "And, by the by," said one of them, handing him a shilling, "on your way back get a pint o' pease." They stayed an unusual time and when at length they did return, it was soon ascertained that they had exchanged 'bricks' in their hats. 'Why, you German rascals,' roared the angry boss, 'you are both drunk!' 'Yes,' said one of them; 'you gift us ter shilling to pay a pint a pease; we trink him, and we are pote so trunk ak ter towntens!'

The Bishops of the Diocese of Ontario is soon to take up his residence in Ottawa.

Yesterday there was another accident on the Grand Trunk near Richmond, a locomotive and 19 cars were precipitated into the St. Francis. Two men were killed.

Mr. McLennan, Law Partner of John Sandfield, has received the appointment of County Attorney & Clerk of the Peace. So much for a friend. Mr. George McDonald, another friend has received the appointed of Postmaster of Cornwall. J. S. remembers some friends.

On Wednesday last, the celebrated Benjamine Crandell, of waggon brake notority, was tried before Dr. Beaty & George Stephenson, Esqs., on a charge prefered by John Kerr, of South Monaghen, for obtained a Note under false pretences. The prisoner's balewas accepted in a light sum.

WHAT TO WEAR AND HOW TO MALE IT.—Mme. Demorest's Manual of Instruction on Dress and Dress-Making for the Fall and Winter Fashions of 1870-71. This book ought to be in the hands of every mother, lady, and dress-maker in the land, as it gives complete, valuable, and useful information in every department of ladies' and children's dress, with numerous illustrations. Price 15 cents. Mailed free on receipt of price. Address Mme. Demorest, 838 Broadway, New York.

From the Cobourg World, we learn that one Robert Knox, known around Cobourg as a buyer of produce was lately tried for obtaining money under false pretenses. He was sent up for trial, but gave bale for his appearance.

Two Conductors of the Grand Trunk named Dalton & Christopher, and Ryan, station master at Brighton, were also tried before the Magistrates for embezzlement of the Grand Trunk Company funds They also were about to be sent for trial, but found bale to the amount $2,000 each and two sureties of $1,000 each.

Grand Trunk.

There was a collision on the Grand Trunk on Saturday between Kingston and Colborne. Two locomotives and 18 cars were completely demolished. Three men were killed and two severely injured; 18 cars were destroyed.

It appears that the Station Master at Brighton has lately had too much to do, owing to the fact that his superior had been arrested on a charge of cheating the Company. The present Station Master had been engaged for 10 days and nights without sleep, and in consequence became so droway that he did not know what he was doing. He forgot therefore to give orders to a train passing through, and it collided with one going east, and caused the smash up.

The names of those killed are:—Daniel Montgomery, of Roxborng, County of Stormont, he was on his way to the Shanties back of this town; his team was also killed; he leaves a wife and three children. Daniel Wright, an Engineer on one of the trains; and Charles Chandler, Fireman.—William Brown, Engine Driver, was slightly injured about the legs. Ralph Hutchinson, Fireman, was considerably bruised about she head. James Shea, also of Stormont, it is feared is fatally injured. James McDonald, of Stormont, was slightly injured.

The loss is computed at about $250,000, besides the loss of life, and some maimed for life. The friends of those killed may also look for damages.

What makes this accident still more deplorable is the fact that due precaution might have prevented it. The Station Master has too much to do, becomes overpowered, and can no longer resist the demand of nature for rest. No aid is sent him until too late.

J. Travis, Engine driver, says before the Coroner, "I was in charge of a special No. 20, following after Go. 10. I got to Brighton Station a few minutes after No. 10. The Station Master seemed stupid for want of sleep; when ho was standing on the floor he seemed as if he could not stand, but would fall over asleep. I found out the mistake immediately, and uncoupled my engine from the train and dashed with a full head of steam, hoping to catch No. 10 and save them. I kept blowing my whistle, but they collided before I got to them. The two trains were immediately in flames. I got off my engine and uncoupled 12 cars that were uninjured, and saved them from the flames. This is one of the worst accidents that has happened on the road.

Canal Commissioners.

We have received a series of questions from the newly appointed Commissioners in reference to the Canals of the Dominion, the purport of which is to gain information in reference to the enlargement, depth, width and chambers &c. The Canals and waters mentioned are, the Welland, St. Lawrence, Lachine, St. Lawrence River and Rapids, St. Lawrence River, from Montreal to Quebec, the Rideau, the Salt St. Marie, the Caughnawaga Canal, the Richelieu River, and Chambly Canal, the Ottawa Canal, Georgian Bay Canal, Murray Canal, and Verte Canal.

This will afford ample scope for the varied talent of the commission, and also for sufficient outlay to satisfy the most fastidious on this point.

The commission itself will prove a nice little item. But anything to provide for coming emergencies. It perhaps will be found good to have so many more friends when the period for a new election comes round.

We have a Minister of Public Works; but his time is too much taken up with other matters, of more consequence to him, than investigating the great public works and the requirements of the Dominion in this respect.

It has been asserted, almost daily during the summer, that ministers were not at Ottawa; Sir John had to travel for his health: Sir George was also absent, and all the others followed the examples of their leaders in this respect. There are 13 Ministers for the Dominion, besides the Ministers of the Local Houses. The latter gentlemen have taken no small share of the cares of state out of the hands of the Ministers of the Dominion, and yet we find that they either have not time to attend to the remainder, or they have not the will.

Eight Commissioners have been appointed to do the work of the Ministeg of Public Works, and in this way the members of the Cabinet hope to escape a share of the odium that must necessarily be attached to the work assigned to the Commissioners.

The Commission too will be an irresponsible body; the people can in no way bring them to account for their sins of omission, or commission, and behind these Mr. Langevin, and his collegues, hope to hide themselves.

Few will attempt to deny that something must be done to improve our great commercial thoroughfares; but the public will hardly feel satisfied that Ministers should be allowed to shirk the duties of their office, and hand the work over to irresponsible commissioners, who may report in a year, but perhaps not in five years, if so required by those who issued the commissions.

OBITUARY.

Death the cruel enemy of man has again been doing its fatal work amongst us; and has snapped from our midst another respected citizen, J. W. Gilmour, Esq. Yesterday morning about ten o'clock he departed this life at the early age of 48 years. The stroke has fallen with unusual severity on his beloved partner and interesting family, in the loss of a faithful husband and tender parent. But the community also feel that a worthy citizen, a genial and warm hearted friend, and a true man has been removed from them.

On Friday last, Mr. Gilmour was in his usual health attending to his ordinary business. On that evening he returned home from Keene, and after tea proceeded to the Baptist Church, to meet the children of the Sabbath School of which he was Superintendent, for the purpose of teaching the dear children to whom he was strongly attached some of the Songs of Zion. While there he became very unwell, and had to be taken home. Dr. Burnham was called in but all in vain. No Medicine could be found to ward off the fatal dart, although until Tuesday there were no symptoms of great danger. On Tuesday evening other medical advice was called in but to no purpose, and yesterday morning he expired.

The Church to which Mr. Gilmour has longed has lost a useful member. His position in the Sabbath School cannot be filled. He was completely devoted to Sabbath School work—and, the children who have attended the School will long remember his earnest and touching appeals to live for Christ. Society has lost a useful member. He was Reeve of North Monaghan, and in consequence an active member of the County Council, and also an active member of the Grammar School Board.—He was of an amiable disposition, and unassuming in his manner—and only required to be known to be respected. He has gone to meet his Sainted father in the rest that remaineth. His last work on earth was singing the songs of Zion, and teaching children to do so also.

The bereaved family have our most sincere sympathy in the unexpected and severe trial they are now called to undergo.

The funeral will leave the family residence to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

We have been compelled to curtail our report of the late festivals to make way for matter that comes in after our calculations were made.

The Present Telegraph states that "they understand Sir Francis Hinks has purchased the Colton property at Brockville, lately owned by Mr. Broadhead, and that he will shortely take up his residence there. The house which has been erected at immense cost is one of the finest in Canada and occupies a charming situation."

LITERARY CLUB.—The regular meeting of the Peterboro' literary club will be held this evening in Good Templars' Hall, at 8 o'clock. Reading and impromptu debate.

LECTURE.—The next lecture of the course, will be given by the Rev. D. J. McDonnell in the Good Templars Hall, on Thursday evening next 15th and not this evening, as stated last week. Subject—"The influence of christanity on woman."

It affords us great pleasure to be able to say that Mr. McCabe, formerly Head Master of the Oshawa Grammar School, which he left a little more than a year ago, to take charge of the business of the Craftsman's Insurance Company, for Western New York, and the state of Ohio, has been elected to the head Office, 214 and 216 Broadway, New York, as general manager of the Company for the whole of the United States, with a salary of $5,000 a year. While we regret the loss of Mr. McCabe as an able and energetic teacher, we congratulate him upon his rapid promotion, and we feel no doubt of his success.

St. Andrew's Annual Festival

At Peterborough.

On wednesday evening last—the anniversary of Scotia's Patron Saint—the members of the society, Scotchmen and Sons of Scotchmen had their annual dinner. The dinner was got up by Mons. Faucher in his best style, in the Music Hall; and certainly in a way to do credit to himself and the promoters of the dinner.

The Hall was dressed in tartan plaids and mottoes, refering to the day, to the deeds of Scotland's sons, and to the toasts common on such seasons.

The table almost literally groaned under the abundance of good things, and amongst the best some "guid Scotch Haggis," to feast the palate of brither Scots. The following in the the "Bill of Fare."

SOUPS.—Oyster and Ox Tail.

ROAST MEATS.—Beef and Geese with Onion Sauce. Ducks and Pork with Apple Sauce. Partridges, and Lamb, with Mint Sauce. Turkey and Prairie Hen wine Sauce. Chicken.

BOILED MEATS.—Scotch Haggis, Turkey, and Tongue, with Oyster Sauce.—Ham and Mutton, with Caper Sauce.—Chicken.

VEGETABLES.—Parsnips, Cabbage, Turnip, Carrots, Beans, Pickled Cabbage.

PUDDINGS.—Plum, Raspberry, Maccaroni, Roly Poly.

TARTS.—Custard, Apple, Plum.

DESERT.—Blanc Mange, Apples, Celery. Nuts, Raisins, Charlotte Russe, Custard, Cheese, Almonds.

After ample justice had been done to the eatables, the President, J. Carnegie, Jr., Esq., introduced the first toast of the evening. The toast, he said, was one that was always first on such occasions, and was always received with a right good will by every true Briton. He needed, therefore, only to announce "The Queen" to insure the utmost acclamation.

The toast was well received amid continued hurrahs.

Then followed, also by the President, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family; and the Army and Navy; in proposing the second toast he remarked that this toast, he knew, would be received with all honor and enthusiasm, and this the more so because one of the family was about to wed a Highland Laddie.

Song by Mr. Henderson, Red White & Blue.

Major Kennedy on behalf of the Army and Volunteers.

Said he did not know he had a right to respond for the Army, but he might be allowed to do so for the Volunteers, and for them he would do so gladly. The Army and Navy had always done their duty, and he knew well, that if called upon again they would do so. As for the Volunteers they never had much of an opportunity to testify their love of Country, and patriotism, by feats of valor, but what opportunity had offered, they showed themselves willing to defend their country, Canada, and he knew they would do so again, if required. They had always done what they were equal to, and would ayo be ready for that purpose. The people of Canada too, compared favorable in their attachment to the Crown of Great Britain Their Voluntoers were almost two to one compared to the population, and they were just as ready to defend their beloved Queen and Country. He heartily thanked them for the manner in which the toast had been received.

Captain Sutherland returned thanks on behalf of the Navy. A task which was willingly performed, as he had nought but deeds of valor and daring to recount. Ever since the days of the Armada, Britain stands alone and unrivaled. Her navy has ever been her defence, and the defence of freedom and justice, and with it she is able to cope with the world. He remarked, they had done so, and can do so, if again called upon.

The Governor General, was then given by the President: Song by Mr. Dunsford.

He next gave "the day and a' wha honor it," and in doing so, said that in common with his brother countrymen, he was assembled to call to mind the deeds of their forefathers, among the far off glens and mountains of Scotia, for the purpose of calling to mind the deeds depicted in the Cotters Saturday Night, which would always be remembered by Scots' in every clime. He thought it was well that they should do so, but they must ever remember that "Honor and shame from no condition rise:

"Act well your part: there all the honor lies.

A Scottish song by Mr. Jopp.

A. H. Campbell, Esq., responded in fitting terms, and in doing so, remarked that the task allotted to him, he found himself altogether incapable to perform. The toast, which was the embodyment of the thought of every Scottish heart, required more eloquence and ability, than he could hope to bestow upon it. His thought, his words, all were ready to respond to the "Day 'an 'a wha honor it," but the will would have to be taken for the deed. On last St. Andrew's day we were favored with the presence of many of our fair countrywomen, but the present meeting was just as harmonious as that one. These meetings seemed to smooth away all little differences, and to cement their friendship on the common altar of nationality. There was a higher object however, and that was to recall the noble deeds of those of our native soil, or the soil of our forefathers, so that we be united to emulate their noble actions, and exert our energies in the cause of freedom. These occasions make us forget our daily advocations for a season—when we return to the dear old land. Those feelings arise from the natural effect upon characters of surrounding circumstances, as climate of a country very generally affords a key to the character of the inhabitants. He then graphically referred to the work of the Scottish merchant, mechanic and farmer—as pourtrayed in the ships built on the Clyde, traversing every clime. Their commerce carried on with every land, and her sons making even the barren soil a garden, and obtaining an abundant return for their industry and labors. This day, too, brought to their recollections associations of home, birthplace, early days, joys, sorrows, games, sports, fair haired lads and bonnie lassies; all of which united to fatherland, and taught their hearts to expand with benevolence and love.

Jas. F. Dennistonn, Esq., 1st Vice-President, then proposed the Heroes and Bards of Scotland, a toast which a Canadian by birth, of Scottish descent could claim as being most appropriate. Much was claimed for Scotchman by birth, but Canadian Scots could claim the right to retrace the memories of the heroes and bards of that land, in common with her own sons, for all Scotchmen born in Canada possess equal privileges with the real sons. They were accustomed to listen to the tales of Scottish History, until they were uncertain which to attach most importance to, the heroes of Scotland or the ancient Patriarchs themselves. They looked upon Burns and Scott as greater than any in the world's history. He drew attention to the feeling that pervaded every heart on the occasion of the Burns Centenary, as the Centenary of Sir. Walter Scott would be on the 15th of August, it would be a fitting time to remember the influence of his life, of his works, his, writings, and he trusted that they would be able to imitate them, able to accomplish like results, that our memories might be as dear to posterity.

Song,—"Scot's Wha Ha'," by Mr. J. Millar.

Mr. Telford then read his poem prepared for the occasion, which we gave last week.

W. H. Scott, Esq., in response to the toast said, that to do honor to the toast it required a familiarity with the history of Scotland, which he did not possess. The soldier deserved all honor as a hero, but there was a noble heroism, a higher, a more illustrious and, also, a more commendable heroism, such as that of Grace Darling, who, at the peril of of her own life, saved the lives of others from the shrouds of the wrecked ship. Here was a social heroism which outshone the glory of the battle field, when at her instance, and when the stout heart of her father feared to attempt, she encouraged him, lowered the boat, dashed into the foaming main, and succeeded in saving the survivors. Hers was heroism of the brightest stamp, and greater than all that ever transpired on the battle fields of England's Soldiers. Her bards, Burns and Scotts, were eminently true to nature, without a fault and accurate delineators of nature as well.

Andrew Millar, Esq., also responded; The words, he said, which fell from the last speaker were fitting ones for the occasions, and might therefore be considered enough, but when he thought of the heroes and the bards, of their inimitable bravery, their immortal songs, he felt that they beggred description. Ever since the days of the immortal Wallace, the Scottish Heroes were beyond comparison, the greatest the world ever saw.

He liked the way the British Minister replied to Russian impudence, for he well know that although Russia was 70, 80, or 100 millions strong, Britain was bound to pit her fit upon her, and would do it if required, and Canada will not be behind in lending her assistance, as she did in sending the 100th Regiment when needed, and in making cowards of the fenians.

Song.—"The Land o' Cakes forever," by Mr. James Millar.

Mr. John Pertram proposed this toast. This National Toast, always drunk on St. Andrew's Day. In other toasts men of science, literature, politics and champions, hold a conspicuous place, but this toast suggested the land itself for which patriots bled and poets sung, whose sons of labor raised Scotland to the high position they now occupy. They desire to earn money, but they spend it in educating their sons and daughters. Their parish schools have done much for their country, both rich and poor. If an object pleases they will work for it, pay for it, toil for it, fight for it as few others will. He facetiously said that their whiskey was so good that they could not keep from it. They were industrious, tenacious, energetic, and independent, standing up for their right, and progressive, and hoped that their sons in Canada would so live, and learn to be the worthy sons of worthy Scotsmen.

Mr. Fairbairn, ex-president, proposed "Our Sister societies and guests." He cheerfully undertook the giving of this toast, although one of no ordinary importance. Two years ago there were no sister societies in Peterborough, but he was glad to say that St. George's Society had been resuscitated, and right gladly would they congratulate Englishmen for this. Benevolent National Societies aided each other, and he felt the resuscitation of the St. George's Society had given an impetus to the St. Andrew's Society, as never before had they so large a membership. He therefore gave the toast knowing that it would be received with enthusiasm.

Song by Mr. Dunsford.

Mr. Blomfield, President of the St. George's Society and the Rev. Mr. Beck, responded on behalf of the Society in very appropriate terms.

Principal Dixon responded on behalf of the guests. He appreciated these Societies, and although, not understanding the hip, hip, hurrah, he could fully accept the sentiment that lay at the bottom of the St. Andrew's Society, he could rejoice to witness the spirit of their national gatherings and festivals, as their action must be for good on the community and on the world. The spirit of clanship he looked upon as a development of something higher than what had preceded it. The spirit had more or less showed itself in every nation, but not to the same extent. In ancient Gaul, Greece and Rome, it was manifest at times, but when the circumstances calling it forth ceased to exist, so did it. This was true of the American Indians, as well as England, Ireland and Scotland. But there was something higher than clanship, cosmopolitanism, in which a man looked upon every other man as a brother, and out of it arose a spirit of universal brotherhood, when

For a' that, and a' that
Is coming yet for a' that:
When man to man the world
Shall brother's be for a' that

And he felt that all would unite in wishing the advent when

"War shall cease and ancient feuds will fail,
Returning justice lift aloft her scale;
Peace o'er the world her olive wand extend,
And white robed innocence from Heaven descend.

The President then proposed "Canada our home."

Song by Mr. Henderson.

Mr. Cassel's responded: He expressed his sense of the honor done him in calling upon him to do so. To some the word "home" was associated with some far off land, around which fond members cling, and perhaps, sad ones too. From the manner in which the toast had been received, he felt that they were willing to acknowledge Canada as their home, adopted it might, be but not unworthy of a place something akin to that of their native land. He could fully sympathise with those who had left their homes for this strange land; but then they had found that now they could get full pay for honest labor, could worship God as they had done at home, and in trouble could find Scotch Lawyers to plead their cause, and Scotch Judges to hear and get them clear. Was proud of the father land, but he was prouder of Canada, his home, and he trusted to see the day when Canada would take a proud place among the nations in the history of the world; when we would have an Army and Navy of our own to toast; an Army and Navy of our own songs and greatness. We might therefore be allowed to use the following prophetic lines of the poet:—

"We trace
The lines of Empire in these infant isles:
What nations on thy wide sea-boards open,
Recall towns on tracts as yet untrod by man;
What opulence enters with their spires shall gleam
Where the wild deer now drinks the lonely stream:
And all but brute or reptile life is doomed!
Land of the free! thy kingdom is to come,
Of states, with laws from Gothic bondage learnt:
And councils, by chartered priesthoods unreversed:
Of sovereigns heeding the o'erwhelming sage.
Where shipless seas now wash unbeyond crags:
Of bays, revered in dazzling lines and squares,
Their pinioned transports breathing nature's airs;
For monarchs, thou shalt have of native fire,
And minds to sing the songs themselves inspire."

Mr. Hamilton then gave the mayor and corporation to which mayor Scott and Mr. Dennistoun responded.

Mr. Dixon proposed the St. Andrew's Society acknowledged by the president, who also gave

"The ladies" acknowledged by Mr. Dunsford. Mr. A. Smith gave the County Council coupling the name of the Warden, S. S. Peck, therewith.

Mr. Dennistoun remembered the Press, acknowledged Mr. Stratton, when the company broke up after spending a very happy and pleasant evening

A appy to meet, sorry to part and happy to meet again.

Masonic.

On Thursday last, the Masons of Peterborough presented past D. D. G. M., C. D. MacDonnell, Esq., with a jewel on the occasion of his leaving Peterborough for the United States.

After the presentation Mr. Turver, of the Cassie House, entertained the Masonic Fraternity to a sumptious dinner.

The dinner we understand was complimentary to Mr. MacDonnell, and the Bill of Fare testifies to the Catering abilities of "mine host." Turver, and to the excellent management of his house, the bill of fare; which speaks for itself, was as follows:—

SOUP.—Maccaroni.

MEATS.—Roast,—Beef, Turkey, Ducks with Cranberry Jelly, Partridge with Bread Sauce. Boiled,—Turkey with Oyster Sauce,, Ham, Tongue, Chicken Pie.

VEGETABLES.—Potatoes, Cabbage, Carrots, Parsnips, Tomatoes.

SECOND COURSE.—Plum Pudding, Raspberry Tarts. Apple Pies, Cranberry Tarts.

DESERT.—Apples, Jelly, Blanc Mange, Grapes, Almonds, Rasins, Celery, Cheese.

About 50 Masons and guest were present Dr. Kincaid, D. D. G. M., presided, and on his right Mr. MacDonnell, the guest of the evening, on his left the Rev. Mr. Clementi and Judge Dennistoun. Mr. James Dennistoun read letters of apology from J. Wright and H. G. Taylor, of Port Hope, James Wallis, Esq., Merino Farm, Dr. Bell, of Lakefield, Captain Sutherland and J. Cameron.

The Chairman, giving the Queen and Craft, said, this was always first, and deservedly so. Queen Victoria had reigned as long as most of her predecessors, and reigned deep in the hearts of her subjects; and no where more so than in the Dominion of Canada.

"God Save the Queen," by all the party.

The chairman also gave the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family, which was also well received.

Then followed, "The Army and Navy," by the Rev. Mr. Clementi, who said, it might appear strange to him, a minister of the word of peace, to propose this toast. But, he believed the best way to maintain peace was to be prepared for war, and if not prepared, it required no prophet to predict the results. England had fought and conquered everywhere. Her meteor fling had waved triumphant in every Clime, and if called upon could do so again. The reason was she was not aggressive and hence she was favored by the God of Battles. He remarked that the volunteers could equally be relied upon, and their deeds of valor acknowledged readily; and should the occasion again call forth the volunteers, which God forbid, they would be ready with the Army and Navy to do their duty.

Major Kennedy responded on behalf of the volunteers, and his Honor Judge Dennistoun who been Col. of the Militia and Capt. Rogers, in very appropriate terms.

His Honor Judge Dennistoun then gave the Governor-general, and Lieut-governor in jocose terms, giving the grits or Brownites some hard hits.

Mr. Carnegie responed to the honors. Dr. Kincaid then gave the toast of the evening. The health of Bro. MacDonnell, R. W. Past D. D., G. M. He said that the honor of doing so, had fallen to him, he supposed as the successor of Bro. MacDonnell. The Masonic record of Bro. MacDonnell, all Masons knew. For 15 years he had been a member of the Fraternity—had occupied high positions in the order—and was elected by the largest vote on record, to a high office in the Grand Lodge. He was an upright and a true man—a sincere friend—ready to praise, but ready to point out faults, and he felt that every friend in Canada, would always sympathize with him, and wish for his prosperity.

This toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm.

Mr. McDonnell expressed his deep-felt gratitude for the manner in which this toast had been received and drank; and before sitting down, would beg leave to propose the health of Mr. Turver, who so bountifully provided the entertainment.

Capt. Turver replied in suitable terms, thanked them for their kind wishes, and hoped it would not be the last time they would all thus meet at the same table.

Mr. Shaw, of the Ontario Bank, gave the Local Legislature of Peterboro—the Mayor and Town Council.

To which the Mayor, and Mr. Helm, replied.

Mayor Scott proposed the Warden and County Council, to which Mr. Peck, Warden, and Mr. W. Wood returned thanks.

Dr. Kincaid gave the Bench and the Bar. His Honor, Judge Dennistoun,

Mayor Scott, ...
Mr. Cassels, responding.

Mayor Scott proposed the ... Lumbermen of the County. ... Campbell returned thanks on behalf of the merchants, Mr. W. A. Scott on behalf of the lumbermen.

Mr. Cassells proposed the Medical profession, to which Drs. Might Geo. Burnham, and Dinsdd, replied in fitting words.

Dr. Might gave the ladies for whom Mr. Johnston of the Toronto Bank, responded. Mayor Scott then gave "the Press," Messrs. Stratton and Canegie, answering for the Fourth Estate.

Mr. Dunsford proposed the health of Mar. Turver. It is needless to say that this toast was received with more than the usual enthusiasm.

The evening was one of the pleasantest spent in a long time, Mr. Turver doing all in his power to make those present comfortable, happy and cheerful.

The evenings pleasures were brought to a close according to Masonic Custom.

Town Council.

The Council met on Monday 28th ult. Present:—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Rutherford, Edmison, Doharty, Helm, Dennistoun, Landy, English, Morrow, Stevenson, and Toole.

The Minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

Communications were received from J. Carnegie, Esq., President of the Provisional Directors, of the Peterboro' and Haliburton Railway Company, reminding the Council that the By-law granting $40,000 bonus to the said Company required to be legalized before it would be operative and suggesting, as the above Company has to obtain an extension of its Charter from the Legislature, the one act may include both objects; at the same time the Council should grant the fee $60 required by the Private Bill Office, as the Company had no available funds at their disposal.

Mr. Carnegie was heard before the Council on the matter.

From Mr. E. C. Hill, Wm. Robertson, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Heart, Alexander Edmison, Lewis Moyette, James Haynes, and Mary Primo, severally, asking reduction or remission on their taxes. After some discussion they were all referred to the Finances Committe.

A petition from John Moloney and others asking assistance of the council, to send one Dennis Moloney to the Hospital, as he was very ill and destitute. This case was referred to the Charity Committee.

And account from Wray and Wardle for interest due to them by the Council, on $25 for 7 months at 7 per cent, and interest on the same for one year, amounting in all to $1,09, was ordered to lie on the table.

Moved by Mr. Dennistoun, seconded by Mr. English, the different communications in respect to reduction or remission of taxes be referred to the Charity Committee, with instructions to pay the taxes out of the charity grant, if they think the applicants fit subjects for the charitable consideration of the town.

In amendment by Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Morrow, to refer the petition in reference, to the Com. on Finance, to be paid on statement being received from the collector of the inability of the parties to pay their taxes.—Carried.

On motion of Stevenson it was agreed that the sum of $60 be granted to pay the expense of the Private Bill Committe, in Parliament.

Mr. O'Beirne, Chairman, reported on behalf of the Finance Committee as follows:—

The Finance Committe having examined into the matter of Mr. Angus Williams' claim for extra materials furnished by him for the New Bridge on Hunter Street, recommended payment of $18 in payment in full of the same.

The report was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Dennistoun, seconded by Mr. Helm, the suit of Robert Lundy vs. Town was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Morrow, Mr. John Howdon was instructed to see after the License By-laws.

On motion of Mr. Edmison, seconded by Mr. Toole, the Mayor was appointed arbitrator on behalf of the town, to act with the arbitrator appointed by the County Council, to settle matters between the Town and County, as required by; Statute the seal of the corporation was fixed to the resolution.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Helm, the By-law granting aid to the Haliburton Railway Company, was read a third time and Signed and Sealed.

On motion of Mr. Dennistoun, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the Mayor was appointed to prepare a memorial to the Lieut-Governor & Legislative Assembly, ask for an act to Legalize By-law No. 249, granting $40,000 to the Peterborough & Haliburton Railway Company.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that the clerk be directed to make a demand on the Midland Railway Company, for payment of the amount expended in removing the obstruction from the Bridges on Bethune Street, the amount to be ascertained from the Street Inspector.

Mr. Dennistoun as chairman of the special committee on the petition of John O'Donnell and others read and submitted a report as follows:—

The Committee to whom the petition of Mr. John O'Donnell and others was referred, have held several meetings and felt the great responsibility which attaches to the question of providing some suitable and sufficient means of extinguishing fires, and they desire the matters to be taken up by the Council, as a whole in order that the fullest measure of discussion may be secured.

The Committee, however, desire to express the opinions that in the event of it being determined to procure a Steam Fire Engine, that the third-class Silsby Rotary Engine would be found the best and most serviceable.

The Committee are also of opinion that if the Scheme suggested last summer, as to the Water Works can be carried out, it would be the most effective, but they are of opinion that the only way in which it could be done, is by the citizens who are interested taking the matter into their own hands and organising a private Company.

Lines written at the grave of Mrs. J. CAMERON, who died, Nov. 28th, 1869.

I'm sitting by the grave of one,
Who just a year ago,
Forsook the earthly tenement
And left this world below.

She went to dwell 'neath summer skies,
And in a lovelier home,
With him, who many years before,
Left her a widow lone.

Alone, amid the forest wilds
She bravely struggled through,
Her lofty spirit, rising o'er
The cares that round her grew.

Soon brighter days came, and success
Crown'd each succeeding year,
And with a mother's love, she saw
Her children settled near.

To all that were in trouble, she
A willing hand did lend,
A favorite with old and young,
Each claim'd her for a friend.

When standing on the river's brink,
Death's damp upon her brow,
She said, "In God I trusted, aye
I feel His presence now."

They laid her down upon this hill,
Her husband's grave beside,
And many a grand-child gone before
Lies mould'ring by her side.

We miss her everywhere, but most,
Among her well-lov'd flowers,
Oh! friend weep not, rejoice that she
Now rests in Eden's bow'rs.

When spring relieved this hallow'd spot
Of piles of drifted snow,
She came, with sweetly blooming flow'rs
Upon the graves to strew.

Here, oft with kindling eye she view'd
The Autumn-woods arrayed,
In changeful dress of gorgeous hues
And tints of every shade.

When from the rosy east, the sun
Emits his first faint ray,
Upon her narrow bed it shines
And drives the dews away.

And then, when in the western sky
In crimson he goes down,
His parting beams all ting'd with gold
Light by the grassy mound.

Now happy children's voices ring
Resonant o'er her grave,
Whose greatest pride it is to be
A kin to one so brave.

Far, to the south o'er boundless lakes
The airy clouds condense,
Oh! I could linger here for hours,
But duty calls me hence.

Correspondence.

For the "Examiner".

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Review:

SIR,—In your issue of the 25th of November, there are some remarks which require a brief answer. The following is what the Review says:—

"Mr. Millar says that he does not care if the Northern Townships give a bonus of $45,000, more to the Haliburton R. B. so long as the old Townships are not called upon to pay it." I say the same now, and I can say more, that if the Ratepayers had clearly understood that they would have to pay the $45,000, not one of them would have signed it. Proof, Mr. Carnegie promised the Council that he would get an act of Parliament to compel them to pay it. I have no doubt but that Mr. Carnegie was in earnest when he told us so, but was he sure that Parliament would grant him such an act? He did not succeed in the Burleigh and Harvey survey, and I think that both cases are very much alike. Parties of the Townships of Harvey and Burleigh got up a petition asking the County Council in conjunction with the Government to get their Townships re-surveyed: the Government to pay for all Crown Lands, and the County to pay for all lands not belonging to the Crown, and that those Townships would reimburse the County for the same. The survey was completed, but when the day of payment came neither petition nor petitioners could be found; like Hamlet's Ghost, all disappeared. The Council then tried to get an Act of Parliament to compel the Ratepayers of Harvey and Burleigh to levy a rate on those Townships to repay the County for the money advanced, but he Reeve of Harvey and other wire pullers resisted the repayment. Mr. Carnegie in behalf of the County took the matter in charge, and did all that lay in his power, assisted by the Warden to get an Act of Parliament, but failed. The committee said that if the Council of Peterboro' chose to act illegally they must bear the consequence—so Mr. Carnegie must not be too sanguine about his acts of Parliament, even if he is a supporter of the Patent Combination Machine. The County had to pay law costs and other expenses, and pay the survey to boot. I leave the public to judge whether the $45,000 would not have been another survey job. The Review says that I had another object in view, namely, to make Smith, Ennismore and North Monaghan pay, whether they would or not, to help Otonabee to build the Grand Junction. I tell the Review that I had no such object in view. Those Townships could vote—Yea or Nay; but they had no such privilege with the $45,000 By-law. The Ratepayers not interested had no say in the matter. The Review says that we had Mr. Carnegie's guarantee. I don't think the Council would be justified in passing the By-law even with a guarantee signed by John Carnegie, Chas. Jas. Blomfield and James Millar, for such a large sum.—The Review wishes people to believe that the Grand Junction Railway would be of no benefit to Smith, Monaghan and Ennismore. I wonder did the Editor tell the Ratepayers of those Townships so, when he attended meetings on behalf of the Grand Junction. I hold that those Townships will be more benefited by the Grand Junction than Otonabee, while Otonabee has the same advantage of Peterboro' Market, it has the advantage of Cobourg and Baltimore Markets during the sleighing season. A team can go and return the same day, which cannot be done from those other Townships. The Editor of the Review sneers at "Mighty Otonabee," as he is pleased to call it. He says they pay their debts grudgingly. I wonder if the Corporation of Otonabee owes the MIGHTY REVIEW anything. If so, I assure him that he will be paid, and he need not care whether they grudge it or not as long as he gets the money.

I remain,
Your Obd't Servant,
JAMES MILLER.

Lillie Lonsdale.

Attention is directed to the advertisment in another column, announcing one entertainment by Miss Lillie Lonsdale. Her performance are similar to those given by Grace Egerton, and have been largely attended throughout western Ontario. The London Free Press says:—

"Her talents of mimicry are very versatile, and her singing tasteful. Her voice does not exhibit the fullness and power that is usually expected in an artist of such celebrity, yet it gave evidence of mature culture in her songs, and was used with thrilling effects in portraying the emotions. The "course scene" in "Leah" was given with a depth of passion rarely exhibited by any artists who have visited us, and which met the hearty appreciation of all. In her other characters, Miss Lonsdale exhibits a great deal of natural vivacity and thoroughly artistic training."

Messrs. Raymundo C. Leite & Bro:

Gentlemen:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta (a laige proprietor, in the Cidad de Campos) was staying at my house he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tonoco, who is thought a good deal of in Campos, but the fever instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tonoco, declared that there was not the slightest hopes of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co.s medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the relief pure on the chest, back and wrists; three of Radway's Pills every day, and well covered so that he might prospire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one desert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the merical of Dr. Radway & Co's. medicamenis.

I remain, gentlemen, yours very obedient servant.

Loss of Appetite in Horses.

Horses lose their appetite from various causes, but most frequently by the approach of some disease, this circumstance ought not to be overlooked by those who own horses, but should be immediately to as by so doing the disease may be checked, and the life of the horse saved. To do which we are positive there is nothing equal to "Carley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it purifies the blood, correct all derangement of the digestive organs, and as a necessary consequence the appetite is restored, the skin becomes soft and shining appearance Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hord & Co. is on each package.—Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Twenty years experience in using Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have proved them to be the most effectual remedy for coughs, and ulceration of the throat, caused by cold, or unusual exertion of the vocal organs; public speakers and singers will find them most beneficial. The entire freedom from all deleterious ingredients renders Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, or Cough and Voice Lozenges, a safe remedy for the most delicate person, and has caused them to be held in high esteem by all who have used them. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25cts. per box.

How necessary that the nervous apparatus should be perfect and the nerves; when either becomes exhausted through overwork or other imprudence disease in some organ is developed. The remedy lies in removing the cause. By using Nelson's Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites the tone and vigor is soon restored to the brain and the whole nervous system, while diseases of the implicated organs disappear.

Hamilton, Ontario,

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

Heddon Braes.

O, bonny are the banks o' Tyne,
And sweet its spreading shaw;
When nature decks her vernal shrine,
Wi' eglantine fu' braw,
There Fancy aft in virgin pride,
Like ony seabeam strays;
Without a rival at her side,
The flower of Heddon braes.

Nae bird in spring gars wild woods ring
Wi' blither note than she;
Na star o' night that twinkles bright
Can match her rowen e'e.
The dimples o' her cheek and chin
I dinna need to praise;
Yet hope I canna weel to win
The flower of Heddon braes.

For I maun cross the wide, wide sea,
Wi' British soldiers brave;
To shield the shores of liberty,
Or fill a sodgers grave.
Then farewell scenes and lessome a',
The starting tear betrays:
My heart is thine where'er I gae,
Sweet flower of Heddon braes,

Reasons for Dressing Plain on Sunday.

The following reasons are good in this locality as anywhere, and will apply to other days as well as Sunday.

1 It would lessen the burdens of many who find it hard to maintain their places in society.

2 It would lessen the force of temptation who often lead men to barter honor and honesty for display.

3 If there was less strife in dress at church, people of moderate circumstances would be far more inclined to attend.

4 Universal moderation in dress at church would improve the worship by removal of wandering thoughts.

5 It would enable all classes of people to attend church better in unfavorable weather.

6 It would lessen, on the part of the rich, the temptations of vanity.

7 It would lessen, on the part of the poor, the temptations to be envious and malicious.

8 It would save valuable time on the Sabbath.

9 It would relieve our means of a pressure; and thus enable us to be more for good enterprises.

A WARMINGTON CORRESPONDENT of the New York Tribune has been "interviewing" General Sherman on the subject of the threatened war in Eastern Europe. The General is a clear-headed and astute military man, and his opinions are of considerable weight when given on a subject with which he is familiar. He thinks that Russia has been to fast, and should have insisted on a congress of the nation, before which to press her right to the navigation Black Sea and the Dardanelles. He considers that there is no cause for war; but if Russia thinks Prussia is out of the way, war is inevitable, and it will be the most terrible and destructive that has over yet occured. He believes that even as it is, France, in order to obtain such powerful allies as England, Austria, Italy, Spain, Holland and Denmark, would take sides against Russia. In such an event the General thinks that the greatest battles of the world may be fought next year on the Prussian, Austrian and Belgain territory. He believes that the English, French, Turkish and Dutch fleets, might destroy the Russian fleet, but considers that the Russian army, combined with the Germans, would be difficult to overcome; for Russia and Prussia are concentrated powers, while the other are scattered, and have to contend with the time and expense of concentration. General Sherman states that the American Government have sold over 300,000 muskets to Turkey, and that the Turks have converted thun into first-rate breech-loaders. He further added that American merchants have asked the Secretary of War to sell seventy-five field batteries, and that the request will be granted; he did not state, however, for what nations the batteries were intended.

Usoful Recipes.

Bed Bug Exterminator.—One quarter of an ounce of red percipate; one quarter of an ounce of blue stone; one pint of turpentine. Throughly mix and apply with a brush or feather. I will warrant that none stay where this is used.

Barley Water.—Take nearly an ounce of pearl barley and wash it well. Then pour on it a but of boiling water, and carefully boil to one-half. Strain the liquid through a towel, then add some sugar and lemon juice. A small piece of orange or lemon-peel dropped in while boiling, makes it acceptable to many persons.

How to Obtain a Copperas Color.—Have a strong lye made from wood-ashes and disolve a pound of copperas in a pail of water put the latter in a kettle, beat it boiling hot, as also the lye, and let them drain, spreading them in the hot sun—then dip them in the copperas. Repeat the process, alternating between the lye and the copperas until the desired color is obtained.

English Potato Balls.—Boil some potatoes very dry, mash them as smoothly as possible, season well with salt and pepper warm them with about an ounce butter to the pound, and a few spoonfulls of good cream. Let them cool a little, roll them into balls, sprinkle over them crushed vermacelli or macroni, and fry them a light brown.

How to Choose Poltry.—Buy chickens that have white flesh and pale yellow fat. Small spurs indicate a young rooster, and the lower part of the legs of a tender hen are soft and smooth. When the legs and feet are rough, the birds are old and tough. If the rump is hard and stiff, they are treat; if soft and flaby, examine the fowl thoroughly, as it may be tainted. The legs of the young hen turkey are black; the shorter the neck, the better and fatter the bird. An old hen has red and rough legs. The fatter a turkey is the better; it cannot be too fat. The skin must be white, and the broader the breast the better will the turkey be. They are fresh as long as the legs are not stiff. A young duck has the lower part of the legs soft, as is also the web between the claws. If the under bills break or bends easily, it is a young bird. If the breast is hard and thick it is fresh. A young goose has much down and soft legs of a yellow color, which is the reverse in an old one.

There are no solid rocks in the Artic regions, owing to severe frost. The surface of the sea is estimated at 150,000,000 square miles, taking the whole surface of the Globe at 190,000,000 square miles. Its greatest depth is supposed to be equal to the height of the highest mountain, or found miles.

The Dean of Carlisle on Ritualism.

On Tuesday evening, the Dean of Carlisle presided over the annual meeting of the Carlisle Auxiliary of the Church Association. In the course of his address he adverted to the rise and progress of tractarianism in the Church of England, remarking that after the snake had been scotched it appeared in the form of ritualism, and the ritualists were wiser in their generation; for, whereas the tractarians went openly over to Rome, the ritualists remained in the Church of England and spread Romanism in a subtle manner. He repeated the assertion he made at the Church Congress at Liverpool, that, although in other matters he would believe the word of a Roman Catholic as much as a Protestant, in matters connected with the interests of his Church he could not believe the oath of a Roman Catholic; and said that he based his assertion on the fact that the Roman Church sanctioned, justified, and exemplified perjury. He expressed himself disappointed with the result of the Ritual Commission, but at the same time acknowledged that it had condemned many of the superstitious practices of ritualists, while it recommedations enlarged the liberties and rights of the clergy. He confessed that bishops had not done as much as they might have done to check Romanism in the Church; but pointed out that the prosecutions of the Church Association, which were undertaken to obtain clear decisions upon the laws of the Church, and not to persecute individuals cost thousands of pounds, and he protested against the necessity of incuring so much expense, remarking that it was time the Ecclesiastical Courts were driven into the Atlantic, and a court of half dozen sensible men established to administer the law of the Church without spending so much time and money in digging into old parchments. He described the Ritualists as rebels against the powers that be, for, notwithstanding the Supreme Court had decided against twenty-two of their ceremonies, many of them continued to practice them. However, Mr. Machonchier was to be prosecuted for a breach of the law, and they would see whether the Supreme Court would allow its decision to be set at defiance. Against that Court the Ritualists were fierce, for it had been substituted for the Pope by the Supreme Court of Reference, and they would rather have the Pope in that position. He accused them of insolent contempt of the law and their church and defiance of their bishops, and said that, although he objected as much as they did against a Unitarian minister being admitted to the Communion, that did not exonerate him from obedience to his bishop.—Hexham Herald.

Seeds differ very much in their power of retaining vitality. The following list shows aproximately how long the common seed can be kept:—Beet seed is good from seven to ten years; carrots, two; parsnips, two; radish, five; turnip, five to eight; onion, two; asparagus, four; cucumber, eight to ten years; melon, eight to ten, and all the better for keeping, producing more and better melons and less vines; squashes, seven to ten years; cauliflower, four to five years; cabbage, five years spinach, five years; beans, three to four years; celery, ten years; endive, ten years; lettuce, five years; pease, two to three years; corn, two or three year; egg-plant, seven years; martyna, three years; pepper, five years; okra, five years; tomato, five years.

Mankind should learn their temperance from the moon—the fuller she gets the snorter her horns become shorter.

In the North of Ireland there is a considerable tract of country, in proximity to Dungannon which covers sixty square miles over the whole of which no intoxicating liquor is sold at wholesale or retail. The total population is between nine and ten thousands.

How to Make the Boys Good Farmers.

Induce them to take an interest in the farm, in the implems, in the stock; tell them all your plans, your successes and failures; given them a history of your own life, and what you did and how you lived when you were a boy, but do not harp too much on the degenerate character of the present age; praise them when you can, and encourage them to do still better. Let them dress up for the evening, instead of sitting down in their dirty clothes in a dingy room. Provide plenty of light; thanks to kerosene, our country homes can be as brilliantly and as cheaply lighted as the gas-lit houses in the city. Encourage the neighbors to drop in of an evening. Talk agricultural rather than politics; speak more of the imortance of large crops of good stock, of liberal feeling, and of the advantages of making animals comfortable, rather than of the hard times, low prices, and high wages. Above all encourage the boys to read good agricultural books. Papers are well enough, but an intelligent boy wants something more and better. Get some good agricultural book to study. Read it with him, and give him the benefit of your experience and criticism. When he has mastered this buy him another. In our own case we owe our love for farming principally to the fact that our father talked to us of everything that was doing on the farm; answering all our questions and encouraging, rather than refusing our childlike desire of helping him to plough, to chop, to let off water, and fire the brush heads.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—An extra of the Bothwell Revieu informs us that a very sad accident took place at the railway crossing West Bothwell, Friday evening, about half-past six o'clock. The day express ran into a team at that place, which is about three quarters of a mile west of the station. The occupants of the sleigh were Mr. John Murphy, of 10th con., Oxford, his son (a boy of 18), and an Indian named Solomon Lewis. Mr. Murphy had both legs cut off below the knees, and his son's arm was so dreadfully mangled as to require amputation. The boy also received a severe wound in the leg. The indian had one foot badly chrushed. Mr. Murphy is not expected to recover. Drs. Oliver and Pope dressed the wounds of the sufferers, who are doing as well as could be expected. The sleigh was smashed to pieces, but the horses we understand, were not injured. It is stated that the unfortunate party were under the influence of liquor at the time the accident occurred.

THE GREAT FARMER OF ILLINOIS.—The following highly interesting statistics of the immense farms of Mr. John T. Alexander, the great farmer and stock dealer of Morgan Co., have been prepared with much care, and can be relied upon as substantially correct: Number of acres improved lands on his farms, 34,000; number of acres of unimproved lands 300 total number of acres of land, 34,300 Aggregate value of lands, $1,685,000; value of implements in use upon his farm, $50,000; amount paid for wages during the past year to hands employed on his farms, $76,800.—Number of live stock on his farms, 90 mules, 50 cows, 150 horses, 200 oxen and 7,000 other cattle, and 700 hogs. Total value of live stock, 536,900 Product of his farms in 1869, 277,500 bushels corn 7,000 bushels wheat; 8,900 bushels oats, 2,000 bushels rye, 1,000 bus. potatoes, 3,000 tons hay. Value of animals sold on his farms during the past year, $493,400. Mr. Alexander has two farms—one of near 8,000 acres in Morgan County, 12 miles east of Jacksonville, upon which he resides, and the other of about 27,000 acres, in County, Illinois. In addition to his vast business as a farmer, Mr. Alexander buys, ships, and sells as a dealer, over 50,000 head of cattle annually.—Decatur Republican.

THE TRUE THEORY OF CURE.

Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies the system through the blood, urine, sweat, and stimulative nourishing constituents, with Tissue-building, Life-sustaining Heat or Caloric, and Vital Energy elements. All of its constituents are homogeneous, are true, and act in unison. It Repairs, Invigorates and Revives only the Sick, the impaired Decay and Corruption. CONSUMPTION, SCROFULOUS HUMORS, SYPHILIS, CANCER, ULCERS, TUMORS, &c., are all of a scrofulous nature, hence, and as such are within the curative range of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent!

1 That scrofula, by whatever name designated, is the cause of nine-tenths of the blood, induced or caused by Chronic inflammation. That these deposits take place when the blood is poor, weak, watery, or impure, and fails in building up and repairing the proper vessels, tissues and organs through the nutritious properties it should contain, but contains the poisonous virus of poison in the blood, as Mercury, Calomel, Corrosive Sublimate, which is the Deadly Poison of Mercury, or other medicine given in medicines and which enter largely in the common nauseous Sarsaparillas. NOT ASSIMILATED OR CHANGED FROM THEIR NATURAL CONDITION.

2 That unless the organs or nutriments are greater than the waste, that decomposition and disease will supervene, and the powers of life become exhausted.

3 That the dying body cannot be sustained on any treatment of medication that exhausts the system, or fails to nourish the blood, the only medium through which the vital forces are introduced for it, and which is the growth of the body and death.

4 That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a want never before supplied, and known to exist in medicine, that like cures on a principle in Chemical science, which has never brought to such a perfect system of cures as exhibited as follows:

1. Its great power in assimilating the food in its first stage of digestion on the organs of digestion, strengthens and vitalizes the blood, causing renewed blood, separating from these organs those unhealthy qualities before they are taken up by the lacteals and are thrown into the blood. Hence we see, not by any wonderful power, it enriches the system with the very essence or principle that forms the vital powers of the body, and this chemical action on the blood in its pure and complete condition, separates every atom of refuse material or element, out of which the virus of disease is formed.

VADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me and afterwards, I sought medical advice employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868 when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to anyone afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr F. W. Lassack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore ady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I id then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or cures.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and subtle agent of death undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal disease, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to lie dormant throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the necessity of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla in a dwelling, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: Tic Douloureux, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous system.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Select Poetry.

There is no Death.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in Heaven's jewelled crown
They shine forever more.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize
To feed the hungry moss they bear;
The forest leaves ring daily life
From out the viewless air.

There is no death; The leaves may fall
The flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait through wintry hours
The coming of the May.

There is no death! An Angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate;
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers—
Transplanted into bliss they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice whose joyous tones
Made glad this scene of sin and strife,
Sings now in everlasting song
Amid the Tree of Life.

And where He sees a smile too bright,
Or hears too pure for taint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light
To dwell in Paradise.

Born into that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them—the same,
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead.

DID THEY ESCAPE?

BY MRS. L. B. GOODWIN.

It was a lovely morning on the wide-stretching prairie, Alice Gordon stood in the open door of her new Western home, now glancing in at her mother who sat sewing on a farmer's coarse frock, and now gazing out over the beautiful plain around. Wild sweet luxuriant grass mingled with flowers, waving and gaily in the sunshine.

'Mother,' she said, pretty demurely, 'what shall I do? It is just schooltime in the world, but we have moved out of it, I guess. No school, nothing to read, all days are alike—O, I miss something so. I wish I were back in New Hampshire—I may as well say it."

'Suppose you write to your cousin Lilla,' suggested her mother very cheerfully.

'I should certainly have to say I am homesick, or else there wouldn't be a bit of truth in the letter.'

'Then don't write, dear, till you feel better. We wouldn't make believe homesick, with the great beautiful prairie-farm all our own. Your uncle will move his family out here next year, I have hardly a doubt. If we can wait a little, we shall have a school and a church and everything we could desire.'

'That doesn't help me to-day,' whined poor little Alice, leaning against the door-post, with hands clasped over her head.

'No,' returned Mrs. Gordon, and the moment added—'We'll go a-plumming Alice. Get our sunbonnets and the baskets. Your father was in the woods yesterday and found a few quite ripe. They don't have wild plums in New Hampshire. I will finish this buttonhole, then I am ready.'

The little girl started into new life. You would have thought her the little inhabitant of a surprise-box, so nimbly she sprang up when her mother lifted the lid by speaking those few words. She tied on her mother's sunbonnet while she was fastening her thread—the two baskets she had taken on her own arm; and had filled with slices of bread and butter and ginger bread; for she proposed to have a little pic-nic on the river's bank, and spend the greater part of the day abroad.

They set forth, having left the cottage window open, and merely shut and latched the door. First they passed by a cornfield larger than any farmer in New England could boast; and, followed the cattle-path, they came before long to a strip of woods bordering a small river. It was not like a New England River at all. Its waters looked brownish, and tasted of nameless things; a cool sp ck'ed trout would have leaped out high and dry, supposing himself to be stewing in a sauce-pan with French seasoning; and though the cattle here were used to it, and came a long way for their daily drink, an eastern cow would have shaken her horns over it by way of refusing a draught when she was dry—and she could have done so with out seeing herself reflecting in its murky waves.

Yet the river, gliding among the shadows where streams and trees were scarce, was a very pleasant feature of the scene. It was not the most sluggish river in all the level country, either. Just there it began to quicken its pace, like a tardy school-child at stroke of the bell, for you must know there were some chiming rapids three miles below, which wise heads believed could, with the aid of mechanical contrivances, be made to turn mills, and which doubtless would be the site of a great town.

Her mother and Alice wandered along the bank for some distance, pushing through shrubbery and vines, and getting more scratches than plums, till they began seriously to wonder where the latter grew. On the opposite side of the river stretched a forest miles deep, that river being a sort of dividing line between the wooded and open country. Alice pondered on all the amazing things that the wilderness might contain; as she gazed and wondered, her eyes caught sight of what she had looked for and searched for in vain on their side of the river—a thicket of plum-bushes, purple and tempting with their laden fruit.

The child cried out to her mother, who was cautiously examining some unknown berries.

'Isn't it too bad, mother! We can't fill our baskets in ten minutes, and we can't get one of them. I wish we could swim.'

'We'll see, Alice, replied her mother, quite resolutely. 'I have heard your father speak of some driftwood—it can't be far down, I think; we might cross on that as well as on a bridge, if we could find it.'

'O, we will find it,' Alice exclaimed. Accordingly they pressed down the bank of the river, and, sooner than Mrs. Gordon had expected, came to the rough bridge formed with logs which had drifted down and become wedged together at this point. Alice sprang over like a monkey, her mother calling after her to take care, for the timbers might be slippery; and meanwhile heeding her own caution, and crossing at leisure.

They now returned up the stream by the opposite bank, and found the little garden of plums after which Alice especially had been so eager to thing of nothing else.

'You have torn your frock, Allie,' said her mother, 'and no wonder.'

'Have I?' returned the child; why yes, in two places, I do declare.'

'There's blood on your finger; you hurt yourself, dear,' said her mother again.

'I didn't know it,' Alice answered, looking at her hand in surprise. 'But O, the plums, mamma!'

The plums indeed! Plentiful and delicious. The plum pickers thought they had chanced upon a little corner of Eden. Mrs. Gordon gathered them rapidly, and so did Alice at first; but when her basket was half-full, she was seized with a childish curiosity to know how wide this Eden might be, and if plums were the only luxury it could furnish. She left off picking and set to prospecting.

'Mother,' said she, of a sudden giving her attention to the river, 'we needn't have taken pains to find a bridge—its real shallow, and we could wade across just as easy.'

'I'm not so certain of that,' said her mother.

'I'll try it when we are ready to go home—see if I don't,' Alice rejoined with a laugh.

Then after a while her mother missed her chatter, and called—'Allie,' and Alice responded—'I'm just here mamma;' then for a few minutes all was silent. The mother, who had her basket almost full, was about to call Alice again, when she heard as she supposed, the child pulling away at plumbushes close by.

But as she listened you saw a doubt cross her face, which turned a shade paler—that is, you would have seen these signs of alarm had you been there; the woman became suddenly convinced that some living creature besides themselves was near. Naturally her first thought was Indians, her second thought was of some terrible wild beast, she knew not what. Where was Alice? She dared not call; she hardly breathed; she was pale as death, and spell bound, with her arm thrust up among the plum bushes, and stiff as a pine bough. Miles of wilderness on one hand, and the river shutting them out from home!—it was a despairing situation; she never in her life had felt such a sense of helplessness.

Stealthily out of the depth of the forest appeared the mysterious object of dread, aiming directly for her. She fancied she heard a sniff, as of a dog when he smells something appetizing. In agony she prayed to God that her child might escape; as for herself, she felt not merely doomed, but torn in pieces and half devoured already.

In the midst of her terrors came the voice of Alice, distressfully crying, "Mother! mother!"

To her benumbed ears the call seemed to come from a distance—from across the river She was but a step from the brink; the spell broken, she looked and saw on the other shore the flutter of a little white handkerchief with a blue border. Alice's handkerchief. She did not see the child, but not doubting it was she waving the bit of cambric to attract her attention, instantly concluded that she had ventured the experiment and successfully forded the stream. With her thankfullness, love of life rose up strong in her own bosom; besides, Alice was waiting for her instead of improving her chance of safety. She called to her, 'Run!—run!' as she plunged into the stream; but the handkerchief still waved, and she was not sure of having been heard.

In a moment, to her bewilderment, she found herself almost waist deep in the muddy water. In the same moment there was loud crashing in the bushes behind her, and the report of a rifle rang out sharp and clear.

Again the voice of of the affrighted child reached her ears:

'Mother, don't leave me. You are drowning. O God, do not let mamma drown!'

The sound came from the shore she had just left, and there appeared Alice extending her arms for help, and the blue smoke of the discharged rifle curling and wreathing all about her. Indians, and Alice murdered, was the thought of the poor mother's heart. She attempted to return, but the mud oozed from beneath her feet, the cur- [illegible] away; and there all her recollection vanished.

Alice had seen an animal leap past in the blaze o' the deadly rifle and fall headlong into the river; then a man in a hunting-frock hastily but kindly bade her be quiet—Alice was screaming with might and main—and promised to save her mother. She could not see through her tears, and she hid her face in her hands, not daring to look. She hushed her loud screams, but, poor child! she never ceased to cry as if her heart was breaking.

It seemed a long time, though it was not many minutes, ere the hunter came back, took the child in his great strong arms, assuring her that her mother was safe, and bore her to that mother, who lay, dreghed but unharmed, on the river bank, her head pillowed strangely on the body of a beautiful deer. At seeing Alice she sat up and clasped her close in her wet arms.

'You have saved my life,' she said to the stranger, making an effort.

'It's that ar deer, mum, more'n it's me; and ye can't thank him—he's dead,' observed the man dryly. 'Ye see,' he continued, replying to a look of enquirey from Mrs. Gordon and Alice, 'the creetur was after drink, and I was after him, waitin' till he should get to the water and give me a good shot—and I'm sure I didn't think to find a single human livin' soul on this side o' the river, no more'n nothin'—and it started me, I tell ye, when a child yelled and somethin' went slap into the water. The deer turned half round, standin' on his hind feet, and I put a bullet neat back of his left shoulder. He sprung into the river too, and it happened so he slid ha'f under you, mum, and kinder saved ye up out o' the water, and I see how it was, so jest cooly trotted down here to the driftwood and pulled ye out, without even dampin' my feathers. Nothin' ain't due to me; but see here! ain't you the new settler Gordon's wife and darter? I've seen him.'

Mrs. Gordon answered affirmatively, and invited the hunter home to dinner; he accepted, furnishing steak. So glad was Mr. Gordon, that he quitted work for a half-holiday, and they all went plumming; and Alice took occasion to get her handkerchief, which the saucy bushes, unknown to her, had taken from her neck and hung out for a false signal.

A PRECOCIOUS MOTHER.—The Registrar-General of England reports the case of Essex laborer who gave birth in 1869 to a child before she was eleven years of age.

The Drunkard.

Very few persons would be willing to marry an habitual drunkard; but it is not generally known what a great risk is run in marrying the son or daughter of an habitual drunkard, although they themselves are strictly temperate from high moral principle; indeed, it is not an uncommon thing to find the children of beastly drunkards the very model of temperance, from having had before their own eyes, for years in succession, the terrible evils of habitual inebriation.

It is one of the indisputable facts in physiology, and the observation of intelligent men confirms the truth, that certain diseases and taints of body, and traits of mind, from father to son. So well and firmly is this impression fixed on the minds of men, that when a man becomes insane one of the very first efforts is to endeavor to ascertain if it is not "in the family," and it is comparatively seldom that such is not proved to be the case.

Another important fact is that hereditary traits and taints sometimes overleap a generation, arising most probably from the fact that one parent has extraordinary good health, sufficiently vigorous to stave off the malady for a time; but the virus of the malady is in the immediate descendant for all that, and to the extent that if the grand child marries one who has a similar taint, the offspring develops the characteristic of the grandparent.

Drunkness is a transmissible malady, because anatomical investigations demonstrate that the brain of a drunkard, after a comparatively few indulgences, becomes organically impared, and when that is the case it is just as impossible to repair the injury as to have a new finger grow in place of one which has been removed. Surely no stronger appeal can be made to a man's intelligence, to his honor and to his humanity, to practice temperance in the use of all intoxicating drinks.

As a proof of the argument made, it may be sufficient to say, in general terms, that observation shows that in any number of drunkards about one-third becomes so through social influences, the remaining two-thirds from hereditary influences. More than half of the first class are reclaimed, but to recover men from intemperate habits who have become so from hereditary influences is almost impossible, even although they may have had a Christian education and the early fustillment of strictly temperance principles. Let the reader who can thank God that he has not had the curse of an intemperate parent, and let him pray daily, with constant action, that he never may be permitted to fall into so great a crime as that of being an intemperate parent himself. Nor ought a man who has been a drunkard to allow himself to marry and become the father of children, for they are very certain either to inherit his vice or to have implanted in their constitution the seed of insidious diseases. To be safe from these calamities and crimes there is only one safe plan—never taste a drop of the accursed thing.

A Strange Case.

On Tuesday last in a case before the Court of Appeals in Montreal, Mr. Doutre, Advocate of appellant, announced to the Court that circumstances constrained him to challenge the four Catholic Judges of the Court.

"By all means of strong pressure on public opinion in this Province," said Mr. Doutre, "many persons are not sure whether our Judges are the representatives of Her Majesty and the laws made under her authority and that of her predecessors, or whether, in certain matters, they are governed by a religious authority, the seat which is at Rome." Here the Hon. Chief Justice interrupted Mr. Doutre to tell him that he attributed too much importance to the imbeciles who expressed such doubt in the matter.

"Unfortunately," rejoined Mr. Doutre, we meet those imbeciles at every turn, and as we are brought to this point, that the justices themseves have not defined their position, their decisions will often rest without moral authority. The judges cannot express their opinion except upon a case before them, and this cause offered an occasion, the like of which may not occur again, to put an end to the injurious doubts which are entertained as to their independence and as to their position with regard to the Soverign who appoints them, and another Sovereign who pretends to command their conscience, to circumscribe their authority, [illegible] that of our Queen, our parliaments and our laws. I have not the slightest doubt," said Mr. Doutre, "that the declarations which your Honors will make, in obedience to the law, will enable me to withdraw my challenge, which I will be very happy to do."

The Hon. Chief Justice ordered the Clerk to receive the petitions, but register nothing without having received special instructions. Le Pays.

GOUGH'S POWER.—"T. L. C." in the New York Evangelist says: "Mr. Gough was here lately and addressed a tremendous house on 'temperance.' He nearly set my hair on end with the identical scene (of a victim of delirium tremens) which I first heard from him twenty-four years ago! Has it ever occured to you that Gough is the greatest dramatic performer that ever lived? Garrick spoke other people's dialogues, had the help of scene, painters and star actors, with constant change of plays. Gough composes his own parts, paints his own scenery (with the tongues), had no assistance on the stage, confines himself to the one unpopular topic of total abstinence, and yet has won as splendid triumphs both in pathos and in laughter as were ever gained by Garrick or the Kembles! He is a preacher, too, as well as a dramatist. Whitefield never drew more tears over the sufferings of our Saviour, than I have seen to flow when Brother Gough was depicting Christ's ascent of Calvary. His speech the other evening would have fitted well in any series of Revival meetings.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACTS.—Night levels all artificial distinctions. The beggar on his pallet of straw snores as soundly as a king on a bed of down. Night—kind, gentle, soothing, refreshing night—the early paradise of the slave the sweet oblivion of the worn soul; the nurse of romance, of devotion, how the great panting heart of society yearns for rest. Sleep is God's special gift to the poor; for the great there come times fixed for repose; quiet they have none, and instead of quietly waiting the approach of events, they fret and repine, and starve sleep, and chide the tardy hours, as if the morrow were big with the fate of some hemisphere. The torrent of wretchedness rousing pent keeping eager expectation on tiptoe, and drives timid slumber away.

Enlightened and Moral Men.

The deadliest foe to man's longevity is an unnatural and unreasonable contentment. Every man is borne with a certain amount of vitality, which cannot be increased, but which may be husbanded or expended rapidly, as he deems best. Within certain limits he has his choice, to live fast to live, to live abstemiously or fastidiously, to draw his little account of life over a large space, or to condense it into a narrow one; but when his stock is exhausted he has no more. He who lives abstemiously, who avoids all stimulatives, takes light exercises never overtasks himself, indulges no exhausting passion, feeds his mind and heart on no exciting material, has no debilitating pleasures, lets nothing ruffle his temper, keeps his account with God and man duly squared up," is sure, barring accidents, to spin out his life to the longest allotted limits which it is possible to attain; while he who lives intensely, who feeds on high seasoned food, whether material or mental, fatigues his body or brain by hard labor, exposes himself to inflammatory diseases, seeks continual excitement, gives loose rein to his passion, frets at every trouble, and enjoys little repose, is burning the candle at both ends, and is sure to shorten his days.

Gems of Thought.

—Improvidence in youth is conspiracy against comfort in age.

Intolerance is the attribute of any sect wielding power.

Good Breeding.—A man's own good breeding is the best security against other people's ill-manners.

Talent and Character.—Talents are nurtured best in solitude, but character in life's tempestuous sea.

Labor.—As the sweetest rose grows upon the sharpest prickle, so the hardest labor brings forth the sweetest profits.

Owing and being Owed.—Never owe any man more than you are able to pay, and never allow a man to owe you more than you are able to lose.

Love.—Shut not thy bosom to the tenderness of love; the purity of its flame shall enable thy heart and soften it to receive the warmest impressions.

Charity.—That which you devote to charity disburse personally. Systematic benevolence is too often an excuse for laziness, and an encouragement for professionsal imposters.

THE LOSS OF A WIFE.—In comparison with the loss of a wife, all other bereavements are trifling. The wife! she who fills so large a space in the domestic heaven; she who buried herself so unwearidly for the precious ones around her; bitter, bitter, is the tear that falls on her cold clay! You stand beside her coffin and think of the past. It seems an amber color pathway where the sun shone upon beautiful flowers, or the stars hung overhead. Fain would the soul linger there. No thorns are remembered save those your hands may unwillingly have planted. Her noble, tender heart, lies open to your inmost sight, You think of her now as all gentleness, all beauty, all purity. But she is dead! The dear heart laid upon her bosom, rests in the still darkness upon a pillow of clay. The hands that have ministered so untiringly are folded, white and cold, beneath the gloomy portals. The heart whose every beat measured an eternity of love, lies under your feet. The flowers she bent over with smiles, bend now above her with tears, shaking the dew from their petals that the verdure around her may be kept green and beautiful.

There is so strange a hue in every room no light footsteps passing around. No smile to greet you at nightfall. And the old clock ticks and strikes, and ticks—it was such sweet music when she could hears through which you watched the shadows of death gathering upon her sweet face.

And every day the clock repeats that old story. Many other tales it telleth, too—of beautiful words and deeds that are registered above. You feel—and oh how often—that the grave cannot keep her.

Save Your Young Men.

From what? Not from hard work and exhausting toil, for this is the appointed lot of men and we should not expect to escape from it; by this right character is formed, and the earth brought to yield her riches.

Not from protracted and close study, for thus only are attainments, brain power, developed, and the professed filled with able men.

Not from rigid economy, years of toil, and slow increase of wealth? for this is far better than fortunes made in an hour.

But save them from the fascinations of the gaming table, and especially from the insidious, fearful curse of intemperance.

Oh, it is burning out the very vitals of mortality and manliness in a hundred social circles. It is destroying by thousands the youth in our best families. It is sweeping through the country and carrying away to worthlessness and crime the young men who would be pillars in the church and state, and it is gaining power daily.

In a small room in a dark tenement building in one part of the city, the writer was called recently to read Holy Scripture and pray over the dead body piously trained, classically educated and endowed who a few years ago commenced his career with the brightest prospects. His fortune squandered, his heart destroyed, his brilliant talents besotted, by intemperance he died.

A brother once equally talented and promising, and met at the door of narrow rooms; with palsied hand and tevered eye, and muttering welcome, staggering against the coffin as the service proceeded.

A third brother—the youngest—with down-cast face and burning heart, wept over the desolation wrought by drink. He may be saved. And this is one of the many cases that are constantly occuring.

Ministers, teachers, fathers, mothers sisters, call upon the young men to touch not, taste not, the accursed bowl. God save our young men.

THE STARS.—Look at the heavens above you. There is star after star, all through the infinite realm of space—some shedding down streams of glorious radiance, some bestowing only a feeble light—but, nevertheless, all pouring their tribute of brightness from their gilded urns, and all fulfilling, in the general system of the universe, an office of good and of blessing. So every man may shed his portion of light and performe his function of benevolence, whatever may be his station in society as respects wealth.—Chapin.

The temperance cause seems to be gaining ground in Ireland. In Dublin there are several temperance meetings held regularly, and the halls are crowded. At a second very large meeting at which Rev. Father Meehan presided, Mr. J. A. Mowatt, a popular and eloquent orator, made a powerful address, in which he said:—"If the whisky bottle were kept away from the Irishman, or if he kept from it, the Irish would be a match for any race under heaven. If the whisky bottle had been kept from the Irishman for the past two centuries, Ireland would now be a nation second to none in Europe. And freedom from the whisky bottle, even yet, would work wonders for Ireland and the Irish race.

To the weak, the worn and the weary, the Editor of the Boston Recorder says, "Will one most unhesitatingly recommend the Peruvian Syrup, a protected solution of the protoxide of iron, to all the weak, the worn, and the weary, having richly experienced its benefits. Hope came all the qualities claimed for it by its proprietor.

Editorial Items.

We ask the forbearance of our readers during the Holidays, as the advertising public are exceedingly anxious to let them know where the best bargains can be obtained and we are anxious to permit them The reason why does not require an explanation.

J. J. Hall, Esq., is Census Commissioner for the West Riding.

Literary Club.—We beg to remind our readers of the lecture this evening, under the auspices of the Peterborough Literary Club, by the Rev. D. J. MacDonnell. Subject:—"Influence of Christianity on Women." To commence at 8 o'clock.

Canadian Literary Journal:—The first numbers of this new publication have been received. It is neatly got up, and being devoted to Original Canadian Literature, deserves the patronage of Canadian readers. Messrs. Flint & Van Norman, are the publishers. We wish them every success in the enterprise.

Early Closing Movements.—We are glad to see that the movement for early closing is being agitated, and the Dry Goods men deserve praise for entering into it.

The long weary hours from 7 o'clock in the morning to 8, 9, and 10 o'clock, produce their effect on the health and habits of our young men, without any corresponding gain to the employer. An hour or two of healthy amusement, and time for mental improvement would prove in the end as productive of gain to the merchant as to his clerk, besides fostering the idea that merchants do care for those who labor for them. If the Grocery and Book store men should also enter into this movement, they would add very much to the gain of their young men, and they would do just as much business in the year. A certain amount of business has to be done, and of course, if not done at night, would be in day light.

The ladies, we feel certain, will heartly co-operate in this good work.—Let them see to it, that all their shopping is done before 5.30 p m. It can be done. They will have a longer evening for other amusements—or for attending to household concerns.

But by all means let our grocery men close at six o'clock also.

Then let our Mechanics Institute be encouraged. It affords a splendid opportunity in its reading rooms, for young men to improve their time, and to increase their store of knowledge; and an hour spent in the rooms will be better than spent in places of doubtful associations.

The $100,000 By-Law.

The County Council met in Special Session yesterday at 2 o'clock. Members all present except the Reeve of Monaghan, deceased.

We were unable to be present at the opening of the meeting and consequently cannot give the introductory proceedings.

The object of the Session was to pass the By-law.

Moved by Mr. Walton, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—that this council regrets much to learn that since its last meeting, one of its most valued members, J. W. Gilmour, Esq., late of North Monaghan, has suddenly departed this life in the prime of his age and usefulness.

Be it therefore resolved.—That this Council deem it their duty and privilege to place on record, their sincere expression of the great loss which is sustained by this Council, by the death of one whose urbanity of manners, strict integrity, kindly disposition, and readiness to assist his colleagues in furthering the interests of the community at large, has justly endeared him to every member of the Council in common with their fellow citizens throughout the country: That this be placed among the proceedings of this Council, and a copy of it be sent to Mrs Gilmour, that she may know with what great respect and affection the memory of her late husband is cherished by the Council.

Moved by Mr. Millar, and seconded by Mr McDonald.—That the By-law granting $75,000 to the Grand Junction Rail Road, and $25,000 to the Peterboro and Haliburton Rail Road, be read a third time and passed, and signed, and have the seal attached.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Walton.—That the By-law granting a bonus to the Peterboro and Haliburton, and Grand Junction Railway Coys., having been found illegal, and very grave doubts exist as to whether an act can be obtained to legalize the same, owing to a majority of the Municipalities having given an adverse vote thereto; and owing to the Municipality of N. Monaghan not being represented through the death of its late Reeve, be not read a third time, but be laid over till next meeting of Council.

Messrs. Armstrong, Choate, Brown, Hunter and Walton, strongly opposed the By-law's being passed as illegal, and not in the right.

Messrs. Millar, Rogers, Blizzard, Coughlan and others held that as the people had ratified it by their vote, the Council had no alternative but to pass it.

The amendment being put, those for it were Messrs. Choate, Armstrong, F. Peck, Brown, Hunter, Walton, Moher, McCarthy and Buck, 9.

For the original motion, Messrs. Millar, Garbutt, Blezzard, Wood, Clegg, Coughlan, Rogers, M. McDonald, 8.

The business of the Session being over, the Warden left the Chair.

A New School Bill.

Through Mr. Carnegie, we have received a copy of a New School Bill, which, it is the intention of the Government to introduce and if possible get enacted this session. It is the production of the Chief Superintendent, and represented as based on the experience of past years, and the wishes of the house at the last session.

The bill, however, is not materially changed. The word common it proposes to change to public; hence to call our schools Public Schools, but the powers of taxing property for school purposes, as at present remains, only that, as schools are to be free, all expenses are to be raised by taxation.

The second section provides that each school corporation shall provide accommodation according to regulations "prepared according to law." The last bill left this to the local superintendents to determine.

The compulsory clause in this new bill is stronger than in the old one. It says, "Every child, from the age of seven to twelve years, inclusive, shall have the right to attend some some school for four months in each year; and any parent or guardian who does not provide that each child under his care shall attend some school, shall be subject to penalties as hereafter provided by law. The penalties are set forth in the fourth clause, five dollars for each neglect and imprisonment until paid, and double that penalty for the second offence, unless poverty, too great distance from school, or the child being otherwise educated. This section will cause many a scene of troubles in the sections, when neighborhood quarrels arise; and only then.

The Trustees or their agents are to be the complainants.

The bill also provides for appointing County Inspectors for every one hundred schools, prpvided also that there be but one such officer in a riding. And further each City and Town shall be considered a county for the purposes of this act.

The qualifications of Inspectors are to be prescribed by the Council of Public Instructions.

The 8th section leaves the appointment of Inspectors the County with Councils and city and town School Boards, and also the power of dismissal. And the Lieut-Governor has also the power of dismissing. The payment of the Inspectors is fixed at $5 per school from the Board appointing, and provides that it shall be lawful for the Lieut-Governor in council to appropriate an additional sum not exceeding $5 per school.

The 11th section makes it the duty of County Councils and the School Boards in cities to appoint a "Board of Examiners for licensing Teachers." The Board to consist of the County Inspectors and two or more competent persons, not to exceed five, whose qualifications shall also be prescribed by the Council of Public Instructions. The payment of the Examiners to be as at present.

By the 12th section the C. P. I. shall prepare examination papers; and issue first class certificates; second and third class certificates to be issued by the Examining Boards; first and second class certificates to be permanent and valid everywhere in the province, provided the holder thereof pays yearly four dollars into the fund for the support of superannuated teachers.

The 13th section provides for introducing the study of Natural History, Agricultural Chemistry, Mechanics and Agriculture in the Public Schools. The 14th section enables Counties to form one or more townships into one School Municipality, and to establish a Township Board of Public School Trustees. No section can be formed after 1871, which shall contain less than fifty children of school age unless such sections contain more than four square miles.

The 16th section gives the right of appeal to the County Council, against any By-law or resolution of the Township Council in regard to forming or altering boundaries of sections, when the County Council may appoint three persons to investigate the dispute. The County Council, also, on petition from two or more Boards of Trustees, may appoint a committee to revise and alter boundaries. The 17th sections provides for obtaining land for a school site, and settling the price and damages by arbitration.

The 20th enables the Trustees to provide a teacher's residence, and the 21st refers disputes concerning annual reports to the Inspector; 24, 25 and 26 refer to arbitrations, but the 27th clause provides that all disputes at present settled by arbitrations, shall be brought into the Division Courts and decided there, with the right of appeal as at present to the Chief Superintendent; the Summer vacation in all the schools to be one month, from 15th of July to the 15th of August.

The bill also provides for electing Trustees on the second Wednesday in July, hereafter.

Grammar Schools are to become high schools, with a little change in the programme, but no aid will be granted when the average attendance is less than twenty pupils. The apportionment not to be less $300 nor more than $1,000.

Section 41 provides for establishing Collegate Institutes, which shall receive $1,750 year so long as the average attendance of such institute is 60, and there are are four teachers employed in it.

Section 42 provides for the establishment of Industrial Schools in any City, Town ar Village, for neglected children.

One great mistake is the whole Bill is. It famerely intended as a piece of patchwork on the present school law.

If the law is to be changed why not consolidate the whole law, and add to it what is needed to perfect the work, and repeal all existing laws. It requires something in this way to make it intelligible to the people who have to work out the details, and we trust that some thing will be done to bring this much desired end about.

Next week we hope to be able to consider the proposed changes more fully, and to give our readers the benefit of the whole Bill.

The United States Patent Laws, with instructions how to obtain Patents, is the title of a work of 112 pages, sent to us by Munn & Co., 37 Park Row, New York. It also contains the official rules, forms for patent deeds, hints on selling patents, 150 diagrams of mechanical movements, and a large variety of other useful information. It is a book really worth having, and can be had free by all who will send their names to Messrs. Munn and Co., as above.

The Reform Dinner,

On the day of the opening of the Legislature was a decided success. Every Section of the country was represented, and the leaders, Blake, McKellar, Christy, and othe s made telling speeches against the Patent Combination.

The Hon. George Brown was chairman, and in a speech of almost an hours duration, reviewed the conduct of the present hybrid combination of men whose only object is office, and the laying out of the surplus funds that have fallen into their hands.

Mr. Blake also reviewed the conduct of government and of the Cornwall Saint, and prophesied that not one day longer than the issuing of the writs for a new election, would the country permit them to hold offices. That in fact, the country was tired of men whose statesmanship consisted in buying up support by gifts of office, and the promise of large portions of the surplus funds to certain localities, in the same manner as to Belleville, because member of the locality support J. Sandfield.

The Legislature of Ontario met on wednesday last. The following is governor Howlands address:—

Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly.

I am happy again to meet you, and to congratulate you upon the greatly increased prosperity of the Province. Since we last met, the arbitrators under the provisions of the North American Act of 1867, for the divisions and adjustment of the debts, credits and assets of Upper and Lower Canada have proceeded with commendable assiduity in their arduous labors which were lately terminated by the publication of their award, a copy of which will be laid before you. Without offering an opinion as to whether the judgement on the various points submitted to them realizes the general expectaiton of the people of this Province or not, I venture, nevertheless, to express the great satisfaction which the result has afforded me, and which, apart from the fact being final and conclusive, establishing for ever the share of the public debt which this Province was bound to assume, as also the proportion of the general assets to become exlusively our own property.

My predecessors, at the opening of the first Session of this Legislature, intimated that you began your labors with resources at your disposal large enough to justify the hope that they would prove adequate not only for the actual requirements of the Government, but also to satisfy the wants of this rapidly improving country. The obinion then so confidently expressed, the experience of the past three years has established to have been well founded, as is strikingly evidenced in the Provincial Treasury; and that too, after satisfying not only the ordinary outlays required for the public service and charities, but also providing for the various public works of great ntility and the erection of public institutions which are no less creditable to your liberality than productive of lasting benefit to suffering humanity and to the general interest of the Province at large. How best to apply this surplus, or at all events a considerable portion thereof in developing the resources of the Province by advancing the commercial and agricultural interests of the people, it will be for you to determine. In furtherance of this view a measure will be submitted recommending a grant of money to stimulate the initiation of well considered and bona fide railway undertakings, which are specially designed to penetrate the heart of our free grant territory, and also to encourage similar enterprises pending in the same direction, or to our inland lakes, which when completed will secure to other sections of country the luxuries of speedy travel and the advantages of cheap transport hitherto enjoyed only by those within re-asonable distance of existing thoroughfares to which the now unprovided localities have long contributed.

While preferring our system of public instruction, so as to render Common School education accessible and free to every child in the land, and to provide more effectually for giving a higher English and commercial education in the Superior Schools, your attention will be invited to the expendiency of making that education more pratical and directly instrumental in promoting the interests of agriculture and manufactures. The life of our country's wealth and progress depends upon its agricultural and manufacturing industries, the development of its mineral resources; and our system of public instruction should provide a suitable preparatory school for agricultural, mechanical manufacturing and mining pursuits, such as are now enjoyed by those who make choice of the professions of law and medicine, and thus be promotive of the highest material not less than of the intellectual and moral interests of the people.

Statistics furnished by the Department of Immigration exhibit a gratifying proof of a considerable addition to our resident population during the present year over that of the previous season, and from all quarters in which the new-comers have taken up their abode, I continue to receive assurances that they appreciate the happy change which they begin to realise in the land of their adoption. The conjunction of the Dominion and Ontario Governments will again be energetically directed to give a further impetus to the scheme for promoting immigration, which it is the anxious desire of both Governments to render perfect and effectual so far as a liberal outlay of money, and active agencies, can accomplish the object.

A bill will be laid before you having for its object the substitutions of a new mode of trying controverted elections.

The report of a survey by competent persons, which I recently caused to be made of a portion of the large area north of Lake Superior and lying betw en Lakes Neepigun and Nipissing will shortly be laid before you. I have reason to believe that in that hitherto unexplored territory will be found large tracts of land well fitted for agricultural purposes, interspersed with lakes abounding in fish, and with a climate similar to our own which will induce the emigrants to look for happy homes in that now comparatively remote region.

The financial accounts of the Province, with the estimates for the coming year will be laid before you, and I rely on your readiness to grant the necessary supplies.

The sad condition of the idiotic class of our people would seem to require your attention, with a view to provide for their better care. I also recommend that provision be made for the establishment of one or more central prisons, the importance of which I on a former occasion felt myself compelled to bring under your notice.

The state of the Province is hopeful in the extreme With a rapid advance in trade manufactures, more conspicuously displayed since the boon of Local Self-Government has been conceded to us, and cherishing as we do a heartly preference for British institutions, affording an evidence of our desire to foster and maintain at all hazards our connections with the mother country, we have no cause to envy the condition of our neighbours. Let us hope that this flattering prospects may not be marred by injurious dissensions amongst ourselves, and that Providence may guide your councils and give directions to your efforts in promoting the happiness and contentment of our people at large.

The adoption of the address, was moved by Mr Carnegie, seconded by Mr. Murray.

The ladies' Committee of the Protestant Home beg to acknowledge with many thanks the sum of $5. 20 sent by Dr. Taylor, being the proceeds of the sale of Heather for St Andrew's day.

Early Closing.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

Sir,—

I have noticed lately that the clerks of this town are agitating an early closing movement, which, I think is a capital idea, both for customers and clerks, we know, as a matter of course, they can select goods and colors better by day light than gas light. And as the few hours gained by the clerks for recreation or improvement, is of as great importance to the employers as employees, it is sincerely hoped that the ladies (they have it in their power) will make their purchases before six o'clock, as that is the hour to close, (Saturday excepted).

By making room for this in your valuable paper, Mr. Editor, you will much oblige an

AGITATOR.

To the Edior of the Peterboro' Examiner.

Sir,—

Another attack has been made on me by Mr. Blomfield, in your issue of the 1st December; I must again request the same medium for a brief reply. What Mr. Blomfield's motive may be I cannot undertake to say, as I have never had the remotest desire to injure him. I have always acted in the most liberal spirit towards him and his company. Five years ago, when the ex-reeve of Burleigh, Mr. Carrol, attempted to perpetuate a wrong by expending the company's taxes on the other townships not belonging to the company, Mr. Blomfield knows that I was one of the first to assist him in getting justice to his company, and would do so again. But when Mr. Blomfield so far forgets his position, and chooses to go into print, and cast reflections upon the Council because they would not do violence to their conscience, and likewise to the pockets of the ratepayers. I thought it time to explain to the public how matters stood. Unfortunately, as a rule, gentlemen from the British Isles, look with contempt upon the Canadians, think that they are mere novices; but they soon find that they are not so green as they took them to be. Mr. Blomfield says that the dam built at or near Dysart, has been built without any expense to the County. If his representative had got his motion carried, it would have cost the County something. Mr. Blomfield says the amount returned by Government for roads constructed, is a portion only of what his company has expended thereon. According to the report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands, ending 30th June, 1865, it shows that the amount returned by Government to the company for constructing roads was, $18,106.25, besides the interest accruing on unexpended money. So we may safely put down the amount as $20,000. If Mr. Blomfield thinks it would be about as sensible for me to build a railway through Otonabee out of the proceeds of my farm, as him so assist to the amount of $45,000, to build the Haliburton railway, out of the proceeds of his timber sales; I can't view it in that light. Mr. Blomfield knows that it would take the proceeds of a great many farms to build a railway. Unfortunately for me, I do not own 362,125 acres of land on the North Pole road, with untold of mineral wealth in the bowels of the earth; and the pine trees on the surface, besides the fur bearing animals also. Were I the owner of such wealth, I would go into the building of wooden railways. It is admitted on all hands that railways raise the value of real estates 50 per ct. Now, take Mr. Blomfield's 362,125 acres, at a dollar per acre after the pine trees are sold, which, I believe, is about the price he asks, and take 50 per ct. of the above, would amount to the the sum of $181,062,50; take 45,000 for the railway, would show a profit to Mr. Blomfield's company of $136,062.50. Now, if the above is correct, and I think it is, would it not be better for him to build the railroad himself out of the company's funds, than asking the settlers for to pay it? For how could he expect settlers to go into his colony with a debt of $45,000 staring them in the face, besides their portion of the $100,000 already voted, As a friend to the back country, I strongly advise Mr. Blomfield to build the Haliburton railway, with what assistance he may get along the line; the $40,000 which Peterboro has voted, altogether with the $25,000 which the County voted will make a very good begining. Should he do so he would have the earnings of the road, and besides it would pay him indirectly. He should take a leaf from the Old Canada company's book. We don't find them asking the poor settlers to tax themselves for $45,000 to build railways to the company's lands, but we find them giving $100 annually for the best 25 bushels of wheat. Should Mr. Blomfield follow their laudible example and do the same, he would be looked upon as a father to his colony, and might before long, although no politician, have M. P. attached to his name. Mr. Blomfield thinks that I am an enemy to to the back country, his company, and himself, but I tell him that I am a friend to the back country, his company, and himself. Now, in conclusion, if Mr. Blomfield does not take my advice, I won't waste any more words with him. He may manage his affairs in any way he pleases, unless he attempts a raid on the County funds for the benefit of his colony. I think in the end he will acknowledge that I am a true friend to the back country, his colony, and himself.

I am Your Ob't Sevt.

There will be a public meeting in Percy, on the 6th of January, to consider the propriety of granting a bonus to the Grand Junction Railway.

ORIGINAL.

I

I have travell'd over the earth and sea,
Have heard the tempest roar on each of these;
I have seen what they call humanity,
Hell lives to starve, self interest to please;
And much humanity divided into male
Eternal, when the tide of life was bbbid,
Grasping the crust to honest labor due,
And recognized by fellow souls as true.

II

At night when I use's heartsome and pale
When all the toil and labor of the day
Has ceas'd, some know how lovely to inhale
Sweet air and linger till the morning ray,
Has tipp'd the Eastern Horizon with light.
Reflections of lov'd friends we now shall greet,
In that mysterious land where all meet meet.

III

Strike on our minds and make us feel more pure
Than if in revelry our night was spent
Remind us of the bright ethereal shore,
Deem'd or to bliss or lasting punishment,
Could we resist temptations endless call,
Could we but leave ambitious fatal thrall,
Cease from our greed are to the dust we fall.

IV.

Could we do this how blissf lly our lives
Would glide down this brief but worldly tide,
Aside rush the heart that rudely strives,
And save the desperate deed of suicide.
Oft could I point to disappointment drear,
Caus'd more by insult than the love of gain,
By some who wish'd a purpose to attain.

V

If those who pant for earthly riches had
Experience of the wolf who gnaws at the door,
I dream, instead of making them less bad,
'Twould make them worse than e'er they were before;
I really do not like to be severe,
I merely wish to draw a parallel,
To save them from the endless pangs of hell,

VI

A conscience pinch'd becomes a troubled core,
And broken faith can scarcely find a perch,
"Like Noah's dove as you know before,
Returned after making a long search,"
To fix its claws on other victims, but,
Charity begins at home you must know,
And to our cost we've often found it so.

CARDIFF.

For the "Examiner."

In Memory of Geo. Gillespie, Esq., Otonabee, who died, May 4th, 1866.

An inoffensive neighbour, he
Liv'd to the age of eighty-three,
Changes through life he tried,
He was a Miller to his trade,
In vonth he that profession led,
A Farmer ere he died.
In christian duty he was found,
Of good report, 'mong neighbour's round
For keeping the Lord's Day.
Each night before he went bed,
He with his family, worship led,
That God would bless, did pray,
When man a fourscore journey's run,
It's but as yesterday when done,
Life like a shadow pass;
Like flowers, man's seen at morning light,
But cut down often e'er the night,
Man's life is like the grass.
He now hath pass'd life's busy scene,
And numbered now 'mong things that's been
Is our departed friend:
We very soon will like him too
Be bidding all things here adieu,
Our life here soon will end;
But let us seek while life doth last,
E'er our probation day be past,
The rest above the sky:
E'er we with Jesus Christ can reign,
His spirit here we must attain,
And live as we would die.
Our friend that's gone, did in his day
Neglect not for to read and pray,
May all his family too,
Through life live as they'd like to die,
Prepared to meet their God on high,
When they bid earth adieu.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE 1871.

THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY gratefully acknowledge the support extended to their several publications throughout the length and breadth of Canada during the past year. Twenty-seven years have rolled by since the establishment of the GLOBE in Toronto.—From its first appearance to the present hour, its prosperity and influence have been always advancing; but at no time has it ever before held so firmly, or so satisfactorily, the position universally conceded to it, as the leading newspaper in British America,

The improvements recently made on THE WEEKLY GLOBE have immediately extended its popularity and circulation; and the publishers confidently claim that it is not only the most widely circulated Journal in British America, but that it is

The Largest,
The Handsomest,
The Most Carefully Conducted,
AND THE CHEAPEST WEEKLY PAPER
ON THIS CONTINENT.

During the coming year—which is likely to bring with it most important and exciting events affecting the political and material interests of the Dominion—the Editorial and News Departments will continue to be sustained with the ability and vigour that have gained for the paper its present position. A reliable summary of the Debates in the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial Legislatures will always be found in its weekly columns; and the news from all parts of the world will be published up to the latest hour of publication

The Agricultural Department,

That has given such universal satisfaction this year, and that is acknowledged by every farmer to be alone worth the subscription price of the paper—will be maintained in 1871 with undiminished interest under a still more efficient staff of editors and correspondents than before. SEVERAL NEW AND EXCITING TALES,

From the pens of popular authors, will appear during the year. No expense will be spared in securing the very latest intelligence by means of

SPECIAL TELEGRAPH DISPATCHES, MARKET REPORTS, PRICES CURRENT, AND GENERAL COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

From all parts of the world, will receive unremitting attention. Every department of the paper will be maintained in the highest state of efficiency.

Notwithstanding the great enlargement and improvement of the WEEKLY GLOBE that have recently been made, the subscription will continue to be only

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM,

Payable always in advance—and the following will be the

CLUB RATES FOR 1871.

A Club of Five Copies, one year		$ 9 00
Do	Ten do	17 00
Do	Twenty do	31 00
Do	Thirty do	45 00

And each additional copy over thirty, at One Dollar and Fifty Cents.

LARGE PRIZES are given to parties who get up Clubs, a list of which will be sent to any one who will apply for it by letter, or personally at the Office. Any one is at liberty to get up a Club on his own responsibility; and those desiring to do so, should send at once for a circular showing the terms.

Parties subscribing (in a Club or otherwise) before the 1st January, 1871, will have the paper sent to them up to 31st December, 1871 on payment of a year's subscription.

Each Club paper shall be addressed separately, and may be for any Post Office.

WILSON, BOWMAN & CO.,
Hamilton, Ontario,
MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED
LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambries with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

Drath of an Inebriate.

He's on me my gaudy—there—
Now give me a breath of the fresh, cool air;
I am dying at last—
I am going so fast—
But no one will care how cold I am cold—
They'll hurry me under the damp, dark mould,
And "only a pauper," they'll say as they pass,
"Another poor wretch is buried—alas!
That all were not living beneath the sod
Who set at naught the great laws of God,"

Bring me water, I pray;
I drank nothing else in my childhood's day,
How it ran by our door!—
How it kept on the shore!—
Oh! why did I drink from the poisoned bowl
That has wrecked my life and ruined my soul?
That had laid in the grave my lovely wife,
And filled my days with the bitterest strife?
Who are you here? Can you say me a prayer?
Do you think I can find forgiveness up there?

What a wretch I have been!
None but God knoweth how great is my sin.
But the bowl I've forsook—
Have you among you a book—
The book that tells of the "prodigal son?"
Ah! the life God gave me is almost gone—
The shadows are deepening, my eyes are dim—
I have heard your prayer and beautiful hymn;
I may be forgiven—God knows alone—
I shall trust, and hope to behold his throne.

I am going—good-bye!—
No one loves me down here—I hope that on high
My poor wife waits for me
By the great crystal sea—
She loved me till death, as true was our heart,
'Twill be sweet to meet her, never to part;
Where the poison cup will tempt me no more.
My life has been bitter—I'm glad 'tis most o'er.
Your faces look sad—oh! strive you to save
Some youth from despair and a vile drunkard's grave.

An Enthusiastic Admirer.—The New Orleans "Picayune says:—A countryman at the theatre, the other night, as the escort of some ladies, retired at an intermission and returned with a pound or two of peanuts wrapped in a paper, and two huge bananas sticking from his pocket. Just then, however, and before he had time to take his seat, one of the actresses, who had especially won his admiration, came to the foot-lights and warbled a beautiful melody. The full, rich voice, exquisite intonation, and breathing strains almost divine, completed the conquest of the countryman's heart, and, unable to restrain his delight, he heaved on the stage his peanuts, bananas and pocket handkerchief as a tribute to the fair enchantress. There was a momentary astonishment visible upon the faces on the stage, a single interval of hesitation, which was removed by the countryman's voice, full and clear, "Take 'em gal, by jingo, you're welcome."

Mark Twain's Horse "Jericho."—"I have a horse by the name of Jericho. He is a mare. I have seen remarkable horses before, but none so remarkable as this. I wanted a horse that would shy, and this fills the bill. I had an idea that shying indicated spirit. If it was correct, I have got the most spirited horse on earth. He shies at everything he comes across with the utmost impartiality. He appears to have a mortal dread of telegraph poles especially; and it is fortunate that these are on both sides of the road; because, as it is now, I never fall off twice in succession on the same side. If I fell on the same side always it would get monotonous after a while. The creature has shied at everything he has seen to-day except a hay-stack. He walked up to that with an intrepidity and recklessness that was astonishing. And it would fill any one with admiration to see how he preserved his self-possession in the presence of a barley sack. This dare-devil bravery will be the death of this horse some day. He is not particularly fast, but I think he will do all the work I want. He has only one fault; his tail has been chopped off, or else he has sat down on it too hard, some time or other, and has to fight the flies with his heels. This is all very well; but when he tries to kick a fly off the top of his head with his hind foot, it is too much of a variety. He is going to get himself into trouble that way some day. He reaches around and bites my legs too. I do not care particularly about that,—only I do not like to see a horse too sociable."

The saddest story that we ever read was that a child in Switzerland a pet boy—just as yours is reader—whom his mother, one bright morning, rigged out in a beautiful jacket all shining with silk and buttons, and gay as mother's love could make, and then permitted him to go out to play. He had scarcely stepped from the door of the "Swiss cottage," when an enormous eagle swooped him upon the ground and bore him to his nest, high up among the mountains, and yet within sight of the house of which he had been the joy. There he was killed and devoured, the eyrie being at a point which was literally inaccessible to man, so that no relief could be afforded. In tearing the child to pieces, the eagle so placed the gay jacket in the nest that it became a fixture there, and whenever the wind blew it would flutter, and the sun would shine on its lovely trimmings. For years it was visible from the lowlands, long after the eagle had abandoned the nest. What a sight it must have been for the parents of the little victim.

Absurd Affair.—A well-known citizen of Lavaca county, residing near Hope, was recently returning home under an extraordinary pressure of o-be-joyful. In crossing a ravine, his horse sympathisingly got the tangle-leg, and landed the rider bottom side upwards in the trough of the ravine, duly covered with the disengaged saddle. A couple of youths passing that way, discovered the unconscious victim of a capricious beverage, and, from appearances, concluded there was foul play, and that the man was dead. They accordingly repaired, in double quick, to the settlement and reported to a magistrate the discovery of a corpse in the ravine. A coroner's jury was instantly summoned, and the officer of the "New Union," accompanied by twelve jurymen, repaired to the spot to hold an inquest. The saddle was removed and the remark made, that the unfortunate victim was an elderly gentleman. "A what?" exclaimed the subject of benzine, with his eyes protruding far enough to answer the uses of a clothes press, "What am I? Can't be in hell, neither; for there's Deacon Brown and Uncle Bill." Not altogether well pleased with the situation for an elderly gentleman, on the succeeding day he took the pledge and enlisted in the Cold Water Army, and with the pride of ancient knights is now enabled to exclaim—"Richard is himself again."

The Bishops of the Diocese of Ontario is soon to take up his residence in Ottawa.

The Last Dance.

During the occupancy of the City of Moscow by the French army, a party of officers and soldier determined to have a military levee, held for this purpose above the deserted palace of the noble nobility. That night the city was on fire. As the sun set they began to assemble. The women who followed the fortunes of the French army were decorated for the occasion. The gayest and noblest of the army were there, and merriment in great over the crowd.

During the dance the fire rapidly approached them; they saw it coming but felt no fear. At length the building next to the one they occupied was on fire. Coming to the windows they gazed on the billows of fire which swept the city, and returned to their amusement. Again and again they left their pleasures to watch the progress of the flames. As length the dance ceased, and the necessity of leaving the scene of merriment was apparent to all. They were enveloped in a flood of fire, and gazed on with deep and awful solemnity.

At last the fire communicating to their own building, caused them to prepare for flight, when a brave young officer, named Conrad, waved his jewelled hand above his head, and exclaimed, "One dance more, and defiance to the flames.' All caught the enthusiasm of the moment, and "one dance more and defiance to the flames," burst from the lips of all. The dance commenced, louder and louder grew the sound of music, and faster and faster fell the pattering of foot-tops of dancing men and women, when suddenly they heard a cry: "The fire has reached the magazine; fly! fly for your life!" One moment they stood transfixed with terror; they did not know the magazine was there, and ere they recovered from their stupor the vault exploded; the building was shattered to pieces, and the dancers were hurried into a fearful eternity.

Christian Liberty.

With reference to the use of intoxicating drinks, without hesitation we say a christian's first duty is total abstinence. We are responsible to God for our example. We say by our "means or drink" destroy him for whom christ died. Yet how many are there in the Church of Christ to day, who plead their christian liberty as a reason for the sake of their fellow beings, but it is a sheer prostitution of the term to say Shall the Cristian plead for the liberty of doing that which tends to ruin the bodies and souls of his fellow-men?

The christian, on account of his profession, has no liberty that will permit and sanction conduct and customs that will injure or destroy others. But the very opposite is the case; for Paul says, "Take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours becomes a stumbling block to them that are weak; but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall, in his brother's way." Can that be Christ's Christianity which permits a liberty to use that which multiplies the occasions of intemperance, and in thousands of instances sets a trap for an immortal soul?

Not so did Paul understand it. He was willing to give up any enjoyment, however innocent in itself, rather than injure his brother and be unto him an occasion of falling. Now, if Paul considered it his duty to abstain from the use of certain meats and drinks, where there was danger of leading a brother to do that which he might think wrong, much more bounded is it my duty to abstain from the use of that wherein there is danger of leading a brother to do that which is wrong. And if it was a duty to abstain from "meat," which in itself was good, how much more binding and imperitive does the duty become, when it is not anything that is good which is to be abstained from, but that which is injurious and destructive to all around us!

Rest assured, christian friends, that when God maketh inquisition for blood, he will not hold that man guiltless whose example was the ruin of a neighbor or brother. Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, caused Israel to sin; and heavy indeed was the punishment that followed him and his house.

It might be rash to affirm that intemperance is the sole cause of the low state of piety in the American churches. But this is evident that, if the cause be honestly sought for, the drinking customs will be found on the very threshold of inquirey. The impression has long been deep on my own mind, that one grand reason why the Holy Spirit, is not poured out upon us is, that the needless and reckless indulgence on the part of many of the church, in these liquors, has grieved and offended the Divine Comforter.

The money wasted on these drinks brands us with the crime of sacrilege; our spending it unnecessarily shows that we can spare it; and if we can spare, we ought to bestow it in seeking extension of the Redeemer's cause in the world, and not that of the prince of darkness, as we now do. And remember if we spend on a vitiated taste, and in deference to a pernicious custom, what would supply our perishing brethren with the means of salvation, we are verily guilty of their death. If we "warn not the wicked, or send not to warn him, when we have it in our power to do so, his blood will be required at our hands." But we not only destroy by withholding the Gospel, but our example in using a poison begnites others to death. We walk on the verge of a precipice; others who have not our nerve follow us to the same summit, and are dashed to atoms, and yet, instead of receding, we continue to regale ourselves with all the sang froid of a Cain, who said, "Am I my brother's keeper,"

Surely it is time to amend our ways, and abstain from the fatal cup. Were the juice nectar of the fruit of Paradise, yet if its use is the occasion of crime, misery and death to others, it would be our duty, both as patriots, philanthropists, and Christians, to spurn with the deepest dismay so disastrous a bowl; and imperative as this duty viewed under such an aspect, appears, its obligation is increased a thousand fold when it is remembered that the drink in question, so far from being ambrosial, is a most deleterious poison. Wherever there is alcohol, it may be said that "that there is death in the pot," and while we sip it ourselves and commend the cup to others, we are in many instances guilty of murder and suicide; we betray our friends with a kiss, and at the same time, [illegible] shorten and terminate [illegible]

Death of an Intemperate.

It is a sad death—there is no comfort that dying pillow, no repose, no voice of friendship bidding adieu, no lighting up of joy in the departing spirit. It is a frequent death—four every hour go through its gates in our land. It is an early death—few drunkards live ont half their days. It is unlamented death—"I am glad he is gone," is the common saying as the bell announces the solemn event; even his family look for comfort now he is no more.

Let it be soberly contemplated. First, by the moderate drinker, it may be his turn. Second, by the vendor, he has filled the bottle and done the deed. Third, by the magistrate, he signed the license. Fourth, by the heedless parent, it may yet be the death of his own son. Fifth, if not too late by the drunkard himself, and let him escape as for his life. Habit hurries him onward, appetite hurries him onward, sickness hurries him onward. But Oh! his end! Yes, his awful end! Oh! reader, how can you remain idle and see your brother man approaching to that awful end every day? By and by these things will stare you in the face. If you have done your duty and warned your fellow man of his danger, it may be well with you; otherwise, depend upon it, you stand on slippery ground, and may have to share the same fate that awaits the Drunkard. Oh, professing Christians, how can you remain idle for one moment, and see your fellow man dropping into a drunkard's grave, and perhaps a drunkard's hell, without raising your voice to warn him of the awful danger and the final fate of the drunkards.—Guide

RADWAY'S PILLS.

In RADWAY'S PILLS, the true principle of purgation is secured—not alone to the office of dismissing the Bowels and excrements from the bowels, but those Bunches that are clogged or stopped in their passage through the Pores, Kidneys, Lungs, and all excreting and secreting functions; for if these excrementious secretions belonging to the skin, liver, lungs, kidneys, are intercepted in their escape, they become products of decay and decomposition, and must be purged from the living body through their proper channels before the purgative qualities of RADWAY'S PILLS [illegible] to the secretions of the [illegible] &c., whereas not one of the aforesaid functions is to set beyond the

NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE

Of all Wasting Scrofulous, and Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Nose Mouth, Throat, Ears, Head, LUNGS, Kidneys, Bladder.

THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent establishes a new principle of Cure of all Chronic diseases, and proves to the medical world that Consumption and other Scrofulous diseases are curable This fact has been demonstrated in over

One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption, where one lung or more severely cases was destroyed and dried up, and in over

500 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION

Dr. Radway, three years since, published to the world his analysis of the Blood in the several stages of consumption, showing in every stage, that when tubercles become deposited in the Lungs and other organs, as in the Kidneys, Liver, Spleen, Bronchial Glands, Intestines exhibiting Consumption of those organs, the Blood is thin, weak, pale, watery, and is deficient of such constituents as Fibrin Albumen, Phosphorus, and the rich red coloring tissues of the Blood Corpuscles. In the absence of these constituents in the Blood, the Blood is exhausted of strength and nourishment, and wherever there is inflammation, it deposits tubercles and decomposition, it has not the power to build in relation its natural constituents, and Ulcers, Sores, Tumors, Cancers, and Virulent Humors are formed, the presence of which causes inflammation, gathering, and consequent suppuration.

This, reader, is the true cause of the formation of Tubercles and Consumption. Dr. Radway was the first to announce the theory of the cause of Consumption and its kindred diseases, and prepared the Radway's Resolvent to supply the blood with such constituents it was deficient of, in these conditions of system, and to give it the nourishment and strength to build its natural constituents in solution. Dr. Radway's theory was published in England, France, Germany, and America, and was seized upon by the scientific men of both hemispheres. From his test medical books have been since published by medical writers, claiming to have discovered the cause of Consumption, but have failed to produce the remedy to cure. Dr. Radway was the first to produce the remedy to cure. Dr. Radway and only discoverer of a medicine that will cure, in Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent the public have a remedial agent that will cure Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs, Bronchial, Kidneys, Bladder, Womb, Throat, Glands, and Urinary Organs.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brahadi, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lawsack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

The Highest Price Paid for RAW FURS.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine

require to be more widely known than they are. As a cathartic, none was ever more believed or universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that as a remedy for the cure of disease it has been found more reliable and better in their settlement. It has become better known, its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the stomach and bowels, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a preservation against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with the antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or to more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the same districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torridity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co. Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

PRICE, $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

COUGHS COLDS CONSUMPTION CROUP BRONCHITIS

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among all the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the throat and chest, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with the antidote for them.

Select Poetry.

The Dervis and his Enemy.

A Turkish Legend.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

Near Babylon, in ancient times,
There dwelt an humble, pious Dervis
Who lived on alms, and spent his days
In exhortation, prayer and praise—
Devoted to the Prophet's service.

To him, one day, a neighbor sent
A gift extremely rare and pleasant:
A fatted ox of goodly size;
Whereat the grateful Dervis cries,
"ALLAH be praised for this fine present!"

So large a gift were hard to hide;
Nor was he careful to conceal it;
Indeed, a thief had chanced to spy
The ox as he was passing by,
And so resolved to go and steal it.

Now while he sought, with this intent,
The owners humble habitation,
He met a stranger near the place
Who seemed—to judge him by his face
A person of his own vocation.

And so the thief, as one who knew
What to a brother-rogue was owing,
Politely bade the man "good day,"
And asked him, in a friendly way,
His name and whither he was going?

The stranger bowed, and gruffly said,
"My name is SATAN, at your service!
And I am going, Sir, to kill
A man who lives near yonder hill—
A fellow called the 'Holy Dervis,'

"I hate him as a mortal foe;
For, spite of me and Nature's bias,
There's scarce a knavery in all these parts
But this vile Dervis, by his arts,
Has made him honest, chaste and pious!"

"Sir, I am yours!" the thief replied;
"I scorn to live by honest labor;
And even now I'm on my way
To steal an ox received to-day
By this same Dervis from a neighbor."

"I'm glad to see you said the fiend,
"You seem, indeed a younger brother;
And faith!—in such a case as this,
It certainly were much amiss
If we should fail to aid each other!"

While thus discoursing, sooth to say,
Each knave had formed the resolution
[Least ought occur to mar his plan]
To be himself the foremost man
To put his scheme in execution.

"For," said the thief unto himself,
"Before his work is half completed,
The Dervis, murdered where he lies,
Will rouse the neighbors with his cries,
And so my plan will be defeated!"

"If he goes first," the other thought,
His cursed ox may chance to bellow;
Or else, in breaking through the door,
He'll wake the Dervis with the roar,
And I shall fail to kill the fellow!"

So when they reached the hermit's house,
The devil whispered quite demurely,
"While I go in, you stand without;
My job dispatched—well go about
The other business more securely.'

"Nay," said the rober, "I protest
I don't at all approve the measure;
This seems to me the better plan:
Just wait till I have robbed the man,
Then you may kill him at your leisure."

Now when, at last, they both refused
To yield the point in controversy,
To such a height the quarrel rose,
From words and threats they came to blows,
And beat each other without mercy!

Perceiving that the devil's strokes
Surpassed his own in weight and number,
The thief—before he took to flight—
Cried, "Murder!—help!" with all might,
And roused the Dervis from his slumber.

"Thieves!—thieves!" cried Satan—going off,
(To figure at some tavern-revel)
And so—by this fraternal strife—
The Dervis saved his ox and life,
Despite the robber and the devil.

Choice Literature.

"Time Works Wonders."

It was the bitterest of all December's bleak and bitter days. The white fingers of the driving snow were tapping sharp and furiously at the crystal surface of the plate glass windows; the wind shrieked pitilessly through the keen and piercing air; and the thermometer in the hall was rapidly lowering its crimson vein towards zero.

"It's dreadfully cold!" mused Mrs. Angell, as she sat with one slippered foot on the fender, and her finger ornamented, with two emeralds, a diamond, and a gaudy "regard ring," between the leaves of her book. "I'm glad I am not compelled to be out of doors on such a day as this."

And she looked complacently round at the elegantly furnished little boudoir where she sat. A handsome octagonal room, it was panelled in pink velvet and gold with a heavy tracery of gold vine-leaves, around the ceiling by way of a cornice, it had all the charm of novelty. The fire, heaped high with coal, kept up a low crackling sound; the scarlet-winged lory swung to and fro in the ring of his cage between the curtains, and an asthmatic little poodle nodded sleepily on the hearth-rug.

Mrs. Angell herself was a little plump, pretty brunette of about thirty, with hard, brilliant black eyes; hair brushed in the fashionable style, away from a square low forehead; and lips that, although rather thin, were of the brightest vermilion. Her dress was an elegant negligee; and her hands were miniature jewel stands for the display of expensive rings.

"Mamma!"

She looked up quickly, and held out her arms as a rosy little girl of about nine, the fac-simile, on a small scale, of herself, came bounding into the room.

"What is it, Nina, mamma's little pet?"

"It's Miss Elmer, mamma. She says, could she see you just for a moment?"

"It is ten o'clock, my child; your lessons should have begun long ago."

"But Miss Elmer has just came, mamma."

The handsome olive brow contracted ominously.

"Tell Miss Elmer that I will see her."

Little Nina tripped away to deliver her message. A minute afterwards there was a low tap at the door, and Juliet Elmer, the daily governess, entered.

She was a tall, gracefully formed girl, apparently about twenty-two or three years of age, dressed in black but had evidently bidden adieu to its best days some time since. Generally she might have been rather pale, but there was a deep, vivid carmine spot on either cheek just now, that told of recent agitation or excitement. Her eyes of the deepest hazel, large and liquid, and her hair was of a warm sunshiny brown. But it was her mouth, red, sensitive and mobile, that constituted her best feature; every emotion that stirred the surface of her mind seemed mirrored in the unconscious movement of her lips.

"I am surprised, Miss Elmer," began Mrs. Angell, after she had recognized the governess's presence, by a stiff inclination of her head. "Nine is your hour, and here it is after ten, and not a lesson commenced.

"Nina, call your little brothers and sisters immediately, and tell them to proceed to the school-room. Sufficient time has already been lost.

She opened her book once more, as if to dismiss the subject and the governess together; but Miss Elmer still stood by the door, nervously playing with shabby strings of her crape bonnet.

"Mrs. Angell," she said, in a low, hurried tone of voice, "I am afraid I must beg you to excuse me to-day, for—"

"Indeed, Miss Elmer, I shall do no such thing," sharply interrupted Mrs. Angell. "If you wish to be relieved from the duties of your situation, I beg you will say so at once."

"I do not, madam: I do not, indeed," faltered Juliet, growing scarlet in her embarrassment and mortification. "We could not live without the money you are so good as to give me; but I should esteem it a great favor to be excused to-day; for my mother is very much worse, and I have no one to leave with her."

"I am surprised that you should ask me such a question, Miss Elmer," said Mrs. Angell, drawing herself up. "Of course, I am very sorry for that worthy person, your mother; but I'm not in any way responsible for her illness, nor do I see why it should inconvenience me; or interfere with my children's lessons.—They lost three days last week for the same reason, and at their age every lesson is of importance. It is quite out of the question, Miss Elmer—quite out of the question, I assure you."

Julia stood pale and irresolute.

"But my mother is dangerously ill, madam."

Mrs. Angell turned a new page in her book, and went on reading with a face of placid interest. Juliet came a step or two nearer.

"Mrs. Angell, I must go to my mother."

"Just as you please, Miss Elmer; only of course you understand that if you go, you forfeit your quarters salary. I dare say I can obtain plenty of governesses without mothers to take up half their time."

The blood rushed in a hot tide to Juliet Elmer's brow at this cruel stab.

"Mrs. Angell!" she pleaded, with a deep drawn sob,—"Mrs. Angell——" but the lady held up her jeweled hand deprecatingly.

"I must beg that there may be an end to this altercation, Miss Elmer," she said, coldly.

"You are aware how nervous I am, and that a scene is beyond everything in my aversion. Go, or stay, as you please—you understand my aversion on the subject."

Juliet was silent. For an instant she was half resolved to rush from the house, never again to set eyes on this hard hearted, elegantly attired tyrant.

But then she remembered the quarter which expired that very week, and that of the many comforts and necessities that the money was to purchase for her consumptive mother—the rent that must be paid—the little debts that were daily accumulating round their poverty-stricken home: and Juliet Elmer felt that she was completely in Mrs. Angell's power as if she had been bound in iron chains at the hard, handsome brunette's feet.

She threw up her hands with a despairing gesture, and then her face settled into white, uncomplaining pallor.

"Oh, Mrs. Angell, you are very cruel to me; but God is over us all."

That was all she said, as she went away towards the school-room with the strange mechanical motion of one walking in her sleep.

How long the short December day seemed! How slowly the hands of the school-room clock moved over their dial! Juliet could almost have declared they stood absolutely still.

"Are you ill, Miss Elmer?" enquired little Nina Angell, looking up, as the governess stooped over the French exercise book; "your hands are so hot."

"Ill? yes; I am heart-sick!" said Juliet, almost involuntarily; then, recollecting herself, she pressed her lips to the child's fresh cheek murmuring, "Dear little Nina, may this trial never come to you."

Nina returned the kiss with warm, child-like affection. She was fond of the pale, gentle governess, who was so different from her brilliant mamma.

It was quite dark at five, the hour at which Miss Elmer was released from her school-room bondage; and her hands trembled with nervous agitation as she hurriedly assumed her shabby outer garments. Nor was the weather out of doors at all reassuring to her state of mind. The snow had turned to dull, driving sleet, the pavements were as slippery as glass, and the keen wind penetrated her thin wrappings with its first blast. But Juliet was in too great haste even to think of herself as she sped hurriedly along shrinking from every passer in the street.

Just as as she came opposite a brilliant gaslight, however, the roll of music slipped from her hand. She stooped to recover it.

"Juliet! Miss Elmer!"

She gazed, white and trembling, at the fashionable-looking young man who had seized both her hands in his.

"Paul Clay! can it be possible that this is you?"

"Why shouldn't it be possible, Juliet? My dear little friend, who on earth would have thought of meeting you in the streets this dismal evening? Where did you come from? and where are you going?"

For a minute or two Juliet had been back in the bright scenes of two years ago; this question brought her back into the forlorn present.

"Mamma has just died, and I am going to my home—if home it can be called."

Things had changed, sadly changed, since people were wont to laugh at the pretty, prosperous belle about Paul Clay's manifest admiration.

The two years that he had spent among the palm trees and minorets of Asia and Arabia had changed the rich merchant's daughter into a fatherless orphan, who earned her daily bread by going out as a "daily governess!"

She told Paul these things with quiet dignity, as he walked by her side, carrying the little roll of music as deferentially as if it had been Queen Victoria's sceptre. How she longed for a little more light to see his face as she spoke!

"Why did I not know this? why did you not write to me?" he asked, in a husky tone of voice.

"We did not know where you were," she said simply; "and besides——"

"Besides what?"

"I had no right to ask your aid or sympathy."

"Juliet, you knew better," he exclaimed, passionately. Juliet, if I had——"

She put her hand gently upon his arm.

"We live here. Will you come up?"

He followed her silently up the dark narrow stairway, with his strong heart beating like a drum within his bosom.

She stopped on the third floor.

"Juliet, have you come to this?"

She opened the door, and motioned him in without replying.

"Mother—dearest mother!"

There was no voice nor sign of recognition from the quiet figure stretched on the little bed. Juliet hurriedly lighted the candle with fingers that trembled, she knew not why. In the same instant Paul Clay sprang forward as if to intercept the sight.

"Juliet—my poor Juliet!"

No more penury, no more pain or grief for the pilgrim who had reached the gates of the Eternal City. In the stormy tumult of the tempestuous December day she had died there, all alone!

Like a marble statue, Juliet stood gazing down at her mother's serene dead face gazing with dilated eyes and white quivering lids, while Paul Clay's protecting arm upheld her tottering figure.

"Juliet, my dearest," he murmured, in a voice chocked with emotion, "this is no time to speak to you of the dearest wish of my heart; but you are alone—I am with you! Juliet, henceforward I have no wish or care in life that can be separated from you!"

Juliet seemed scarcely to hear him; indeed she appeared quite unconscious of his presence, even though she could not have stood upright without his assistance.

"Mother!" she moaned very feebly, "mother, and I was not beside you! Oh, that cruel, cruel woman! If I live a thousand years, I never, never will forgive her for what she has this night brought upon me!"

And Juliet Elmer fainted in the strong arms that was as tender as a woman's touch!

* * * * *

It was a brilliant March day, just ten years after the dreary night when Mrs. Elmer died, and Juliet was sitting—a fair, blooming matron—in the superbly furnished drawing-room of her home in Belgravia, with two or three golden-haired children playing around her feet. The eldest, a lovely child of seven, leaning against her shoulder, with one hand playing with the diamond arrow that sparkled in her dark tresses, had blue, wishful eyes like Paul Clay's; the others were like her—dark and rosy.

"Mamma, I don't want a governess," pouted little Paul. "I had rather study with you."

"But mamma has not time to hear your lessons," said Juliet smiling. "And Aunt Rosa thinks you will like this lady very much."

"What is her name?"

"I don't know: my dear boy; she will be here in a minute."

As she spoke, the door was thrown open, and Mrs. Clay rose with a gentle reassuring smile to greet the applicant for the situation of governess, who advanced slowly in—a dark-eyed, haggard woman with hollow cheeks and dress of worn black silk. She started back as her eyes met Mrs. Clay's sweet features.

"It is Juliet Elmer."

And Juliet knew that she was standing face to face with the widow of the late John Angell, the bankrupt broker, whose suicide had been nine days wonder in the city, but a few months since.

The moment for Juliet's revenge had come. As she stood there, looking at the wan, haggard woman, the past seemed to rise up before her, as if it had been but yesterday—the trials, the woe, the agony, that she had lived down, and well-nigh forgotten. Ah, times were far now!

Mrs. Angell cowered and shrunk before Juliet's clear, calm eye, as if she expected a scathing rebuke—a scornful dismissal. But as Juliet saw her white cheeks and worn features, a heavenly pity came into her heart, soft as the fluttering wing of the white dove, Peace; and she felt no sensation but the mildest compassion towards the woman had once trodden her heart in the dust.

"Sit down," she said gently, drawing forward a chair. "You must be very weary."

"You—you never will engage me for your governess!" faltered Mrs. Angell, tasting now, in all its bitterness, the cup she had once held relentlessly to Juliet's lips.

"Why should I not?" asked Juliet, calmly. "The children are quite ready for their first lesson, Mrs. Angell!"

And she never alluded, by word or glance, then or at any other time, to the melancholy past. But when Mrs. Angell took her leave that night, she bent and pressed her lips almost passionately to Juliet's hand.

"If you had turned me away I must have starved," she murmured incoherently. "But you have forgiven me. Oh, it is only just that I should suffer now!"

When little Paul came to his mother's side that night to learn his daily Bible verse from the treasured volume on her knee, she turned the leaves over with a grave absent face.

"Mamma," said the little fellow, checking her hand, "you have lost the place. My last verse was in Psalms."

"I know it, Paul; but here is another verse that I wish you to learn to-night, and remember as long as you live."

And the boy, bending towards the words indicated by his mother's slender finger, read in low reverent tones:—"For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you."

Buried Alive By a Shell.

Among the dismal incidents of the war, one is related by a French correspondent, which was attended by circumstances of peculiar horror. It occurred at Strasbourg, during the seige, and the hero of it was a wealthy merchant there. This gentleman, on the approach of the enemy, sent away his wife and children, but could not himself be prevailed upon to abandon his property. Of this he possessed a great deal. He had been toiling for many years to gain the money which had bought his warehouses and shops, and several of these, on the breaking out of the war, were full of valuable goods. The most bulky articles he secured as well as he was able, and, taking his plate and jewels to the cellar of one of his houses, he prepared that place as his strong hold. Remote as he considered it from the line of fire, and well concealed from pillage, he thought here to weather the coming storm in safety. To this end, he laid in a stock of provisions, and, with one or two trusty dependents, prepared to endure the interruption of his business and the misfortunes of his country with what patience he could. For the first eight days of the bombardment, all went well. No shot or other missile disturbed that immediate neighborhood, and although the babel of noise and destruction elsewhere was indescribable, no harm came to the citizen's sanctuary. On the ninth day there came a change. A shell dropped in the street before the dwelling, and broke all the windows on the first floor. The merchant now thought it time to retreat to the cellar. Hence, on the tenth day, taking all his supplies of food and all the books he could find, he bade farewell to daylight, and descended to the vaults below his house; and here, while the din of the battle went on ceaselessly over his head, the worthy merchant passed his days and evenings in reading by the light of a petroleum lamp.

A few days passed in safety and comparative quiet. But on Saturday, about noon, while the recluse was taking his dinner, there came suddenly an appalling crash overhead. The walls above were tumbling into ruin; a part even of the cellar walls crumbled in; there was a horrid cry; then choking dust, silence, and utter darkness. A tremendeous shell had fallen through the roof of the house above, and, exploding, had scattered devastation around. The merchant ran as best he could to the stairway. It was completely blocked up and filled by parts of fallen walls. Terrified, he sought everywhere for a crevice of light, but in vain. The cellar was completely immured, and shut in from the outer world. The capture shouted aloud for extrication. His voice came back to him muffled and dull, with no answering sound to give hope of its penetrating the mass of masonry by which he was surrounded. The merchant now realized that he was buried alive. He felt that for him there was less hope than there sometimes is in such cases. For, in the endless roar of strife above, with dozens of unfortunates killed and maimed every hour, who would think of, or take the trouble to search for, any single man? Yet before the explosion he had had companions, and the means of making light. He groped swiftly to a spot where he remembered placing some additional lamps. With trembling hands he succeeded in lighting one, and looked about him. Of his three companions two were missing,—buried, perhaps, in the debris. The other lay prostrate near a wall close by, quite lifeless. He had been struck on the temple with falling stones, and killed instantly. The situation was even more awful than at seemed before. To be buried alive was dreadful; but it was horible almost beyond endurance to be buried alive with the dead.

Some days of agony now passed. The hapless prisoner had fits of terror, of strange fury, and of exhaustion. Then he began to work with all the energy of dispair. His only hope, he thought, was to clear the rubbish from the staircase. If he failed to do this, the cellar would be his tomb. He pulled frantically to escape from so miserable a fate; but the walls crumbled continually, and each brick he took away made others fall. Every now and then he was threatened with instant destruction by the ruins. Finally his lamp went out for want of oil, and he was left in total and irremediable darkness. For a time after this he abandoned all hope. But the instinct of self-preservation again asserted itself, and again he tore desperately at the stones and mortar. He had been working, as he estimated, more than two days, when the ceiling fell in. A brick struck him on the head, and he fainted. For a long time he remained insensible—how long he could not tell. At last he opened his eyes, and above him he saw the stars. It was night, and he was alive, although hemmed in by rubbish, and dared not stir for fear of producing a fresh fall of masonry. In lingering agony he waited until daylight. The dawn came at last, and, lighting the surrounding desolation with streams of rosy light. With infinite caution and pain the merchant succeeded in drawing himself up to a beam of the ceiling, and thence, after some time, in making his escape. Once free, he crouched, as he says, by the ruins of his home, and wept for more than two hours. He had spent nearly a week in the cellar. Like a prisoner of Chillon, his head, which had not a single grey hair before, during that week turned completely white; and he declares to have aged more in those few days than in the previous twenty years.

There may have been events more painful and disastrous than this during the war, especially as regards their ultimate catastrophes. But it is difficult to conceive of human suffering more agonizing than this must have been, thus closed in as he was from the world by an impassable wall, with darkness and a corpse for company, and having only a lingering death to look forward to, infinitely more terrible than any conceivable swift destruction. It is consolatory to reflect that, at all events, the unlucky hero of so romantic an episode survived to tell the tale, although he finds himself completely destitute, and forced to begin the world again without a penny.—*N. Editorial Items.

TO OUR PATRONS.

With many thanks for your kind and generous support during the past year, we beg again to remember you with our usual greetings.

Merry Christmas is just upon us, and ere we have an opportunity of addressing you again, many a pleasant smile, cheerful welcome, and joyous meeting will have taken place, amid the many happy homes in this Town and County.

Numerous changes have taken place since December 25th, 1869. In the far off land, war, cruel unrelenting war, is devastating sunny France. And many a then happy home in France and Prussia, will this Christmas be draped in mourning.

In our young Dominion peace and plenty abound. The Great Ruler of all events has left us to enjoy the fruits of our labour, without any one to molest. Let us sincerely pray that this may long be our lot.

Our Country, too, has had a reasonably abundant harvest. There is no want in our borders, and with a little liberality towards a few infirm or unfortunate, all may be happy.

Again thanking our readers and patrons for their liberality to us, and generous forbearance, we wish them all a MERRY CHRISTMAS.

HARRY WINCH has some of the best Beef and Mutton the county can produce. Go and see his stall of Xmas meats, and don't forget to take a roast home.

The December number of the Manufacturer and Builder, is one of the best numbers of that valuable perodical yet issued.

RE-UNION.—Don't forget the re-union to-night. The last time we were favored with one it was a decided success, and from all we can learn this one promises to be so too. Let all go to the Music Hall to-night.

PRINCE OF WALES L. O. L., No. 484.—At the monthly meeting of L. O L. No. 484 the following officers were duly elected:—Bro. John Smith, W. M.; Bro. M. Dunsford, D. M.; Bro. W. E. James, Chaplain; Bro. W. Brunscombe, Treasurer; Bro. Robert Larmour, Secretary. Committee:—Bros. W. J. Larmour, W. Robinson, M. Johnson, J. Howden and J. Preston.

At the last Council meeting Mr. E. C. Hill petitioned to have the taxes on the Music Hall abated. This is as little as the Council can do for the number of times the hall has been placed at their disposal for public meetings. Mr. Hill has also given it for concerts for charitable purposes, for nothing, and at a nominal rate for the reunions in connection with the Grammar and Union School. The taxes would not do more than repay him for lighting and heating it on such occasions.

A HUGE PORKER.—On Saturday last, Mr. John Sullivan, of Douro, brought into this market a hog that weighed 710 lbs., for which he received the sum of $60. The animal, we believe, was two years and a-half old. Mr. Sullivan is noted for raising large hogs. This is the fourth or fifth very large one he has sold in Peterboro'. Two weeks ago he sold four others for which he received $97. Last year he sold four hogs that weighed 1080 lbs., and for which he received $150. Beat this who can.

Almost a Fire.

On Friday last, the engine house was discovered on fire. When first seen the floor was considerably damaged. Had the flame gained headway, the whole block would have been consumed, as at present there are no means for extinguishing a large fire. It has been again, and again, pointed out that the engine now in use is not sufficient for the object intended. Ten times the price of a good engine has been lost by fire within a year or two, which would have been saved if we had possessed a good steam fire engine. The voice of the people and of the Council too, is to the effect that we are not yet able to expend $70,000 to $100,000 in expensive water works. A largely signed petition of the Ratepayers was before the Council, praying them to provide a steam engine and tanks, and if needed nine-tenths of the ratepayers would have signed it. This petition has been left somewhat in the back ground in hopes of forcing the people into water works.—In these things the old Council have been remiss. Neither an engine nor tanks can yet be seen, while we are hourly exposed to all the danger and loss of a conflagaration that may result from the carelessness of a smoker—the match of some thoughtless boy—or a defect in a stove pipe or chimney. We are informed that an overheated stove in the Lock-Up was the cause of the fire on Friday. Do the ratepayers know the hour in which some such an affair may cause the destruction of a whole block?

The old Council has expired without doing any thing to remedy an evil that has existed for years. Let us hope that the new Council will consist of material not afraid to take up the subject of a steam fire engine, and water tanks, and supply them at once. The ratepayers expect this to be done.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The business of the session is progressing slowly. In a day or so, members will return home for the holidays. John Sandfield is beginning to fear coming events. Mr. Blake the leader of the opposition is so evidently the superior of John Sandfield, as a gentleman, as a legislator, and as an honest upright man, with no axes to grind; no hangers on to provide for; no corruption to atone for; that there is absolute certainty that he will soon take the lead of affairs in Ontario.

The School Bill will hardly receive any attention till after the holidays. Several bills relating to law reforms, trial of controverted elections, and some other minor matters have been introduced.

THE WAR.

Very little change is yet manifest in the state of affairs at Paris. The French are reported as having made a very successful sortie, and that another is daily expected. The French Generals are concentrating as much as possible, and although Prussian advantages are reported, the taking of Paris is not certain. The Russian question is not urged very strongly, but no part of the complaint of Russia is abated so that the Eastern Question only remains in abeyance waiting a favorable moment. In Spain matters are very quiet. The Italians are rejoicing over their liberty, there is no desire manifested to drive the pope out of the EternalCity. During the great struggle in France, Italy and Spain will be quiet.

Union School.

The examinations were completed yesterday. There were not as many visitors as there should be on such occasions; yet the school was not forgotten. The pupils of the Second Division of girls presented their teacher, Mrs. Flaville, with a very handsome butter dish.

Miss Curtis who has resigned the Second Division, boys, also received a very nice Work-box, and Miss Borrowman a lot of little presents.

The school is really in a very satisfactory state. Two new faces will be found among the teachers after the holidays, but under Mr. Dixon's happy and successful management, all will go on in the most satisfactory manner. At the present time, Peterboro' may well be proud of her Grammar and Union School.

The Rev. W. M. Punshon preached in the Wesleyan Methodist Church here, on Sabbath evening. The house was crowded to excess, all the churches providing their quota for the occasion.

His text was taken from Phillipians 3rd chapter and 7th verse, "Those things which were gain to me I counted loss for Christ," &c. He delivered a very excellent and eloquent sermon, showing no squeamishness in dealing with the different characters in the churches who pride themselves on their pious ancestors—their baptismal regeneration—their attendance on sacrements—their respect for the law, or dependence on duties performed. As to his abilities as a preacher, no two, scarcely, of his hearers will be of one mind. We only wish all our preachers were so bold to lay the axe to the root of the tree.

On Monday evening he delivered one of his lectures, subject, "The Huguenots" to a full house. We believe Mr. Punshon is more at home as a lecturer than a preacher, although we would not seek to detract from him as to the latter. He possesses a good memory, a nice selection of words, the power of grouping in a very pleasing manner; he has a clear distinct utterance, and excels in recitations.

The death of the scholar alluded to, is that of Jemima Smith, who died on the 11th of July, last. She had been for a length of time confined to her home by illness, yet with all the tenacity of youth clinging to life and shrinking from the thought of death, She eventually gave her heart to the Saviour and was led to say:—"Not mine, but Thy Will be done." Her farewell to her parents and sisters was most touching and affecting, and their promise to meet her in heaven, increased her joy, and she passed triumphantly away from earth to heaven. May all our Sabbath School scholars, when called away, have the same sweet assurance of pardon, and peace with God, of joyful hope of blissful immortality, and their last end will be like hers, that of joy and triumph.

And here we would speak of the recent departure—we trust from earth to heaven—of one of the most ardent, zealous and faithful friends of Sabbath Schools, which it is our lot to meet. We allude to our late friend and co-laborer, John W. Gilmour, Esq. Though connected with another School, and a different branch of the Church of Christ, his interest in, and love for the sabbath school cause, was so strong that he regarded not the dividing lines between Church and Church, but gladly welcomed all as followers and friends of the Saviour, who were alike warmly engaged in this humble, yet great work. We mourn his loss as a bereavement of this cause. It was so sudden. We certainly thought he had yet a work to do. But the Lord had need of him, and The Lord's appointment is His servant's hour." The Master has given welcome to His good and faithful servant, and our hearts keep approving and our lips repeating the blessed reward.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
Thy battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Masters's joy."

Elections and Nominations.

ASHBURNHAM.

On Monday, Messrs. R. D. Rogers, and A. H. Campbell, were nominated for the Reeveship—and Messrs. Ludgate, Sutherland, Denne, Burnham, J. Z. Rogers, H. Bennett and Calcutt, as Councillors. There will therefore be a contest in the village this year.

TOWN

W. H. Scott, Esq., was re-elected by acclamation.

This, we believe, is the sixth time for Mr. Scott to be elected to the highest civic honors of the town.—He has been twice opposed without success—in 1866 and 1870.

Messrs. Toole, Edmison and Rutherford, were re-elected in the North Ward.

The nominations in the South Ward are, Messrs. Smith, English and O'Beirne, old Councilors, W. Lundy and Jas. Ryan new men:

In the Centre Ward, Messrs. Stevenson, Doharty and Helm, old Councilors; and Jas. Menzies and David Henthorn, new men.

In the East Ward, Messrs. J. F. Dennistoun, J. J. Lundy and R. A. Morrow, old Councillors; and J. O'Donnell, A. B. Kidd, John Brown and J. R. Ormond, new men.

It is useless to speculate as to results. We will be in a better position to tell after the polling. Let us hope that the best men may win.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

Mr. Morrison, Reeve, and all the old Council, were re-elected by acclamation. They are Wm. Morrison, Reeve, and John Waterman, Richard Nurse, Wm. Rutherford and Jas. Collins.

SMITH.

Mr. Walton is re-elected by acclamation. Mr. M. Sanderson opposes Mr. Garbutt, for Deputy Reeve. The old Councillors and Messrs. George Elliott, and George Fitzgerald are also nominated.

OLONABEE.

Messrs. Millar and Blezard, are re-elected by acclamation. The old Councillors are all candidates, and Mr. H. H. Burnham.

ASPHODEL.

Mr. Coughlin is re-elected by acclamation, and Mr. Brown is opposed by Mr. Robert Harrison.

DUMMER.

Mr. Choate retired, and Mr David Rose was re-elected in his place. There are eight Candidates for Councillors.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

Messrs. H. Collins, R. Laing and John Tully, are candidates for Reeve. Messrs. George Birney, Geo. Tully, Wm. Robson and Wm. Brownscombe, were elected Councillors.

HARVEY.

Mr. Wood is opposed by Mr. Lewis Parker for Reeve.

BURLEIGH.

For Reeve, Messrs. John Young, Caleb Lousley and Dr. Clegg.

GILES STONE.

Edward Sanderson, Richard Spencer and John McDonald, were elected by acclamation.

PERSONAL:—We understand that the Rev. D. J. McDonald, preached his farewell sermon to his congregation on Sabbath last. He leaves Peterboro, very soon to assume the pastorate of a church in Toronto. Mr. McDonald has labored very acceptably to his people in Peteboro during 4 years. He is a young man of good ability, a clear and forcible speaker, an independent thinker, and somewhat ahead of his time and generation in church matters. Although in nowise connected with Mr. McDonald by church affinities, he has our best wishes for his happiness and spiritual progress in the new sphere to which he is removing. The Old Kirk in Peterboro, will find it difficult to supply his place. The congregation, we understand presented him with a gold watch and chain before his departure.

On Monday Evening, last, the teachers and children connected with the St. Andrews Sabbath School, in this town, met in the School Room adjoining the church, and presented Mrs. Macdonnell with a "Little Wanzer" Sewing Machine, and Walnut Case, accompanied by a short address, to which Rev. Mr. Macdonnell, on behalf Mrs. Macdonnell, replied in very affectionate and appropriate terms. Mrs. Macdonnell carries with her the affection of all the children and teachers of the school, and the best wishes of the congegation.

The Late County By-law.

The decease of the late By-law in favor of the Grand Junction and Haliburton Railway, has not satisfied the opponents thereof. They are determined if possible to prevent the return of men who voted for it no matter how honestly or conscientiously they acted in doing so.

The Ratepayers are very chary, and wisely so, about taxing themselves for almost anything. In some of the old Townships they would rather pay $20 for mending a broken waggon, sleigh or cutter, than laying out $10 on repairing the roads.—And they would rather spend six extra days in lost time getting out and in to their places than work one day to fill up the gullies, or remove boulders out of the way. A dollar raised in taxes for good roads is considered a loss never to be recalled—but hardly a sigh is heard about paying $20 for repairs necessitated by bad roads. If the Town would build gravel roads, railroads and bridges, they would be fine things, but don't ask the County to pay a cent for them.

The Railroad already built by the Town at an expense of about $150,000 has enhanced the value of property within twenty miles of the town, at least 25 per cent—and in facilities of getting out and in, and in real comfort, about 25 per cent more,—Property in the townships of Smith, North Monaghan, Douro and Otonabee, can now be sold at prices equal to that realised for land on the shores of Lake Ontario or Lake Erie. Cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, butter, hay, oats, wool, pork, &c., bring as high prices in Peterboro', as in any of the front Towns. This would not be so, but for the facilities of transport, poor though they be, towards what we should have.

But if we had the Grand Junction to Belleville, with the extension to Georgian Bay sure, for it never can stop at Peterboro,' if built it must go to Georgian Bay, Peterboro' would soon rival the cities. The population would become doubled, yea trebbled in a few years. The demand for all sorts of produce would be so much greater, and farmers would reap the benefit. This they are slow to see, because two twenty-five cent pieces appear to be placed over the eyes of a few, and of course prevent them.

Such men as the Reeves of Otonabee, Ashburnham, the Deputy Reeve of Smith, the Reeves of Asphodel, Burleigh, and others, who voted for the By-law, can see farther than others, and acted on the principle that during their term of office they would do what was best for their Townships, although a few croakers might find fault; and those men deserve the praise, not the blame of their constituents.

The vote of the people being in favor of the By-law it did seem as if the County Council should have passed it without a moment's hesitation. They did not however, for reasons best known to themselves. It is argued that only very few voted for it, It may also be said only very few voted against it. But may it not be reasonably held that all who staid at home and did not vote, were in favor of the By-law. Every publicity was given to it.—The Ratepayers understood the matter, and if they staid at home and allowed it to be carried by a majority of votes polled, then we reasonably conclude that all who staid away were in favor of it. No other conclusion can be drawn.

In the Township of Smith, out of 500 votes, only 114 were polled. Why did not the other 400 voters go and record their names—and if they did not, was their Deputy Reeve Mr. Garbutt, wrong in holding that the majority of them were in favor of it? Certainly not. We are told:—"We do not want a railroad. We do not want to sell our farms, and therefore any increase of price does not, and would not affect me."

This is a great fallacy. A man derives a great deal of satisfaction from contemplating his wealth or property; the property that he has made with his own hands. And if in considering it he finds it worth $5000 instead of $3,000, or $15,000 instead of $10,000, he sits down or leans back in his easy chair, with a greater glow of satisfaction in contemplating the $5,000 or $15,000 than the $3,000 or $10,000. What man would say that even in this respect the increase of price does not affect him. But what about the future? This man or that man does not want to sell: their sons may. How many have sold out during the past year and with their full purses gone to Kansas, or the far West? Did the increased price of property not affect them?—Your sons may desire a change too. Large families induce many a Canadian farmer to sell his small farm at a large price and go West to get a farm for each of his sons—in such cases are not $40 to $60 an acre better than $20 or $30. And what but the vicinity to a good market, good roads, good schools, and contiguity to railroad communication, enables the seller to realize so much: In the face of these things who will say, that railroads do not benefit them.

Douro, Ennismore, Smith and Dummer would be largely benefitted by the Grand Junction. More so than any other part of the County. Yet these people are so short sighted as to oppose the road and By-law.

In discussing the building of the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges, it was argued that they were for the benefit of the town, instead of Enniamore. But in passing through Ennismore the week after the bridges were open for traffic, butchers were in buying up sheep, lambs, hides, everything there was for sale, and what boasting then? Ennismore has become a Garden of Eden at once. Take away the bridges and a wail would be heard through the whole Township. Yet when talking about the Township having to tax itself for those bridges; they were of little or no use, to hear them speak. It is just so with the Railway schemes. They are good things, very good indeed, but don't tax us for them. Let the Town build the Railway, and pay the taxes, Mr. Garbutt and others deserve praise for their manliness in acting consistently in supporting the Railway By-law. And it is yet a matter for consideration whether the Council cannot be compelled to pass it, since the majority of the votes polled were in favor of it. The men who oppose it may feel they are doing right, and we believe in many cases they do feel it; but we believe they are short sighted.

Hearth and Home is an excellent family paper—published by Orange Judd & Co., New York.

North Monaghan.

The Nomination at the Town Hall, was held on Monday the 19th inst., when the following Councillors were returned by acclamation:—Messrs. Geo. Birney, Geo. Tully, Wm. Robson and Wm. Brownscomb.

For Reeve, the following Nominations were made:—Henry Collins, Robert Laing and John Tully, Esqrs.

Commencing the proceedings, the Returning Officer remarked that for the twelfth time he had now the honor of opening the proceedings similar to the present, but never during that lengthened period did any thing like the same gloom rest over them as at this time. Their thoughts were thrown back to the past, and they were reminded how busy death had been amongst them for the presen year. Two officers of the Municipality had been removed—Mr. John McIntosh, Collector, and Mr. Geo. Campbell, assessor, and only a few days ago, the remains of their much esteemed and highly respected Reeve, John W. Gilmour, Esq., so lately amoungst them, apparently in his usual health, had, with evident demonstrations of sorrow, been conveyed to the silent tomb. With the deep impressions produced by this solemn event, and the vivid recollection still before them, of one so much revered for his courteous and amiable qualities, he would not attempt any lengthened eulogy. His actions speak louder than words, and will be longer remembered. During the terms of his long services as Councillor and Reeve, he discharched those duties conscientously and impartially, and has left a character unsullied—a reputation unblemished.

C. A. Weller, Esq., thought that his position required some explanation. He noticed the invitation which he had receiv from a very respectable deputation to allow himself to be put in Nomination for Reeve of the township, but it was not till after their departure he became aware that the law forbids him, and it must be respected. He went on to tender some excellent advice respecting how important was, especially at the present time to seclect a proper person for the office; considered they had good material amoungst themselves for the purpose; felt most thankful for the honor which they proposed conferring on him, and in return kindly proffered his advice, either at the Town Hall, should circumstances rendered it necessary to come out to them, at his own office in Peterborough, to whatever they might elect for Reeve, free of any charge for the comming year. He resumed his seat amidst much applause.

Mr. Collins addressed the meeting at some length, defined the duties of Reeve in the Township, and County Councils, was opposed to the Railway By-law and the in corporation of the town lots to Peterboro; considered that more of the public funds of the Province should be expended in the Northern Townships, thereby lessening local taxation, and if returned would use his best efforts to see that due economy was rigidly carried out.

Mr. Laing said that as the proceedings of the Council had been so fully chronicled during the present year, he would not at any length occupy their time, as Council they has done all they could to keep down taxation, had divided equally over all parts of the Township the small sum expended, and had only levied 1½ mills in the $ for Townships purposes for the past two years. Respecting Railways, and other matters, already adverted to his views were so well known that it was almost useless to repeat them. If he had their confidence in the higher office which they proposed giving him, he would use his best efforts in their service.

Mr. Tully thought that taxation had reached an extravagant height, especially in County and School matters, and unless checked could not tell what would be the result, something surely ought to be done to arrest it.

Although opposed to the Railway scheme as proposed, he could scarcely bind himself to go as far as Mr. Collins, but would rather in the words of one of the softer sex, when questioned on certain delicate matters, say—"That we cannot tell what is to come." If returned they might rely on him doing his utmost for the benifit of the Municipality.

Mr. Weller, as all the other speakers, made touching allusion in reference to Mr. Gilmour, and the loss by his demise.

The entire proceedings were characterized by a deep and becoming solemnity, most suitable in view of the events which had so lately transpired.

The meeting was adjourned to the 2nd day of January, 1871 at 9 o'clock, when a pole will commence for Electoral Divisons, No 1 at School house No 2 and for No 2 Electoral Divisions at the Town Hall.—Com

MARRIED.

JOHNS—PERRY.—At Peterboro', on the 21st inst., at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. J. W. R. Beck, M. A. Rector, Mr. D. D. Johns, of Beaver Creek, Marmora, to Margaret Agnes Louisa, second daughter of Mr. Charles Perry, Esq., M. P.

Correspondence.

Dear Examiner:

The Nomination in Galway resulted thus; Mr. Hunter is to be opposed by Mr. Probert, ex-Reeve. Mr. Probert finds great fault with the R. R. By-law, and says he will vote against it if elected. Although he dictated to the Returning Officer, and that official wrote on the Poll Book at the R. R. voting, that if the road came through Galway they would all support it. He objected to the laying over of the By-law until another time.

Mr. Hunter met his charges on every point and showed the untenenable position taken by his opponent, and assured the electors that the By-law bring unsuitable in the East part of the County, no fears need be apprehended on that point. It will be a pity when the Township has secured the service of such a liberal minded man as Mr. Hunter is, not to retain his services. The Ratepayers will do their duty when the day arrives.

The old Councillors are nominated, and and two new ones, so that a lively time may be anticipated.

Mr. S. S. Peck is opposed by Mr. Gainer, in Minden.

Mr. Gainer was Reeve in 1868 Township before, and is not a new man. The Colonization Road is being brought up against the late reeve.

Yours, &c.,

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

"Mother's Fool."

"'Tis plain to me," said a farmer's wife,
Those boys will make their mark in life;
They never were made to handle a hoe,
And at once to college ought to go.
Thomas Fred, he's little better than a fool,
But James and Hiram must go to school."

"Well, really wife," quoth farmer Brown,
As he sets his mug of cider down,
"Fred does more in a day for me,"
Than both his brothers does in three.
Book larnin' will never plant once corn,
Nor hoe potatoes, as we's you're born,
Nor mend a rod of broken fence;
For my part give me common sense."

But his wife was bound the roost to rule,
And James and Hiram were sent to school,
While Fred, of course, was left behind,
For his mother said he had no mind.

Five years at school the students spent,
Then into business each one went.
James learned to play the guitar and fiddle
And parted his hair, of course in the middle
While his brother looked rather higher than he
And hung out a sign, "H. Brown, M. D."

Meanwhile at home their brother Fred
Med'cines a nation into his head;
But he quietly trimmed his apple trees,
And weeded onions, and planted trees,
While somehow, either by book or crook,
He managed to read full many a book,
Until at last his father said
He was getting book larnin' into his head;
"But for all that," added farmer Brown,
"He's the smartest boy there is in town."

The war broke out, and Captain Fred
A hundred men to battle led,
And when the rebel flag came down
Went marching home as General Brown.
But he went to work on the farm again,
And planted corn and sowed his grain,
Re-shingled the barn and mended the fence,
The people declared "he had common sense."

For common sense was very rare,
And the State House needed a portion there;
So the "family dunce" moved into town,
And the people called him Governor Brown.
And his brothers who went to the city school
Came home to live with mother's fool."

Chang and Eng.—Henry Lee, F. R. S., writes to the editor of the (London) Lancet, in regard to the paralytic seizures from which Chang, one of the Siamese Twins has recently suffered. He has letters from the twins and their families, which induce him to believe in the possibility of their separation in case of the deceased of one of them. A letter from one of Chang's daughters, says that her father is low-spirited, can scarcely move without assistance, and that his whole right side is perfectly useless. "Uncle tries to cheer him up, but he has nothing to say." From the sentence mentioning Eng's endeavors to cheer and comfort his brother, Dr. Lee infers in each a distinct and separate volition and vitality, and hence that Eng could success-fully be cut from the dead body, of Chang, should the latter die first.

The destruction caused by the late gale in Cuba was far beyond what was at first stated, being put, at the last accounts, at no less a sum than $27,000,000! This reads like a staggerer, we are aware, but it does not seem unreasonable when we listen to the details, and observe how extensive was the field of operation, and how complete those operations were. The tempest is likely to be felt far and wide, if it be true that the sugar crop has been sensibly lessened by its ravages, as that must cause a rise in the article all over the world,—and as every one uses sugar, all must be affected by the gale's greatness. Not improbably some persons who hold sugar will make fortunes,—and they at least will be able to say, that the Tornado was not one of those ill winds that blows good to nobody.

Interesting Facts.—A legal stone is 14 lb, in England and Holland. A fathom, 6 feet, derived from the height of a full grown man. A hand in horse measure, is 4 inches. An Irish mile is 2,240 yards; a Scotch mile is 1.984; a German, 1,806; a Turkish, 1,; 1,026. An acre is 1,840 square yards, 1 foot 3½ inches each way. A square mile, 1,760 yards each way, contains 640 acres. The human body contains 240 bones, 9 kinds articulation or joinings, 100 cartilleges or lingments, 400 muscles or tendons, and 100 nerves, besides blood, arteries, veins, &c. Potatoes planted below three feet do not vegetate; at one foot they grow thickest, and at two they are retarded two or three months.

A German in America explains his reasons for joining the Temperance Society—"I vil tell you how it vas. I drink mine lager; den I put mine hand on mine head, and dere vas von pain. Den I put mine hand on mine body, and dere vas anoder pain. Den I put mine hand in mine pocket and dere vas nothing. So I yine mid de temperance. Now dere is no pain more in mine head, and de pain in mine body vas all gone avay. I put mine hand in mine pocket, and dere vas dwenty dollars. So I shtey mid de temperance.

Interesting Disclosure.—A New Jersey paper, with charming candor and naivete, tells how champagne is made from cider. A barrel of cider costing say $6, will yield 120 bottles of champagne, which, at $3 per bottle, will sell at $360, by the addition of a little Rine wine, alcohol, sugar and carbonic acid gas. And now, it says, cider has twimitators in turn. The bogus cider makers buy dried apples and soak them. The water is mixed with alcohol, simple syrup, and carbolic acid, bottled, and sold for cider.

Baptists in Wales.—The London Freeman" says:—"In Wales, belonging to the Baptist denomination, there are upwards of 600 churches, and, as many of these have branch congregations, the number of Chapels would be yet greater. In England and Wales, there are 2 447 Baptist Churches. Wales, therefore, about one seventh of the population of England and Wales, has one fourth as many Baptist Churches. If we limit our notice to South Wales, the disproportion would be found much greater. London with a population of 2,803,098, has 219 Baptist Churches.

Nitro-Glycerine.—It is some five years since nitro-glycerine came into use. It has killed, or maimed for life, one thousand seven hundred persons, besides destroying millions of property. These ought to be sufficient recommendations of its efficiency.

It is said that at many of the deserted houses in the environs of Paris, the key of the door is left on the threshold with the inscription: "Walk in and break nothing The wine is in the cellar."

Henry Ward Beecher owns a $25,000 house in Brooklyn, a $30,000 farm in Peekskill, and a half of the "Christian Union" newspaper. Twenty-five years ago he had to wait sometimes a week before he could pay postage on a home letter. His salary as $ 150, half payable in provisions.

Select Poetry.

It is So.

Ive seen many a girl
Who would marry a churl
Providing he had plenty of gold,
And would live to repent
When the money was spent,
When she found her heart had been sold.
It is so! It is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it is so!

I've known many a lass
Who would thoughtlessly pass
Whole hours promenading the street,
While her mother would scrub
All the while at the tub.
Never minding the cold or the heat.
It is so! It is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so!

There is many a man
Who will dress if he can,
No matter how empty his purse.
And his tailor may look
While he settles his book.
But his patron has vanished, or worse.
It is so! It is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so.

I know people so nice
They will faint in a trice,
If you mention hard labor to them;
Yet their parents were poor,
And forced to endure
Many hardships life's current to stem.
It is so! It is so!
You may smile if you like,
But it's so!

There are many about
With face 'long drawn'
Who will orate of the harm of a laugh,
Yet th y'll cheat all the week,
Though Sunday's quite meek,
To my mind they're too pious by half
It is so! It is so!
You may smile if you like
But it's so!

Selections.

Executions At Kingston.

There was a double execution at Kingston on the 14th instant. Mann who killed Trail, and Deacon who poisoned his wife.

Deacon it appears had received an early religious training but did not profit by it.

Mann on the contrary had received no education, having only been at school six months in his life, and grew up to man's estate without even an idea of a God.

A reporter from the Globe visited them in their cells, he writes as follows:—

Deacons cell was first visited. He shook hand's warmly with each of the party and freely entered into conversation. His parents, he said, taught him religious truths when he was young, but he had been led astray, and had gone from bad to worse When asked if he felt prepared to meet death, he replied, "Oh, yes! It is but from death to glory," and expressed great confidence that his sins had all been forgiven. He had been a great sinner, he said, but Jesus had led him come as he was, and he repeated a few lines of the hymn, "Just as I am," &c. About a week ago he experienced a change of heart. Before he that he had been in great agony of mind about his guilt; "but," said he, "I got down on the floor and prayed all night, and before morning it pleased God to give peace to my soul." He seemed to take great comfort in repeating his assurance that he would be saved. It is of course impossible to deny that his convictions are not sincere, but one could not listen to him and to his sighs and groaning without a feeling that he was in a measure acting a part, that though not intending to deceive, he was deceiving himself, trying to persuade himself that it was all well with him rather than feeling certain it was. He appeared to be a weak minded creature, without energy or character, and of little or no moral preception. He said that he loved his dead wife, and was thankful to God that his love for her was growing stronger every day. He seemed considerably dejected, notwithstanding his efforts to keep up courage; and being a man of no spirit whatever, there are some fears that he will give way when the trying moment comes, and have to be carried to the scaffold. His two brothers of whom lives in the States and the other back in this country, visited him two weeks ago and bade him a last good bye.

Mann's cell was next visited. A single glance at him showed that he was a different man, altogether, from his fellow prisoner. He has a light, keen piercing eye, an intellectual looking forehead and his conversation showed a clear head and an active mind. There is no doubt that had he received proper training from his youth, he could have been a man above ordinary stamp; but he told Mr. O'Reilly he had received no education, secular or religious, save some six months at a public school, and until he grew up had not even an idea of God; and even then his ideas of a Diety and of religion were of the most obscure kind. Since his last imprisonment, and especially since sentence was passed upon him, the Rev. Mr Bland, Wesleyan, and Mr. Lorzeaux, one of the Plymouth Brethren, and other, have administered unto him in spiritual things, and he says that for the last three weeks has felt sure of his final salvation. "I have not the slightest doubt, yet," he said; "I feel just as sure that my sins are forgiven, and that I will go to Heaven, as that I am standing in this cell." He made no boast of his feeling, and said nothing at all about it except when asked, and then his answer was prompt and decisive. He spoke as though it was a matter unalterally settled, and one on which his mind needed not to be assured by repeated assertions of it. It was remarkable to see the calm, cool, free, even cheerful way in which he spoke. He assured Mr. O'Reilly that he had never before his last crime been connected with any attempts to commit violence on any man; and that when he struck the guard he had no intention of killing him, nor did he and Smith think him dead, as they found him to prevent him from raising the alarm. Mann said, if he had thought the guard was dead he would have remained with him. He determined to be free, and it was the desire for liberty that prompted him him to strike the blow; but he intended only to stun the guard and thus effect his escape. He spoke also of his connection with the Malahide raiders. He went in the night along with other to a man's house, bound the man's hands behind his back and proceeded to search the house for money. While they were doing this a boy jumped out of a window gave the alarm, and before they were aware of the fact they were surrounded. To intimidate his pursuers, and so enable him and his comrades to make their escape, Mann fired three pistol shots, without taking any aim, and they escaped to Detroit, where they were captured. He was tried and sentenced to nine years in the Penitentiary. He then went on to speak, at the request of Mr. O'Reilly, of his penitentiary life. He had been pretty wicked, and had seen a great deal of wickedness, but he found when he went into the penitentiary that he scarcely knew what wickedness was. There was a continual plotting and scheming; "a knitting process, as it were," as he expressed it, going on among the convicts, which none but they know anything about. There was an under depravity of which even the sharpest keeper had no conception, but which was felt by every prisoner. He could not escap from it. Mann says that when he was in the penitentiary he sometimes had longings after a better life, an ambition to become an honest member of society, to be somebody, and to earn the respect of his fellow-men; but the very atmosphere around him was polluted with immorality; and, above all, the thought of so long a term of imprisonment crushed out of all hope of reformation, and his solo object was to be free. He this if his term had been shorter, say five years, he would have borne it it and gone out into the world again with the determination to lead a better life. He gave his opinion with difference, feeling his position; but he was convinced from his own observation and experience that short terms of imprisonment were the best in the interests of society. A criminal feels he deserves some punishment, and only give him a change and there is some prospects of his reformation. But condemn him to a long term, and he feels excessively punished: he attributes it to malice; he attributes it to malice; he loses all hope, abandons himself to wickedness, and when he gets out he cherishes a grudge against society; he feels that every man's hands is against him, and therefore his hand is against every man. Such were Mann's views, and the fluency clearness and precision with which he expressed them were surprising. He seemed to have a perfect horror of the Penitentiary, and declared solemnly that he would far rather go to the scaffold than go back to his old dismal cell in the penitentiary, to be surrounded with all the evil influences which he so much deplored. O'Reilly asked him if he had any last request to make.—"My mother," said the poor fellow, "she is my only earthly thought. God help her, she was perfectly innocent. On the word of a dying man. I tell you, she had nothing to do with the affair." Mann's visitors parted with him, when with painful emotions—

Of all the sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest of all are "It might have been—"

they felt that Mann, with an acute intellect a courageous and energetic disposition, and a resolute spirit, might have been an honored member of society, but his associations from childhood were evil, and only evil, and he goes to the scaffold at an early age of 34 years.

"God bless you," said he, as he grasped the hand of each of his visitors, and then returned to the open Bible, as the black iron door swung to, and left him to himself and his God.

The "Handwriting on the Wall."

When the unwritten history—the woes and wailings of wives and mothers, and children and orphans, which have never been recorded save by the angel whom the Almighty Historian has commissioned to prepare—shall have been revealed, what a terrible account will be found charged to rumsellers! We imagine that "conscience in some awful, silent hour," as it did in the case of Connor, the child-drowner, who died at the State Prison the other day, will, when "captivating lusts have lost their power," bring before the rumsellers and others whose shrinking spirits cower before even the peremptory voice of right, "a pale procession of sinful deeds." Rumselling is the worst sin in the whole catalogue of wrong doing. A leading rumseller is a modern Antiochus Epiphanes, before whom thousands of people fell victims fell simply to his inhuinanity. When he was arrested in the midst of his crusted work, his bodily sufferings were intense. In his dilirium a thousand forms stood before him, charging him with crimes; and in this wretched state Antiochus Epiphanes died. And such is the fate in store (and often in actual experience) for the rumseller. It can not be otherwise. He is in constant dread of a something to come.—He has built a fire in his soul that is hotter and stronger than his burning whiskies, and brandies and gins. When it is known that there are between two and the three thousand places in every large city suffered to grind the reputations, the souls, the welfare of thousands of men and women, between the upper and nether mill-stones, and this, too, in the state of statute law, defiantly, as it were, [illegible] Retributarian alaim will be exhibited before that higher court where the claims of justice will be duly settled! The laws of moral retribution is eminently applicable to the rumseller, and that retribution is necessary to the well-being of society.—Boston Daily News.

Yo-Semite Valley.

Rev. Dr. Newman, furnishes the New York Methodist with the following brilliant description of this wonderful valley. He says:—

Of all the geological wonders of the Sierras, their crowning glory is the Yo-Semite Valley. A ride of one hundred and twenty miles from San Francisco brings the traveller to this wonder of the world. That ride will cost many a pain, groan and dollar. The old stage-coach crowded with passengers, clean and unclean, moves at rate of ten miles an hour, enveloped in a cloud of suffocating dust, rattling over roads never made for wheels, and skirting precipices, looking over which the head grows dizzy. A horseback ride of twenty mile through a trackless forest, guided only by the blazes on huge pine trees; climbing mountains, so steep that the rider's head comes in unpleasant proximity with that of his horse; winding round the brow of valleys three thousand feet deep, the angels in the road along which are so sharp that the horse's body forms a curve in turning; dry lips, a lame back, and sore knees—are some of the drawbacks of the journey. But to see the Yo-Semite is worth a hundred such journeys.

It was two o'clock in the afternoon when we reached the valley. And who can ever forget that first grand view? Pain and fatigue are forgoten amid the overwhelming grandeur of the scene. Although in a valley four thousand feet above the level of the sea, we were surrounded with perpendicular mountains which rose above us six thousand feet. As we looked up the valley, ten miles long and three miles wide, the eye was greeted with flowing rivers, dashing cascades, green meadows, blooming flowers, fruitful orchards, lofty pines, three hundred feet high, and the everlasting hills. To the right was the Bridal Veil, with a fall of nine hundred and forty fee, its waters beaten into spray of pearly whiteness, and the winds blowing beneath them spread out the spray like one who folds a bridal-veil of Mechlin lace. O the beauty of that vercel! How the wavy sheets of spray gracefully undulated or fell in gause-like, ethereal folds—now expanding, now contracting; now glittering in the sun-light like a hill adorned with diamonds; now changing into our vast many-colored cloud, reflecting the rainbow, and throwing their misty drapery over the falling torrent, filling the beholder with exultation and delight. Beyond appeared the Cathedral Spires, reminding us of some old Gothic structure; and further on stood out, in bold relief, the Sentinel Rock, three thousand feet high, as if to guard the approach to the enchanted spot.

California Romance.

About the year 1835 a Scottish sailor boy named James Black, deserted from a ship lying in San Francisco Bay, and after divers adventures settled down at the Mission San Rafael about twelve miles above the metropolis. He learned the Spanish language, and eventually married into the Spanish family of Sepulveda. He received an immense grant of land from the Mexican government, covered it and his 000 acres besides with his cattle, and gradually enlarged himself into the form and stature of an old-time California grandee. In the process of time he had a daughter born unto his house and vast estates—his only child I believe. Then came the amazing rush thronging hither of thousands, and again thousands of hungry miners, and this whilom, ragged Scottish lad, who had once skulked like a malefactor in the tule swamps, found himself suddenly in possession of a "wee bit siller." Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. He was evidently of the latter sort, like many other early Californians, for he appears to have been of a rather feeble order of understanding. He deeded one of his valuable ranches to his daughter, and in 1864 she married a dentist in San Francisco named Burdell, a nephew of Dr. Burdell, murdered in New York, to which marriage her father was opposed. About a year afterwards Mrs. Black went down to San Francisco, to have a dental operation performed by her son-in-law, and she died under the influence of his cholorform. This drove her husband almost distracted; he became dissipated and besotted, fell into the toils of managing a widow named Pacheo, who scared him by a falsehood in regard to her condition into a hasty marriage. She poisoned his imbecile mann against his daughter and caused him to believe that she had mortaged the ranch he had deeded to her. He became flighty and made a new will every week, and tore it up, but in every will alike he cut off his daughter portionless, except the ranch he had already given. Finally he fell off his horse on a hillside while riding after cattle, struck his head with violence on a rock, and after lingering awhile died, though he made no new will after his head was injured. After his death when the parties assembled in the family parlor to listen to the reading of the will, and the daughter then learned beyond peradventure that she was cut off without a dime, except the ranch.

She rose quietly and calmly, and asked to see the will. It was handed to her, and in the twinkling of an eye she tore off her father's signature, and would have reduced it to ribbons in a trice had she not been seized.

She was indicted for this once, but nothing was done. She now appears, by her counsel, to contest the will on the ground that her father was of unsound mind, and the case has been tried once, the jury disagreeing, and is now on the tapis again, exciting great interests in San Rafael. The value of the property invalved, for which the scheming widow Black is struggling, is said to be $750,000.

Take Hold of My Hand.

"Take hold of my hand," says the little one when she reaches a slippery place, or when something frightens her. With the fingers clasped tightly around the parent's she steps cheerfuly and bravely along, clinging a little closer when the way is crowded or difficult, and happy in the beatiful strength of childish faith.

"Take hold of my hand," says the young convert, trembling with the eagerness of his love. Full well he knows that, if he rely on any strength of his own, he will stumble and fall; but if the Master reach forth His hand, he may walk with unwearied foot, even on the crystal wave. The waters of strife or of sorrow shall not overwhelm him, if he but keep fast hold of the Saviour.

"Take hold of my hand," falters the mother feeling that she is all to weak for the great responsibilities that throng in her path. Where shall she learn the greatness of the mission—the importance of the field that has been assigned to her! And [illegible] is not shall she fulfil it, if she have not the sustaining constant presence of One who loves his people!

"Take hold of my hand," whispered the aged one, tottering through the shadows and snows of many years. As the lights of earth grow dimmer in the distance and the darkening eye looks forward to see if it can discern the first glimmer of the heavenly home the pilgrim cries out, even as the child beside its mother, for the Saviour's hand.

O Jesus! Friend and Elder Brother, when the night cometh, when the feet are weary, when the eyes are dim, "take hold of my hand."

Praying, Believing.

Is it not a sad thing that we should think it wonderful for God to hear prayers? Much better faith was that of a little boy in Edinburgh, who had attended a prayer meeting, and at last said to his teacher who conducted it:—

"Teacher, I wish my sister could be got to read the Bible; she never reads it."

"Why, Johny, should your sister read the Bible?"

"Because, if she should once read it, I am sure it would do her good, and she would be converted and saved."

"Do you think so, Johny?"

"Yes, I do, sir; and I wish the next time there is a prayer meeting you would ask the people to pray for my sister, that she may begin to read the Bible."

"Well, well, it shall be done, John."

So the teacher gave out that a little boy was very anxious that prayer should be offered that his sister might begin to read the Bible. John was observed to get up and go out. The teacher thought it very rude of the boy to disturb the people in a crowded room, and so the next day when the lad came, he said:

"John I thought it was very rude of you to get up in the prayer meeting and go out. You ought not to have done so."

"I'h sir," said the boy, "I did not mean to be rude, but I thought I should just like to go home and see my sister reading her Bible for the first time."

Thus we ought to believe and watch with expectations for answers to our prayers. Do not say, "Lord turn my darkness into light," and then go on with your candle as though you expected to find it dark. After asking the Lord to appear for you, expect him to do so, for according to your faith, so be it unto you:—Spurgeon

Midway the valley are the Yo-Semite Falls, the glory of the place. Two thousand five hundred and fifty in height, they are ten times higher than Niagara. Over the brow of the lofty rocks, the Merced Creek pours its crystal waters. Their first great vertical leap is 16000 feet; then, after two other leaps, they reach the rocks below, and send up their diamond spray to the height of 700 feet. Such is the attitude of the falls that in summer, when the creek is low, the stream looks like a silver thread; but in spring, four hundred gallons pour over the falls every second, roaring and thundering in their downward leap.

At the southeast end of the valley, far up a mountain-gorge, are the Vernal and Nevada Falls. The scenery is the wildest imaginable. Granite boulders lay in our path around which we had to wind. Now we entered the profound depths of the gorge, where the overhanging rocks and tall pines shut out the brightest sunlight; now we ascended a more rugged defile, at the bottom of which the Merced flows; now we mounted a ladder up perpendicular rocks to the cliffs above, from which we looked down upon the Vernal cascade. With a descent of 350 feet, the white, foaming waters shot downward in arrowy forms, sparkling in the morning sun. Just beyond where the Nevada flows, 700 feet high, and at one foot up the Emerald lakes, whose soft, placid bosom, ringed with green, suggested an immense emerald.

But the gem of all the beauties of the Yo-Semite is Mirror Lake, covering an area of about three acres. It is in the extreme north-eastern end of the valley. Around it, in amphitheatric form, are as grand mountains as ever were seen by mortal eye. On the left was the North Dome, 3,725 feet above us; on the right was the South Dome, erect, defiant, 6,000 feet above the lake, and 10,000 feet above the level of the sea; beyond Cloud's Rest, 500 feet higher, on the brow of which the summer clouds lay in sweet repose, but which, in winter, is the throne of the storm. Before us lay the lake, whose depth has never been fathomed; whose waters are transparent as crystal; whose bosom, so clear and calm, is like a vast mirror. Unbroken silence held sway in that solitary spot. Far down in those deep, clear waters the surrounding scenery was beautifully reflected. The mountains reversed, we seemed to stand upon their base, the eye following their descending sides till it reached the inverted dome. All the ravines, all the projecting rocks, all the oaks and pines, all the vast form of the South Dome, were seen as if by enchantment. While looking into the mirror-like waters, the morning sun rose over the mountains—sunrise in a lake. First, the white halo of early morn appeared then the silver fire lining the crest of the mountains were resplendent with light; then the orb of day appeared, coming over the mountains, in the calm heavens, seen far down in the unknown depth of that marvellous lake.

One of the Quaker Indian agents, sent to Pawnee reservation, has returned to Omaha, with a squaw for a wife, and is going home to Philadelphia, to see how his friends will receive their new relative. He says there is no trouble about making peace with the Indians, if you go at it right.

A clever native at Chicago, of magnificent appearance, who represented himself as the agent of a metallic roofing company, recently succeeded in procuring the signatures of several wealthy farmers to blank promissory notes, which he subsequently filled out to suit himself, and had discounted. By this means he is supposed to have raised between $20,000 and $30,000.

The front of the Parliament buildings at Ottawa is to be planted with trees. The plants selected are birch, elm, soft maple and horse chestnut brought from Toronto.

It has, we believe, been finally decided that the proposed testimonial to Mackenzie will take the shape of a homestead.

In Nova Scotia the Post Office Savings Bank deposits have reached the maximum allowed by law. In New Brunswick they are heavier than ever before.

There were more seduction cases before the Perth and Middlesex Courts this session than of any other class of trials, civil or criminal.

An immense order has been received in the North of England, for a supply of warm blankets for the Prussian troops. It is being actively pushed on and will help to make a brisk demand for short wools. Since the raising of the blockade there has been a considerable quantity of worsted yarns exported to Prussian ports, and no doubt a good part of them will be used in providing various kinds of supplies for the German armies.

The Tyne Crew Divided.—A feeling of rivalry has been in existence some time between Renforth and Taylor, two of the champion four-oared crew that recently contended with the Paris crew at Lachine, and the rivalry has at length resulted in an open rupture. Renforth very recently challenged the world to produce two men to row against himself and another in a two-oared race for, £220 a side; and scarcely had the challenge been made when it was taken up by Taylor and Winship, two of Renforth's crew. A meeting of the parties interested took place, when, after a good deal of fencing the match was at length made, and a deposit of £5 put up, to tie the match, for Renforth and Kelly, on one part, to row Taylor and Winship, on the other part, a straightway race, in heir-oared boats, from the High Level Bridge to Scotswood Suspension Bridge, for £220 a side—the race to take place on the 16th of January.

Trading Horses.—The Methodist began an article on 'Religion and Business,' in this striking way:—A few weeks since, while travelling in one of the New England states, we met an eccentric old man who combines the occupation of farmer, horse-dealer and colporteur.—In his 'work of mercy,' as he styles his colporteuring, he distributes tracts gratuitously, and sells Bibles and other religious books at cost to them that can afford to pay for them, and gives them away to the poor. We were very much impressed, as well as amused, with one remark which the old man made in the course of the conversation. 'Now,' said he 'when I start on a work of mercy, and stop to deal in horses, I never have good luck. The fact is, I dont want the Lord around when I'm trading horses.

All the apostles were insulted by the enemies of their master. They were called to seal their doctrines with their blood, and nobly did they bear the trial. Schemacher says:

St. Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with a sword, at a distant city of Ethiopia.

St. Mark expired at Alexandria, after having been cruelly dragged through the streets of that city.

St. Luke was hanged upon [illegible] in the classic land of Greece.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 29. 1870.

Editorial Items.

The Legislative Hall's, Toronto, are now quiet. Members are enjoying the holidays at home.

The weather here is very fine, sleighing good, and all those who can find time are enjoying it.

The Cornwall Blanket manufactory was destroyed by fire, last week; loss $250,000 It will be rebuilt.

There are very exciting times at Red River over the elections, and at least one life has been lost. Dr. Schultz is making strenuous efforts to be elected.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening there will be a private debate and readings by the members of the P. L. C., at the good Templars Hall, at 8 o'clock.

The Ladies of an Episcopal Church in Montreal have determined not to have wine on their sideboards on New Year's day.

The Canada Farmer, for December, is received, and contains, as usual, much useful information. Farmers should all take the Farmer.

A disastrous fire took place at St. Thomas, on Christmas Day. The loss is from $70,000 to $80,000. Nearly all the parties are partially covered by insurance. Two men are missing, supposed to be buried beneath the ruins.

The pupils of School Section Number 10, River Road, Otonabee, lately presented their Teacher, Miss D. Potter, with a very handsome writing desk. Miss Potter has resigned her situation, and this was on the occasion of her doing so.

The Irish Canadian says:—"It is now beyond doubt that Mr. Frank Smith will be appointed to the Senatorial Chair, vacant by the decease of the Hon. George Crawford. Mr. Smith was formerly a reformer, but we are not told on what ticket he intends entering the senate.

CONCERT.—We have been requested to state that on next Thursday evening, there will be a Concert in the Music Hall, the proceeds to be in aid of the Parsonage funds of the Episcopal Church. Tickets will be 25 cents to all parts of the house.

Monday was kept as a Holiday. Certainly not as a Holy-day. Forty rod was used freely, and the result was noticeable by black eyes and faces out. What a g-l-o-r-i-o-u-s way to spend Christmas times. Then followed the police-court, fines and penalties.

The Midland Railway was opened, formally, from Lindsay to Beaverton, on Saturday last. There were a lunch, toasts and speeches on the occasion, of course, and all went off pleasantly. The Midland Company got great praise for their enterprise. Col. Boulton paid a high compliment to Mr. G. A. Stewart, Chief Engineer for his energy in pushing the work through.

PRESENTATION.—On the occasion of Mr. Isaac Campbell resigning his situation in School Section Number 2, N. Monaghan, to pursue his studies at Knox College, Toronto, the pupils of the School presented him with a very handsome Gold Locket. Mr. Campbell has taught 4 years in the same Section, discharging the duties of Teacher to the entire satisfaction, we believe, of all those who patronized the School.

THE NEW DOMINION MONTHLY FOR January, 1871, is also before us. It is as usual replete with pleasing and instructive reading matter. The New Dominion Monthly may be in the hands of any child. The articles are original and selected, and are of highly moral and religious tendencies. This number contains excellent engraving of H. R. H. Princess Louise and Marquis of Lorne—her future husband.

THE UNION SCHOOL REUNION on Thursday evening last, was a decided success. The Music Hall was crowded to suffication and the performers, considering their age, taken from every department in the school, did exceedingly well. The programme was a very extensive one, and all parts were gone through admirably. This is the second reunion since Mr. Dixon became principal, and they give so much satisfaction and pleasure, that we hope he will give one every winter.

THE NORWOOD REGISTER.—This neat little paper so long looked for from the enterprising village of Norwood, has made its debut just in time for Christmas and New Year salutation. The first number which is before us, has a very respectable appearance. It is neatly printed, and contains a fair share of Local Advertisments, a sign that the wise men of the East intend the Register to live. The proprietor, Mr. Burke, lately of this office, has certainly succeeded in getting out a nice paper. It declares itself non-political—we shall see.—We gladly receive the Register, and wish Mr. Burke success in his undertaking.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE.—We have received a copy of this very handsomely Illustrated Catalogue of seeds and flower guide, for 1871. It is elegantly printed on fine tinted paper, illustrated with three hundred wood engravings and two beautiful Colored Plates. The most beautiful and most instructive Floral Guide published. Sent free to all customers of 1870, as rapidly as possible without application. Sent to all others who order them for Ten Cents which is not half the cost. Address,—James Vick, Rochester, N. Y.

EUROPE.

The crisis around Paris remains nearly in the same state.

The Germans, no doubt, hope to be able to starve the city to surrender, and in this they may succeed. There is no means of communication except by balloons, in fact, so scientifically is this now conducted that at the close of the war ballooning will be perfectly understood.

The Prussians are almost always successful in the engagements both around the city and in different parts of the country, although French reports are often to the contrary, of course. A reported victory of French arms tends to raise the hopes and courage of the French people.

In Rome several riots have occurred and persons have been killed in them. Infidels recieve the blame of these things. We at such a distance cannot tell the true cause. There is a report that the pope is about to remove to Malta, an Island which he revers much, as the Melitus which Paul visited, but there is nothing definite on this point.

Russian affairs are in statu quo. Winter delays anything she may attempt and french success might delay it indefinitely.

Spain is very quiet, although a king has been elected there is no undue excitement.

The whole Tory press of Ontario have changed color. They are one and all Brown. John Sandfield, and the combination are dished up Brown. The management of the G. T. is Brown, everything is Brown. There is no other color in Canada worth the attention of Combinationists. If there is a Reform Dinner it is Brown. If John A. gets tipsy it is on Brown Stout. If John Sandfield grinds an axe it is on a Brown stone. Every Tory paper is howling Brown, Brown. Now, why all the fuss about Brown. I, John A. is a Solomon of a statesman, he need not fear Brown. If John Sandfield is so pious as to secure the title of Saint of Cornwall, Brown will not shut the gates of paradise against him. The fact is the whole combination are afraid of George Brown, and hence, their efforts to belittle him. They may as well, however, quiet their nerves. Their days are numbered. The country has long enough borne with men whose only patriotism is love of office, and whose statesmanship has been double shuffles or shelving Howlands and McDougalls. Men who cannot expend a cent anywhere unless where some votary may require it: men who could remove an asylum from Hamilton to Belleville, to bribe the Hastings members, men who could sink $30,000 on Stony Lake to secure the votes of the Peterborough representatives, and as much more in Victoria to ensure M. Cockburn. These are the patriots! Men who heartily vaunt of the amount of money they have to help their friends, regardless of the whereabouts it may be squandered or the wants of localities. These are the men that are held up as statesman worthy of our support and confidence. Settlers in the back country know what sort of roads they have to get out and in to their distant houses, while John Sandfield boasts that he has over $3,000,000 to be wasted in buying support at the next election. Surely the people of Canada are not come to this, that they will fall down and worship the golden calf, that John Sandfield has set up! We cannot be so lost to our duty, as men and citizens of Ontario, as to elect men because of their connection with a government that has money to spend, and who will only spend it to ensure their own re-election. We were lately told, "now is the time for spoil," "for our share" of the surplus, surely Canadians do not so worship the almighty dollar, that they will elect any man who is supposed to have influence with the party in power to get a few dollars for his Riding. If they do, it is no wonder that our country is cursed with corrupt statesmen, for like people, like statesmen. Let Reformers be preparing for coming events. The two McDonald's will again unite to ensure the loaves and fishes, and the control of this rich province. John A. is bound to obey Cartier, and John Sandfield is tied hand and foot by John A. Are the people of Ontario to remain the bond slaves of those tricksters, during another parliament/surely not.

We invite attention to the communication of a reformer, in this issue. The elections are not very far distant, and it behooves the reformers of this County to be preparing for the contest. Ontario has long enough borne with the patent combination, and with decided and united action will succeed in forcing John Sandfield to retire into private life. He is too much under the influence of the Ottawa Premier to succeed in wise and useful legislation. He is not a man of close application, and never likely to succeed as a Law framer.

He is too much given to pure grinats the Province, to make speeches, at which report says, he is not accountable for what he says.

The fact that he openly avows that all public expenditure will be made only in Counties represented by his minions, should be enough to cause all right thinking men to vote him into oblivion. What a nice state of affairs it is, when no public improvement can be hoped for in any place represented by a reform member—and yet John Sandfield would fain have the people believe he is a reformer. George Read would have the electors believe, during the last contest, that he was a reformer, and an independent man, can he tell us when he ever voted with reformers, since, or can he point to a vote against the combination on any subject. This is the kind of reformer John Sandfield is, in word but not in deed.

Let us have united action this time. Let us choose good men, if they be dummies it will only be following conservative example. Let us have men who are prepared to legislate for every portion of the province, regardless of interest either, only that the outlay is for the public good. Who went and spent $30,000 in Stony Lake, when even their own supporters say it never will be worth $30; all to gain the continued and steady support of Mr. Read and Mr Carnegie.

Surely men can be returned in whom the County has confidence: men who can be approached even by an opponent.

To this end let reformers therefore look out good and true men; let them return them, they can do it, and soon the present time serving policy will be broken up at Toronto. Ottawa will soon follow.

There are enough catholic reformers in the country to settle the matter themselves It has been long argued that Conservatives only would do justice to Catholics, but this they themselves may see the more ravings of the conservative press, and not to be believed.

There are other establishments in Town besides those in our directory, but as they do not desire publicity in our way, we have feared to name them for fear of being accused of libello in autos. If they change their ways, and asks the aid of the printers, they are all very accommodating, and so are we; we may change our mind and add them to our list of enterprising business houses. If we have omitted any one, he will favor by dropping us a note to jog our memory.

The Manchester Guardian of a late date contains a statement that King William and the Crown Prince of Prussia wrote to the Queen that they were opposed to the marriage of the Princess Louise with the Marquis of Lorne. The Queen replied with remonstrance, advising them to mind their own business. The incident has materially changed the feelings of the Court towards Germany.

President Grant is preparing another message to Congress on the subject of American shipping. He has directed Mr. Moran, Secretary of the American Legation at London, to telegraph him immediately statistics of the shipping of Great Britain doubtless with the view of showing Congress into action by a comparison of the maritime strength of the two nations.

Prince Henry of Luxemburg has received a deputation of the inhabitants of the Duchy, who came to present him with a patriotic address. The Prince spoke confidently of the ability of the people to defend their rights, and declared his confidence in the loyalty of the Powers who signed the treaty of 1867 The Vienna official paper refers to the neutrality of Luxemburg to be an open question for the consideration of the Great Powers.

The sinking of six English ships in the Seine by the Prussians, for the purpose of obstructing navigation, has occasioned great indignation here and throughout England. The British Vice-Consul at Rouen has presented to the Prussian commander a formal protest against the act of spoliation committed upon British subjects.

There is immense excitement in London, consequent on the alarming intelligence that the Prussians have virtually committed an act of belligerency in the sinking of six English trading vessels in the Seine, for the avowed purpose of obstructing the navigation of the river.

The Times has published an extra, and on leavours to calm the public sentiment by expressing a hope that the report is exagerated, and a strong conviction that the conviction that the Prussians would not commit an suicidal an act. People will not listen to this, and point with indignation to the despatch which states that the British Vice-Consul at Rouen has presented to the Prussian commander at Rouen an indignant and formal protest against the act of spoliation committed on British subjects.

This is regarded here as confirmatory of the truth of the despatch, and the Standard and other Conservative newspapers have bitter war-toned articles, calling upon the Government either to resign or to declare itself insulted, and take the needful means for the correction of this outrage upon the British flag.

Correspondence.

Ashburnham School.

The Christmas examination of the Ashburnham school was held on Tuesday, 21st instant.

The Junior Department—Miss Stratton, Teacher—was examined in the forenoon, and Mr. Wood's in the afternoon.

There was a goodly number of the parents and other visitors present, to witness the progress of the school. Mr. Wright, one of the trustees of the school, also, was present, and seemed to take a great interest in the progress of the whole.

The pupils in Miss Stratton's department acquitted themselves very creditably, and gave evidence of good training. They seemed to be much affected on learning that they were about to lose their respected teacher, who has received an appointment in the Union School. At the close of this part of the examination, Mr. Wood, and others, spoke in the highest terms of the state of the school, and also of Miss Stratton as a teacher.

The examination of the Senior department, under Mr. Wood, was decidedly very creditable to both teacher and pupils. The various subjects were gone through in such a masterly manner, that no person could fail to see the fruits of good careful teaching. At the conclusion of the exercises of the day every person present seemed to be highly pleased with the state of the School.

VISITOR.

The Duty of Reformers.

For the Examiner:—

It seems to me that the time has come when the Reformers of the County of Peterboro' ought to begin to make preparations for the approaching elections.—In all probability in less than six months time the elections will be upon us. In many parts of the Province our Co-Reformers are bestirring themselves, and the question may be asked, why the Reformers of this once thoroughly Reform County do not go and do likewise? There is no reason why this County should not be represented by Reformers, and it would be so if the party but did its duty.

In the old days of Toryism, when there was scarcely liberty of thought, let alone freedom of action, when there was everything to lose and nothing to gain by opposition to its rule, and when every avenue to preferment was closed to Reformers, they showed their independence and manhood in this County, and in one election swept everything before them; and so long as that generation lasted they held the County. But the new generation which has succeeded them do not appear to possess the same unflinching, solid stuff of their predecessors. They seem to be afraid to move—perhaps afraid that they may lose some of the flesh pots of Egypt.

In 1841, the sturdy old Reformers turned out and came to the poll despite every obstacle. They were not afraid to do and to act. They did not wait to be wheedled and coaxed and paid, but each man felt and acted as if the duty was his own, and the result was they bravely carried the day. They had their proper organizations and they took care to keep them in good working order. Every man then felt it his duty to be in his place and to perform the part required of him. Like the old Bunker hill men, they showed their patriotism and their love of Country.

But can this be said now? I fear not. The men of the present day seem to prefer ease and comfort at home, to political activity. They keep quiet when they should be at work. They act as if they thought that what was every man's business is no man's business. They do not sufficiently stand up for their principles and their party. The result is just what might be expected—the Tories have got control and they rule the Country, both here and at Ottawa, and Tories fill every place of patronage and power. This will continue just so long as Reformers choose to lie down and let their opportunity walk over them.

There is a sure remedy for all this. Let Reformers organize—let them at once form County, Township and Ward associations, and then let them go to work with a will. Let each man understand and feel that he has got to work, and that he must not leave the work for others to do. Every man of the party must put his own shoulder to the wheel. If this is done, it requires no spirit of prophecy to foretell the success of Reformers at the next election. But to insure this they must begin work now.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Shipping Gazette, which doubted, now admits the truth of the reports concerning the treatment of British vessels in the Seine by the Prussians, and declares that the Government must instantly demand explanation and redress from Prussia.

A daring highway robbery was committed near the court-house in Brockville on Friday night week. Two men waylaid and attacked a peddlar named Reuben Brown. One of them seized him by the neck—garotted him, in fact—while the other robbed him of $107 which he had on his person. They then made off and have not since been heard of.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Hon. John Hillyard Cameron, and Col. Gray, are spoken of for the supreme Court Bench. The Guelph Mercury observes that it is to be hoped they won't elevate Gray; he would be charging mileage for going up."

Hamilton, Ontario,

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 100 per month and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

The towering elm and regal oak
Are fit to mark for lightning's stroke,
And stately is their fall.
So princes who amidst the strife
Of wars in turmoil spend their life,
Must die at duty's call.

But when a blameless princely life,
By declared shot or craven knife,
Is sacrificed to spite,
Or covetous grudge or bigot's rage,
What noble blood on history's page,
Leaves stain more dark than night.

Yet never in the scattered blood
Of victims true, great and good
Poured on the earth in vain:
Upon the spot a fairer tree
Of gracious zeal and charity
Springs forth to grace the plain!

If royal Alfred, England's pride,
By the assassin's shot had died.
On Sidney's far off shore,
Like cress leaves in a crystal vase,
His name had shed to latest days
Sweet perfume evermore.

Return thee Heller Prince, return!
The longing hearts of millions yearn
To give the welcome due:
Convince thyself that England yet
Her loyalty can ne'er forget,
And keeps allegiance true!

Brigham Young on the Extravagance of Young Women.

From a recent sermon by Brigham Young.

I do not like to charge the ladies with extravagance, but how many yards does it take to make a dress? If Brother Heber C. Kimball were here he could tell you he used to buy six yards of Calico for his wife Vilate, who was a tall woman. That used to make a dress, and it was a pretty large pattern; then it got up to seven since my recollection, then to eight, then to nine then to eleven, and I have been called upon to buy sixteen, seventeen, and eighteen yards for a dress. I know there is a cause for this. My wife will say,

"Dear me, sister so and so wears such and such a thing, and I want to look as well as she does; and you have plenty of means and you can buy it as well as not."

Well all that I have said, and my general reply is. "If I am pressed to the necessity of indulging my family in these needless articles, the responsibility must be upon themselves and upon me."

I will venture to say that my mother wore the cloak and hood that her mother belong her wore, and was [illegible] until the day of her death when she [illegible] consented to wear a cloak; and when she left this plane for the next apartment she was 49 years old, and they then went to her daughter. I do not know what has become of them. She did get the cloak worth $25, $30, $40, $50, and sit down with a child with a piece of meat in each hand to grease it all over. But now let us see, some women get a silk or satin dress and they will, perhaps while wearing it, take on a child with a piece of cheese in one hand and a piece of pork in the other; [illegible] thick, and a little [illegible] on her dress and I cannot say it does [illegible] well, just as do others [illegible] our fathers and mothers [illegible] used, and when it was [illegible] rods, spun on hand looms, and [illegible] on hand looms, and [illegible] was the wear of the family had to be [illegible], as they had to go without. But now every woman wants a sewing machine. What for? To do her sewing. Well, but she can do a hundred times as much sewing with a machine as she could by hand and she does not need a machine more than one day in two or three weeks.

"Oh yes," says she, "I want my sewing machine every day in my life."

"What are you going to do with it."

"I am going to sew."

And when the sewing machine is procured, they want a hundred times as much cloth as they used to have.

Now, too, they want a hired girl for every child, and a hired man to every cow in the yard.

Dialogues on Newspapers.

"How does it happen, neighbor B., that your children have made so much greater progress in learning and knowledge of the world, than mine? They all attend the same school, and for what I know, enjoy equal advantages."

"Do you take the newspapers, neighbor A?"

"No, sir, I do not take them myself; I sometimes borrow one just to read — Pray sir, what has newspapers to do with the education of children?"

"Why, sir, they have a vast deal to do with it, I assure you. I should as soon think to keep them from school, as to withhold them from the newspapers; it is a little school in itself. Being new every day it attracts their attention, and they are sure to pursue it. Thus, while they are storing their minds with useful knowledge they are at the same time acquiring the art of reading. I have often been surprised that men of understanding should overlook the importance of a newspaper in a family."

"In truth, neighbor B., I frequently think I should like them but I cannot afford the expense."

"Cannot afford the expense? What, let me ask, is the value of three dollars a year, in comparison with the pleasures and advantages to be derived from a well conducted newspaper? As poor as I am I would not for fifty dollars a year, deprive myself of the happiness I now enjoy of reading and hearing my children read and talk about what they have read in the newspapers. And then the reflection that they are growing up useful members of society. Oh, don't mention the expense—pay in advance every year, and you will think no more of it."

A New Wrinkle:—Necktie parties promise to be the rage this winter in Montreal. The manner in which they are managed is thus described. A necktie party is one where each lady attending [illegible] bow or necktie of the same material dress she wears. The bows are [illegible] the place where the party is to be [illegible] placed in a bag. When the guests arrive each man must go to the bag, and take a necktie, and it is his duty to wait upon the lady during the evening, who wears the dress corresponding in material with the necktie which he takes from the bag. It is desirable for the ladies to all wear different patterns of a necktie party.

Mere Possibility.—"James, my lad, [illegible] the gals. You can see [illegible] just such a critter as [illegible] the door step on [illegible] would just go [illegible] If I hadn't been so [illegible] dad might've been in California [illegible] mines, my son."

CALOMEL or MERCURY.

In RADWAY'S PILLS you have one medicine that will secure quicker, more thorough and better results than will be given in from three or more different prescriptions of the medical practitioner. As a proof of this—You are seized with a Bilious attack! Doctor present Blue Pills or Calomel; near, some Drastic Aloetic Pill or Powders to work off the effects of the blue Pill: this prostrates you, and a long illness sets in, or a gentle shattered, whereas ONE DOSE OF RADWAY'S PILLS will do all the work that the three or more prescriptions are given for, without running any risk from mercurializing or salivating the system.

RADWAY'S PILLS.

In RADWAY'S PILLS all the true principle of purgatives is secured—not alone to the office of dismissing the faeces and excrements from the bowels but those humors that are absorbed or stopped in their passage through the Skin, Mucous Lungs, and all excreting and secreting functions; for if those excrementious portions belonging to the skin, liver, lungs, Kidneys, are interrupted in their escape, they become products of decay and decomposition, and must be passed from the living body through their proper channels hence the prompt qualities of RADWAY'S PILLS extend to the secretions of the skin, KIDNEYS, LIVER &c.; whereas not one of the numerous pills claim to act beyond the all Wasting, Scrofulous, and Eruptive Disease like Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Throat, Mercurial Rheumatism, Kidneys, Bladder.

NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE

THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent establishes a new principle of Cure of all Chronic Disease and proves to the medical world that Consumption and other scrofulous diseases are curable as fact has been demonstrated in over

Three Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption,

TWO CASE OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION

Dr. Radway, three years since, published to the world his analysis of the Blood in the several stages of Consumption, showing in every stage, that where tubercles become deposited in the Lungs and other organs, as in the Kidneys, Liver, Spleen, Bronchial Glands, Intestines, establishes Consumption and these organs. The Blood is thin, weak, pale watery, and is deficient of such constituents as Iron, Albumen, Fibrine and the rich red coloring discs of the Blood Corpuscles. In the absence of these constituents in the Blood, the Blood is exposed to all kinds of disease, and wherever there is inflammation, it deposits tubercles and decomposition, it has not the power to hold in solution its natural constituents and Ulcers, sores, Tumors, Cancers and Virulent Humors are formed, the presence of which causes inflammation, gathering, and consequent suppuration.

The reader, is the true cause of the formation of Tubercles and Consumption. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory of the cause of Consumption and its kindred diseases and prepared the Radway's Resolvent to supply the Blood with such constituents it was deficient of, in these conditions of system and to give it the nourishment and strength to hold its natural consistencies in solution. Dr. Radway's theory was published in England, France, Germany, and America, and was seized upon by the scientific men of both hemispheres. From his text medical books have been since published by medical writers, claiming to have discovered the cause of Consumption, but have failed to produce the remedy to cure. Dr Radway was the first to advance this theory, and the first and only discoverer of a medicine that will cure. In Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent the public have a remedial agent that will cure Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs, Bronchial, Kidneys, Bladder, Wounds, Throat, Glands, and Urinary Organs.

In all Wasting Discharges, such as Involuntary Loss of Sperm, Emissions Weakness of the Genital Glands, Leucorrhea and all Uterine difficulties, Gravel, Lime Stone, Brick Dust, Uric Acid, and Calculous Deposits, the Sarsaparillian Resolvent will surely [illegible] Diabetes, [illegible] Sores, &c., in [illegible] in its many forms, it [illegible] medicine [illegible]

TESTIMONIAL.

The following letter is from a highly-gifted lady, well known in the circles of our best society:—

LAFAYETTE, Feb 28, 1868.

I have much confidence in your RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT. Having been drugged for the last four months with MERCURY AND IODIDE OF POTASH, I resorted, at all events, to try it, and took TWO TEASPOONFULS, three times a day, as directed. It is not now FIVE MONTHS since I commenced its use. To-day there is not a BLOTCH, spot, blemish, or definition of any kind on my person.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia tooth ache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is last superseding all other preparations of the kind

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—"I have used Dr. A. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trio, and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subsiding the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedials for these complaints."

Dr A. W. Belding, of Knowleaville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. McIver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brabadin, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lassack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400 I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

Ayer's Cathartic Pill,
For all the purposes of a Family Physic.

Perhaps no one pill is in universal request, or is considered, as a cathartic, more generally necessary to the health of all classes, at this season, than a safe and reliable purgative pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compositions. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish the a. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh, and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera, to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Lowness and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for most cases, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pain in the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in no-wise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the same districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

WILSON, BOWMAN & CO.,
Hamilton, Ontario,
MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SRWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Former's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

HUMBUG EXPOSED.

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers and the public generally, particularly those intending to buy Furs, NOT TO RETAIN their orders, as there never was a better chance to select Furs than at my store. The stock consists of my own manufacture, and of nothing but the real article. I have none, nor every had any of the so called German Mink, French Seal, Sea Otter, British Sable, and numerous other high sounding, fictitious names, by which trashy imported articles are disposed of at fabulous prices. Is it not also true that Russian and Western Mink, being colored, is disposed of as Canada Mink? Goods made up for wholesale trade are of inferior quality.

Whether my own manufacture compares favorably with city manufactures, the following will show for itself. It was my own workmanship which secured to Mr. Mulver, of Montreal, the First Prize for a set of Ladies' Furs, at the exhibition in 1868, held in the Grand Trunk Sheds at Montreal, against the following competitors:—Messrs Greene & Sons, Brabuly, Henderson, Brown, and several others, Mr. F. W. Lessack, of New York, being one of the Judges for Furs. The same Lady's set was sold to a Baltimore lady for the handsome sum of nearly $400. I believe myself capable of doing now, as I did then.

An Examination of my Stock is solicited.

The Highest Price Paid for RAW FURS.

Christmas Carol.

Oh! the greetings
And the meetings
That are dear, kind friends,
Oh! the pleasure
That is near, kind friends.
Oh, the happy merry times,
And the ring ng Christmas chimes,
When our hearts shall beat in rhymes,
Without fear, kind friends.

Christmas morning
At the dawning
Of the d-y, and friends;
Bells are ringing,
Children singing
Bright and gay kind friends.
And despite the winter's snow,
Christmas trees are all in blow,
Loaded down by hands, we know,
Sweet as May, kind friends.

Oh! the glory
Of the story
Of the morn, kind friends,
(Blessed favor!)
When the Saviour
Good, was born, kind friends.
When he left his home on high,
Up above us in the sky,
And came down for you and I,
Christmas morn, kind friends.

Selections.

The Dark Hours.

"I can't stand it any longer, Jane, I'll go out and perhaps something will turn up for us.

"It's a cold night, Robert."

"Cold, you! But it's not much colder outside than in. It would have been much better for you if you had married John Truman." he said bitterly.

"Don't say that, Robert, I've never regretted my choice."

"Not even now, when there is not a loaf of bread in the house for you and the children?"

"Not even now, Robert. Don't be discouraged. God has not forsaken us. Perhaps sun down upon us to-morrow."

Robert Brice shook his head despondingly.

"You are more hopeful than I, Jane. Day after day I have been in search of employment. I have called at fifty places only to receive the same answer everywhere."

Just then little Jimmy, who had been asleep woke up.

"Mother, I'm pleaded, "won't you give me a piece of bread? I am so hungrey."

"There is no bread, Jimmy darling," said the mother with an aching heart.

"When will there be some," asked the child piteously.

Tears came into the mother's eyes. She knew not what to say.

"Jimmy, I'll buy you some bread, said the father, hoarsely, and he seized his hat and went to the door.

His wife clutched him by the arm upon his sleeve. She saw the look in his eyes, and she feared to what act desperation might lead him.

"Remember Robert," she said solemnly "It is hard to starve, but there are things that are worse."

He shook off her hand, but not roughly, and without a word passed out.

Out in the cold streets! They would be their only home next. For a brief time longer he had the shelter of a cheerless room in a cold tenement house, but the rent would become due at the end of the month, and he had nothing to meet it.

Robert Brice was a mechanic, competent and skilful. Three years since he lived in a country village where his expenses were moderate, and he found no difficulty in meeting them. But in an evil hour he grew tired of his village home and removed to the city. Here he vainly hoped to do better. For a while he met with good success, but he found his tenement house, in which he was obliged to live, a poor substitute for the neat cottage which he had occupied in the country. He saw his mistake, but was too proud to go back.

"Of course I can't have as good accommodations here as in the country," he said, "but it is something to live in, and be in the midst of things."

"I'd rather be back again," said his wife; "somehow the city doesn't seem like home; there I used to run in and take tea with my neighbor, and have a pleasant social time; here I know scarcely anybody."

"You'll get used to it after a while." said her husband.

She did not think so, but did not like to complain.

But a time of great depression came, and with it a suspension of business enterprise. Work ceased for Robert Brice and many others. If he had been in his old home he could have turned his hands to something else, and at the worst could have borrowed of his neighbors till better times. But the friendly relations arising from neighborhood do not exist in the city to the same extent as in the country. So day by day he went to seek work, only to find himself one of the large number, all of whom were doomed to disappointment. If he had been alone, he could have got along somehow but it was a sore trial to come to a cheerless room and pale wife and hungry children with no relief to offer them.

When on that Christmas eve Robert Brice went into the street, he hardly knew how he was going to redeem the promise he had made little Jimmy. He was absolutely penniless and had been so for three days. There was nothing he was likely to find to do that night.

"I will pawn my coat," he said at last, "I cannot see my wife and children starve."

It was a well worn overcoat, and that cold winter night he needed something more to keep him warm. Weakened by enforced fasting, he was more sensitive to the cold, and shivered as he walked along the pavement.

"Yes," he said "my coat must go. I know not how I shall get along with out it, but I cannot see the children starve before my eyes."

He was not in general an envious man, but when he saw well fed citizens buttoned up to the throat in warm overcoats, provided with present for happy children at home, while his were starving, he suffered some bitter thoughts upone the inequality of fortune's gifts to come to his mind.

Why should they be so happy—he so miserable!

There was a time, he remembered it well, when he to suffered not the Christmas to pass without buying some little gift for Jimmy and Agnes. How little he dreamed then that they would ever want bread.

There was one man, shorter than himself, warmly clad, who passed him with hands thrust deep into the pockets of overcoat. There was a pleasant smile on his face. He was doubtless thinking of the happy circle at home.

Robert knew him as a rich merchant, whose ample warehouse he had often passed. He had applied to this man only two days before for employment and had been refused. It was, perhaps, the thought of the wide difference between them, so far as outward circumstances went, that led Robert Brice to follow him.

After a while, the merchant—Mr. Grime—drew his handkerchief safely from his pocket. As he did so, he did not perceive that his pocket-book came with it and fell to the sidewalk.

He did not perceive it, but Robert did His heart leaped into his mouth, and a sudden thought entered his mind. He hung quickly down and picked up the pocket-book. He raised his eyes hastily to see if the movement was noticed. It was not. The merchant went on, unheeding his loss.

"This will buy bread for my wife and children," thought Robert instantly.

A vision of the comfort which the money would bring that cheerless room, lighted up his heart for an instant, but then, he was not dishonest, there came another thought. The money was not his, much as he wanted it.

"But I cannot see my wife and children starve," he thought again. "If it is wrong to keep the money God will pardon the offence. He will understand my motive."

All this was sophistry, and he knew it. In a moment he felt it to be so. There were some things worse than starvation. It was his wife who had said this just before he had come out.—Could he meet her gaze when he returned with food so obtained?"

"I've lived honest so far," he thought; "I won't turn thief now."

It was with an effort he came to this decision, for all the while there was before his eyes that vision of a cheerless home, and he could hear Jimmy vainly asking for food. It was with an effort that he stepped forward and placed his hand on the merchant's shoulder, and extended the hand that held the pocket-book.

"Thank you," said the merchant, turning round, "I hadn't perceived my loss."

"You dropped it when you took your handkerchief."

"And you saw it and picked it up. I am much obliged to you.

"You have reason to be" said Robert in a low voice. "I came near keeping it."

"That would have been dishonest." said Mr. Grimes. his tone slightly altering.

"Yes, it would; but it's hard on a man to be honest when he is penniless, and wife and children without a crust."

"Surely you and your family are not in that condition?" said the merchant earnestly.

"Yes," said Robert, "it is too true."

"Am I you are out of work?"

"For two months I have vainly sought for work. I applied to you two days since."

"I remember you now. I thought I had seen you before. You still want work?"

"I should very grateful for it."

"A porter left me yesterday. Will you take his place for twelve dollars a week?"

"Thankfully, sir. I would for half that."

"Then come to-morrow morning, or rather to-morrow is a holiday the day succeeding. Meantime take this for your present necessities."

He drew from his pocket-book a bank-note, and put it in Robert's hand.

"It's fifty dollars!" said Robert in amazement.

"I know it. The pocket-book contains a thousand dollars. But for you I should have lost the whole. I wish you a merry Christmas."

"It will indeed, be a merry Christmas," said Robert with emotion. "God bless you, sir. Good night!"

"Good night!"

Jane waited for her husband, in the cold and cheerless room, which for a few days longer she might call her home.

"Do you think father will bring some bread?" said little Jimmy, as he nestled in her lap.

"I hope so darling," she said; but her heart misgave her. She feared it was a delusive hope.

An hour passed—there was a step on the stairs—her husband's. It could not be, for this was a cheerful, elastic step, coming up two stairs at a time. She looked eagerly to the door.

Yes, it was he. The door opened. Robert, radiant with joy, entered with a basket full of substantial provisions.

"Have you got some bread, father?" asked Jimmy, hopefully.

"Yes, Jimmy, some bread and meat from a restaurant, and here's a little and super. There's a little wood left. Jane. Let's have a bright fire and a comfortable meal, for please God, this shall be a merry Christmas."

"How did it happen? Tell me Robert.

So Robert told his wife, and soon a bright fire lit up the before cheerless room: and there were four happy hearts that waited in joyful hope for the dawn of a "Merry Christmas Day."

The next week they moved to a better home. They have never since known what it is to want. Robert found a firm friend in the merchant, and has an account in the saving bank, and has reason to remember, with a grateful heart God's goodness on that Christmas Eve.

LITTLE BROTHERS.—Sisters, do not turn off your younger brothers, as if they were always in the way and any service which they might ask of you were a burden. Perhaps the hour may come when, over a coffin that looks stranger than you thought, and over a pale brow whose often half unwittingly and perhaps with a petulant rush you parted the hair, you bland with blinding tears and sobs that shake your very soul, while remorseful memory has been busy with the bygone hours. You wish then that when he came and asked you to help him in his play, or to help him on your lan because he wanted to see, you had laid aside your books and made the little heart glad.

"Who Saw The Steer?"

The richest thing of the season, came off the other day in the neighborhood of the market. The greenest Jonathan imaginable, decked out in a slouched hat, a long blue frock, and a pair of cowhide shoes big as grandolas, with a huge whip under his arm, stalked into a billiard saloon where half a dozen persons were improving the time in trundling round the ivories and after recovering from his first surprise at the singular aspect of the room, inquired if "any of 'em had seen a stray steer," affirming that "the blasted critter got away as he came through town 'tother day, and he hadn't seen nothin' on him since." The bloods denied all knowledge of the animal in question, and with much sly winking at each other, proceeded to gull him with all the coolness of city heartfelt manner. He watched the game with much interest, as he had evidently never seen nor heard of anything of the kind before, and created much amusement by his demonstrations of applause whenever a good shot was made—"Jerusalem!" being a favorite ejaculation. At last he made bold to request the priviledge of trying his skill, when he set the crowd in a roar by his awkward movements. However, he gradually got his hand in, and played as well as could be expected for a greenhorn. All hands now began to praise him, which so elated him that he actually began to think himself a second Phelan, and offered to bet a dollar with his opponent, which, of course, he lost. The loss and the laugh so irritated him that he offered to play another game and bet two dollars, which he pulled out of a big roll—for it seems his cattle had sold well and he was quite flush. This bet he also lost, as the fool might have known he would, when, mad as a March hare, he pulled out a fifty spot, the largest bill he had, and offered to bet that on another game. The crowd mustered round and raised money enough to cover it, and at it they went again, when, by some strange turn of luck, the greeny won. He now offered to put up the hundred he had won, against another hundred, of course, he could not blunder into another game, so they could now win back what they had lost, and fleece the fellow out of his own roll besides; so they sent out for a famous player, who happened to have money enough to bet with; another game was played which Jonathan won. Another hundred was raised and bet and I won, and it was not until he had blundered through half a dozen games, and, by some unaccountable run of luck, won them all, draining the pockets of his opponents of about four hundred dollars, that they began to smell a very large "mice." When everybody got tired of playing, gawky pulled his frock on over his head, took his whip under his arm and walked quietly out, turning round at the door and remarking: "Gentleman, if you should happen to see anything of that steer, I wish you'd let me know." At last accounts they had not seen anything of the steer, but they came to the conclusion that they had seen the elephant.

Keeping Ones Eyes Open.

Nobody is more like an honest man than a thorough rogue. When you see a man with a great deal of religion displayed in a shop window, you may depend upon it, he keeps a very small stock of it within. Do not choose your friend by his looks; han tsome shoes pinch the feet. Don't be fond of cum sliments; remember, "Thank you puss, and thank you puss," killed the cat. Don't believe the man who talks most; for mewing cats are very seldom good mousers. By no means put yourself in another's power if you put your thumb between two grinders, they are apt to bite. Drink nothing without seeing it; sign nothing without reading it, and make sure it means no more than it says. Don't go to law unless you have nothing to lose: lawyers houses are built on fools heads. In any business, never wade into water where you cannot see the bottom. Put no dependence upon the label of a bag; and count money after your own kin. See the sack open before you buy what is in it; for he who trades in the dark asks to be cheated. Keep clear of the man who does not value his own character. Beware of every man who swears, he who would blaspheme his Maker, would make no bones of lying or stealing Beware of no man more than of yourself, we carry our worst enemies within us. When a new opinion or doctrines comes before you, do not bite till you know whether it is bread or stone; and do not be sure that the gingerbread is good because of the gilt on it. Never shout hallo! till your are quite out of the wood, and never cry fried fish till they are caught in the net. There's always time enough to boast, wait a little longer. Don't throw away dirty water till you have got clean; keep on scraping the roads till you can get better work: for the poorest pay is better than being out of employment. Always give up the road to bulls and madmen, and never fight with a coal-heaver, nor contend with a base character for they will be sure to blacken you.

Neither trust nor contend,
Nor lay wagers nor lend,
And you may depend
You'll have peace to the end.
—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

MAKING FRIENDS.

A fine Newfoundland dog and a mastiff had a quarrel over a bone, or some other trifling matter. They were fighting on a bridge, and being blind with rage, as is often the case, over they went into the water.

The banks were so high that they were forced to swim some distance before they came to a landing place. It was very easy for the Newfoundland dog; he was as much at home in the water as a seal. But not so with poor Bruce. He struggled and tried his best to swim, but made little headway.

Old Bravo, the Newfoundland, had reached the land, and turned to look at his old enemy. He saw plainly that his strength was fast failing, and that he was likely to drown.

So what should he do but plunge in, seize him gently by the collar, and keeping his nose above water, tow him safely into port.

It was curious to see the two dogs look at each other as soon as they shook their wet coats. Their glances said plainly as words: "We will never quarrel any more."

The navigation of the Thames is obstructed by ice.

The report that a commission is to be sent from England to the United states to settle the fishery question is false. There is nothing to settle.

NOBLE UTTERANCES.

Governor Buckingham, of Connecticut, recently uttered the following sentiments: "It is easier for me to abstain than to drink. If I should indulge in drinking, I am afraid I could not stop at the line which many may call temperate, but should become a slave to the habit, and with others of strong nerve and truer purpose, go down to a drunkard's grave. If I indulge I am not safe. If I abstain, my child will not be cursed with a drunken father. We talk of the purity and dignity of human nature and of relying upon our self-respect for security; but there is not degradation so low that a man will not sink into, and no crime so hellish that he will not commit when he is drunk. There is nothing so base, so impure, so dishonest, so corrupt, that a man will not do when under the control of an-ed appetite. Safety is to be found in not yielding ourselves to that law. But it could be proved conclusively to my own mind that I could drink and never be injured, yet with my views on the subject, it would be my duty to abstain. I could not be certain, but others seeing me drink, might be influenced to drink also and being unable to stop, pass on the path of the drunkard. My example would in that case be evil. But I ask, am I my brother's keeper? Yes, I am responsible for my influence, and lest it shall be evil, I am under a high, moral and religious obligation, to deny myself that which may not injure me, but will injure him. If I neither taste, nor touch, nor handle, nor countenance, then my example will not lead others to become drunkards."

The Pass of Mont Conis.

The triumphs of peace are not altogether at an end in Europe. A despatch announces that the Alps have been pierced through, and that the workmen from both ends of the Mont Benis tunnel joined in congratulations upon the completion of the great work.

Between Susa in Piedmont and St. Jean de Maurienne in Savoy, is one, not of the highest, but of the most famous passes of the Alps long known in the history of war, but henceforth from to-day to be celebrated as the scene of one of the greatest triumphs in peace of that engineering "which knows no impossibility." Where the Graian and the Cottian Alps meet there is a high table land nearly 7,000 feet high with a peak springing up to 11,754 feet high. This is the Monte Cleridio of the Italians, the Monte Cenis of the French. It has long barred the free way from France into Italy. Over this pass Hannibal is asserted by some historians to have worked his way with vinegar and elephants; and over this pass more certainly King Pepin, in 755, led his frankish legions to aid Pope Stephen III, against the heretical Lombard King Astolphus. The famous Catinat, Marshal of France, in the service of Louis XIV., followed in his path nine centuries later, and foreseeing that it might be needed again by his august master, the Grand Monarch, he made it by a great effort for those days passable for mules. It was the engineering triumph of his century Napoleon I, stopped by the same immovable opponent, built a road over it eighteen feet wide, for thirty miles, reaching from Lanse-le-bourg to Susa. This was the triumph of his period, purchased by an outlay of 7,000,000 francs and by indomitable labor.

The first great triumph of our later period was the building of a railroad over the mountain range. This was called for by higher requirements than those of war, for over the path were the mailed legions of Pepin had preceded the battalions of Louis and the veterans of the first Napoleon, commerce had marked its way. The railroad systems of France and Italy required a connecting link from Calais to Brindisi. There was need of an uninterrupted route for traffic. The link was formed in what is known as the Brassey-Fell or "American" three-rail line opened over the Alps in 1867. It was a brilliant achievement, not so perfectly satisfactory as to make the route really uninterrupted. The passage across the mountain was continually stopped last year by the heavy snow. It is always slow, and is liable to accident from avalanches, and the rails of course are of a different gauge from those of the lines it is meant to connect.

But a grander and climacteric triumph has been attempted, and, as the cable informs us, is now practically achieved. This is a road which opens through the seven miles of schist and quartz of the Alps a clear passage, which gives an unbroken and continuous line from Calais on the English Channel to Brindisi, in the heel of Italy—a port famous before the days of Pompeii, and marked out by the Roman builders of the Appian Way for a chief position in the world's commerce. Already the voices of the Italian excavators chanting victory in the tunnel's depths has proclaimed the approaching end to their French fellow-workmen, separated from them now only by a thin wall of fifteen feet of rock and earth. When the rails are laid through the new tunnel there will be a line of 1,300 consecutive miles of rails of the same guage running from the Channel to the Mediterranean.

MAKE HOME ATTRACTIVE.—Singing "Home, Sweet Home," and sighing for a palace and a bag of gold will not make a home happy. So bring about that desirable state of affairs, each member of the household, especially the parents, have much to do. The cultivation of a cheerful disposition and a generous forbearance is, of course indispensible; but that is not all. Young minds as well as old need employment—not work—for leisure hours, that will amuse and interest them. Story books, games, pictures, and music are the most attractive amusements, and should by all means be provided, as they may be secured at a very moderate expense. When circumstances will permit, old as well as young should engage in these home amusements. Children should understand that their parents are anxious to make them happy, and they, in turn, will reciprocate. Encourage singing. It influence is not only entertaining, but ennobling and harmonizing. If children discover a desire for music, give them a musical education as far as your means will permit. If you cannot afford a piano get an organ, or melodeon, or a violin, or even cheaper instruments. They will repay the outlay a hundred fold, by making home the center of attraction, and keeping the young, who long for amusement, under its hallowed influence, instead of driving them out to seek diversion in the haunts of the vicious and degraded. How many homes have been made desolate, by erring members, who first left its sacred precincts to find amusement or more congenial society.

DAUGHTERS.—An intelligent writer says: "Is it not possible to over-estimate the advantages which would result from men in trades and professions allowing their daughters some participation in the work of their daily lives. What girls want is a larger observation of the world, and a deeper knowledge of human nature. There are few of our merchants and manufacturers and professional men who could not largely avail themselves of the services of their educated and competent daughters: and if such services could be rendered available, it is not to much to say that a wider and more fertile social life would arise for mankind. Men's occupations would in no sense would be prejudiced, whilst women would at once find that outlet for their faculties for which many have been so long striving. A certain capacity for earning would remove the sense of dependence; a definite work would bring both health and cheerfulness, and the larger opportunities of life would give force and completeness to the mental character."

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR BUFFALO ROBES!—On Sunday evening last, Mr. Dawson Kennedy attended the Missionary services in the B. C. Church, leaving his horse, cutter, and robes in the shed attached to the church. After services he found that some one who had no fear of the higher powers, had made off with his robe, and in consequence Mr. K. had to go home without it On Monday morning, a man named Simpson entered the Black Horse, and offered a buffalo robe for the small sum of $1.50. Louis Pappa, who was in the bar, thought from the low price asked, that he had not gotten it by honest industry, and gave Chief Constable Arnot word of the transaction. Mr. Arnot took the robe from Simpson believing it to be stolen. Mr Kennedy, hearing of the affair went to see if it was his, and verified it. Mr. Arnot has now a warrant out for Simpson's arrest. The poor fellow Simpson, we understand, is so fond of whiskey, that he would break all the commandments to obtain it.

Since writing the above, we learn that Simpson is in the lock-up. Not long since he stole a Bible from Mr. Beaves and gave it for a drink. His is a sad case indeed.

TEMPERANCE.—The friends of Temperance in Ontario, have called a meeting of all who favor legal enactment, to do away with the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, in Toronto, on the 17th instant. The time chosen is opportune, as the Legislature is in session, and we sincerely hope that they may be able to devise some plan for the amelioration of this terrible evil. All Ministers of the gospel, and friends of total abstinence, are invited and the different railway lines have kindly consented to take all who wish to attend at half-fare. Any person in Peterborough who wishes to go would do well to call on Mr. Pontland for a R. R. Certificate.

FIRE.—On Sunday night, about 12 o'clock, a brick dwelling house, on the corner of Aylmer and Murray Streets, owned by Mr. Malcolm, was discovered to be on fire. Mr. Sim's family, and Mrs. W. Donnelly, who occupied the house, had been in bed a good while.—Mrs. Donnelly was first aroused by a smell of smoke, and got up to see what it was, and seeing it gave the alarm.

At first Mr. Sim's ran out partly dressed, but are long had to go away, as he was chilled so as not to be able to speak.—When the fire was first seen it was over the front door, up stairs, in a place where no person belonging to the house had been since winter set in, and hence the origin of the fire cannot be accounted for. Mr. Malcom's loss is not less than six or seven hundred dollars, perhaps more, as it is doubtful whether the walls will be of any value to repair. Mr. Sim's furniture was mostly removed, and that of Mr. Donnelly, but of course more or less damaged There was no insurance on anything. We regret therefore to find Mr. Malcom, and those who dwelt in the house have to bear all the loss.

THE WAR.

The deadly struggle is still going on around Paris. The Prussians have commenced bombarding the City, and have silenced several forts. They are also able to throw shell into the City, and last accounts represent several horses on fire by these missils Desperate efforts are being made to counteract the Prussian design of taking Paris, but hitherto without success. Present appearances foreshadow the destruction of that elegant and once notorious city, unless the generals inside surrender, which need hardly be expected.

The Raid on the Grammar Schools.

The New School Bills of Dr. Ryerson and the combination, contemplates serious changes in our grammar school system, and as a consequence, a very serious diminution in their number. With this in view, the grammar school boards shall cease to exist from and after the sixth day of July, next, and the whole grammar school business be transacted by the board of public school trustees.

The grammar schools are to be known, thereafter, as High Schools, and the programme of studies is to be arrranged by the Counci of Public Instruction, in Toronto. All know what that means. As this council has had the regulating of the grammar school worksince their formation, how is it that they have not seen the defects, if any, nor found a remedy until the present time? Have the grammar school teachers proved too untractable, so that their numbers must be dimini hed?

No high school shall be entitled to aid from the public funds, unless it shall have an average of twenty pupils. It is believed that with this clause in the new act, one half of the grammar schools would become extinct. Is this desirable? Would it be advantageous to the cause of education? Do the people of Ontario seek such a result? We may safely say that they do not. Will Mr. Read vote for such a clause or Mr. Matchett? If either should do so, we feel certain that the constituents will remember it. The maximum apportionment is fixed by the bill at $1,000 The minimum at $200. The latter sum is all that could safely be counted on for village grammar schools, under the proposed bill, would not this effectively kill them as the people in small villages, would scarcely be able to bear the increased burden thus forced upon them.

The best thing that can be done in reference to changing the present school law, would be to appoint committees of teachers to draft bills and submit them to our legislators. Nothing more mixed up or more injurious could be produced, in reference to our grammar schools, though a committee of school boys set to work to legislate for them.

If the chief superintendent would recommend an increase of grant to the grammar schools, make the classics optional, and admit the girls to those schools, and thus enable the different boards of school trustees, to employ a efficient staff of teachers, and thus draw the connecting link between our grammar schools and the university closer, he would confer a benefit on the cause of education, but the present thrust in the dark must tend to destroy rather than increase the usefulness of our grammar schools.

Persons who prefer oysters cooked in their own liquor may be interest in knowing what the fluid contains. The Journal of Microscopy says: "Open an oyster, retain the liquor in the lower or deep shell and if viewed through a microscope, it will be found to contain multitudes of small oysters, covered with shells, and swimming nimbly about, 120 of which extent but one inch. Besides these young oysters, the liquor contains a variety of animalcule and myriads of three distinct species of worms. Sometimes their light represent a bluish star about the centre of the shell, which will be beautifully luminous in a dark room.

PIGEON EXPRESS.—These birds have instincts that are almost unerring. Contrary to the general supposition, the best birds are not the parents—those which have raised—but the young birds of from eight to ten months. The prize-birds—that is, those which took first prizes at the exhibition here—are value d at 400 or 500 francs, or from $80 to $100. A gentleman who had near a hundred of these valuable pigeons, was lately sent out to Tours in a balloon, carrying thirty of these pets They are loosed with dispatches from time to time; they fly direct to the cots, and are carried back in a balloon. The despatches brought by pigeons are now photographed, being reduced in size, so that a of the length of this paragraph, can be put upon a piece of fine paper, no larger than a twenty-five cent piece in silver. With large magnifying glasses the writing can be easily read. The paper is very carefully bound around a single feather upon the body, and care must be taken to fasten it so that the tension will not inconmode the bird, or he may pause to pluck out the feather.

North Monaghan Council.

December 29th, 1870.

The Council met at 10 o'clock. Present Councillors Laing, Telly and Birney.

On the motion of Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Birney, Mr. Laing was appointed Presiding Officer.

Moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Birney, and Resolved,—"That this Council take the present as the first opportunity afforded to express their deep sorrow for the great loss occasioned by the sudden and unexpected demise of their highly respected Reeve, the late John W. Gilmour, Esq., who for lengthened periods, commencing in 1850, down to the date of his decease, filled the offices of Councillor and Reeve, discharging the duties connected therewith, in such a manner as to elicit the general approval of all classes in the municipality."

"That this be placed on the records of the Council, and that a copy be forwarded to Mrs. Gilmour, informing her of the esteem in which her late husband was held by those so long and so intimately acquainted with him, and therefore so capable of judging of his public acts, and also sympathizing with her during her severe and trying bereavement."

A communication was received from Robert and William Goodfellow, certifying that they had the qr. line between the 8th and 9th Concessions surveyed, that the sum of $11 was paid to the Surveyor and his assistants, and that the remainder of the grant would be expended in any way the Council might direct.

Orders for salary were given and left with the Clerk, also for the following sums:

Otonabee Council — General Election, &c.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

At the election for the council on the 2nd instant, Messrs. Burnham, Millar, (John) and Mather, were returned; Kindred unseated; there being no opposition to the Reeve and Deputy Reeve, Mr. Jas. Millar and Mr. Thomas Blezard, they were re-elected. At the nomination and contest considerable interest seemed to have been taken in the approaching General Election and who the probable candidate, for upper and lower houses, &c., to represent this Riding. A good reformer is wanted, none of the milk and water clan, but a clean grit, a man of intelligence, integrity and uncompromising opposition to corruption and red tapism; one not only able and willing to detect and expose the miranle of such an administration as at present rule the country, but also from capacity and practical experience able to device laws, such as a great Farming Community must flourish under. A man of the people who know their wants, and how best to provide for them. Should such a man as Mr. James Millar, of Otonabee, present himself, there would be no doubt of his being successful and of his being the right man in the right place. A more suitable man cannot be found in the County, as the members of the township and county council and all with whom he comes in contact will readily admit. Mr. Millar is a successful farmer, a consistant reformer, wise in council, and energetic in his execution. His private and public life, well known in Otonabee, prove his ability. Coming to the county, about twenty-five years ago, from the Highlands of Scotland, he commenced life in Canada as a farm laborer, and by hard work, frugality, honesty and enterprise, and superior intelligence, is now the owner of over 2,000 (two thousand acres) of good land as is in the township: that's his record. A man who can in so short a time raise himself from penury by bodily and mental energy as he has done, can also raise a county to respect and position. It is not lawyers and storekeepers we want to make laws for a farming community, such as this, no more than we want a Doctor to build a house or draw a field, but men of our own class who are thoroughly acquainted with what is requisite for our well being—men whose whole life has been spent with us, and whose ability, integrity and devotion to the country we are all familiar with, and such a man is plain James Millar, of Otonabee. In him John A. would find a tartar and the country a true friend and an able legislator. He resembles his great country man Lochell in clearness of intellect, bluntness and force of expression, sound common sense, and ability to expose what he conceives wrong, no matter where found.

Mr. Millar is not an ambitious man and may not seek after such honors, but we would suggest to him to reflect on the duty he owes the public and society, generally, and this county in particular where he has amassed abundance for self and family. We think a county in which he has been so very successful, should receive the benefit of his fertile and comprehensive intellect, and fully matured judgement, and we are confident, honor to himself and benefit to the public would be the result. Reformers, be up and doing. Let committees be appointed all over this county and not let the enemy find us asleep and steal a march on us. The time is not very long till our strength will be put to the test. Let us show a Herculian muscle worthy of our cause and timely preparation alone can do it. Let a deputation wait on him, and bring him forward. With such a man as Mr. Millar we have nothing to fear.

NEMO.

Otonabee, 6th January, 1871.

The bark Coromandel, from Philadelphia to Liverpool, is ashore near Queenstown. Crew safe and a portion of the cargo will be saved.

Pandash P. O., Cardiff.

Mr. Editor,—

DEAR SIR,—Since the decease of W. C. Armstrong, Esq., Crown Land Ag't, that office has been left vacant until the appointment of Mr. D. Anderson, who now fills it; which appointment appears to give much satisfaction to the settlers on the B. R. Mr. Anderson, I am satisfied, will do all that lies in his power to further the settlement of the lands.

Much inconveniance and disappointment was felt by the vacancy of the office, many persons who were desirous of being located were obliged to return home disappointed.

The Agent, I understand, purposes to reside at the Pandash P. O., in Cardiff.—Contrary to the general aspect on the B. R., much good land is to be found in the Townships of Cardiff and Monmouth.—Taking an opportunity of examining some of the lands in these Townships in company with the Agent, I was much surprised at seeing so much fine lands unsettled. Intending settlers would do well to examine those lands rather than go to some of those far off "Gardens of Eden." The Agent expressed his satisfaction of these lands. The settlers appear to be prosperous and well satisfied. I will offer no apology for this trespass on your valuable space, knowing you desire to see the settlement of the New Country.

Yours Truly,
A TRAVELLER.

—Correspondents represent that their is great mortality among children in Paris. They are dying in hundreds and thousands. One writer says that in the neighborhood of Pere-la-Chaise, Montparnasse one can hardly take fifty steps without meeting a tiny coffin, wrapped in a cloth of white wool. Many of these innocent little ones go to their last resting-place unaccompanied, except by the two carriers; the father is at the ramparts, and the mother is standing wearily outside the butcher's shop or at the municipal "cantine." Sometimes half a dozen or so relations or neighbors follow the procession of the humble victim, and this is what is heard said: "I saw it born in October last, and a fine, well-made boy it was I" "What did it die of then?" "Of nothing. The mother had no milk; there are no more nurses, and the ewes are all sent to the slaughter; oh! I try and rear a child in a besieged town!"—N. Y. Mail.
